"The first immunity statute enacted by the Congress was in 1857 (11 Stat 155) and it immunized witnesses before Congressional committees and banned the use of such testimony in subsequent criminal proceedings. The abuses which occurred under that statute caused Congress in 1862 to repeal that part of the statute which granted the complete constitutional immunity. However, the decision in 1892 in Counselman v. Hitchcock (142 U.S. 547, 12 S Ct 195) ruled that the remaining partial protection did not equate the constitutional privilege and therefore was not a sufficient substitute."

ABSOLUTE IMMUNITY

PL 600 seeks to overcome this inadequacy by providing absolute immunity from prosecution "in any court," while at the same time avoiding the danger of abuses by confining immunity to cases involving the national security and making the grant of immunity difficult to obtain. Such grants may only be made by U.S. District Courts upon request of Congress or request of the U.S. Attorney acting with the approval of the Attorney General.

As of December, 1955, PL 600 had been invoked only twice. In both cases, grants of immunity were sought and obtained by the Department of Justice, not by Congressional committees. In both cases, the witnesses granted immunity still refused to testify, were tried and convicted of contempt of court, and appealed. Resumes of the two cases:

- William Ludwig Ullmann -- Ordered before grand jury in New York Nov. 3, 1954, where he refused to testify regarding allegation of espionage; Justice Department application for grant of immunity granted by District Court in New York Feb. 2, 1955; Ullmann March 8 again refused to answer questions before grand jury, was convicted of contempt the same day and sentenced to six months in jail; on appeal, the Circuit Court of Appeals April 4 upheld contempt conviction; Supreme Court June 6 granted writ of certiorari, and Dec. 6 heard arguments on the case; Ullmann free on bail pending outcome.
- Edward J. Fitzgerald -- Ordered before grand jury in New York July 20, 1955, where he refused to answer questions regarding allegations of espionage; Justice Department application for grant of immunity granted July 25; Fitzgerald July 29 again refused to answer questions before grand jury; tried and convicted of contempt of court and sentenced Aug. 18 to six months in jail; on appeal to Circuit Court of Appeals and awaiting outcome of Ullmann case; Fitzgerald free on bail.

Legislation in 1955

The House March 15 passed without objection a bill (HR 780) to speed up contempt proceedings against recalcitrant Congressional witnesses. The bill would permit any Congressional committee, by majority vote of its members, to seek a U.S. district court order directing a witness to appear and testify before the committee. Failure to obey such a court order would be punishable as contempt of court. The bill was similar to one passed by the House in 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 332.) Neither measure was acted on by the Senate.

Citations in 1955

Hoag Case

Diantha D. Hoag, a coil winder for the Westinghouse Electric Corp. at Buffalo, N.Y., appeared Aug. 6, 1954 before the Senate Government Operations Permanent Investigations Subcommittee investigating Communist infiltration of defense plants. After saying she never had been engaged in espionage or sabotage activities, Miss Hoag refused to answer further questions, claiming protection under the First and Fifth Amendments.

The full Committee Jan. 5, 1955, voted to recommend that she be cited for contempt. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.), outgoing Chairman, termed it a "very important test case" involving the question of whether a witness, having answered a general question, did or did not waive protection against self-incrimination in refusing to answer specific questions in a related area. McCarthy said as many as 25 other witnesses before his Subcommittee in 1954 had claimed protection in similar fashion.

Miss Hoag was indicted June 21 for contempt of Congress. Trial was fixed for federal District Court, District of Columbia, Feb. 20, 1956.

Starobin Case

Joseph Starobin, writer for the Daily Worker, appeared April 19, 1955, before the Judiciary Internal Security Subcommittee, then investigating the activities of Harvey M. Matusow, former Communist and paid government witness. Starobin, asked if he had been a Communist during the preceding 25 years, refused to answer, pleading First and Fifth Amendments. Subcommittee Counsel J.G. Sourwine said Starobin had waived his right to protection, by virtue of his prior sworn testimony in court acknowledging membership in the Communist party. Citation for contempt followed.

Sacher Case

Harry Sacher, New York attorney, also appeared April 19 before the Internal Security Subcommittee. Sacher did not invoke First or Fifth Amendments, but did refuse to answer questions concerning alleged Communist party membership and associations on grounds they were not "relevant and pertinent to some legislative purpose." Citation for contempt followed.

James Case

Eugene C. James, secretary-treasurer of the International Laundry Workers Union (AFL), appeared March 29 before the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Pension and Welfare Funds Subcommittee, then investigating the use of union welfare funds. James was asked to explain what had happened to $900,000 turned over by his Union's welfare fund to a New Jersey insurance broker. James invoked the Fifth Amendment. Citation for contempt followed.

Gojack Case

John T. Gojack, one-time official of the United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America (Ind.), appeared Feb. 28 and March 1 before the House Un-American Activities Committee, then investigating Communist activities in the Fort Wayne, Ind., area. Questioned concerning alleged membership in the Communist party, Gojack refused to answer, claiming protection of the First Amendment. Said he: "The Constitution does not give this Committee the right to inquire into any of my beliefs, any of my connections, any ideas I may have." Citation for contempt followed.

Court Actions in 1955

Federal courts ruled on several cases in 1955, involving citations for contempt of Congress in prior years. The major decisions:

The Supreme Court May 23 set aside contempt convictions of Julius Emspak and Thomas Quinn, officials of the United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America (Ind.), and of Philip Bart, general manager of "The Daily Worker." They had been cited for contempt in 1950 after refusing to answer questions before the House Un-American Activities Committee. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VI, 1950, pp. 423ff.) The Court ruled the men had invoked the protection of the Fifth Amendment validly, but did not rule on the applicability of the First Amendment, also invoked by the witnesses.

Federal District Judge Edward Weinfeld July 27 dismissed indictments for contempt of Congress against Corliss Lamont, author and lecturer; Abraham Unger, attorney; and Albert Shadowitz, former government worker. They had been cited for contempt in 1954, after refusing to answer questions before the Senate Government Operations Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, claiming protection of the First Amendment and challenging the Subcommittee's authority. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 364ff.) Dismissal was based on the technical grounds that the indictment was "barren of any allegation or fact from which the authority of the Permanent Subcommittee to conduct an inquiry can be ascertained." The Justice Department said it would appeal the case.

FOUR COUNTS DISMISSED

Federal District Judge Lester L. Cecil Oct. 3 dismissed a four-count indictment for contempt of Congress against Robert M. Metcalf, an Antioch College professor. Appearing before a House Un-American Activities Subcommittee in September, 1954, Metcalf admitted prior membership in the Communist party but refused, on "moral grounds," to give the names of fellow members. The full Committee Nov. 17, 1954, voted to cite him for contempt. As provided in cases arising when Congress is not in session, the Speaker of the House Dec. 7 certified the citation to the U.S. District Attorney. As in the Lamont case, dismissal was based on technical grounds that "the indictment is insufficient by reason of fact that it does not allege all the essential elements of the crime."

Federal District Judge George H. Boldt March 15 dismissed five of six counts in an indictment for contempt against George Tony Starkovich, cited for refusing to answer questions before the House Un-American Activities Committee. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 364ff.) Two of the five counts dismissed alleged that Starkovich had obstructed the inquiry and abused and villified the Committee. Boldt ruled that the personal conduct of a witness could not be considered a basis for contempt charges under existing law.

GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

Federal District Judge Joseph C. McGarraghy Nov. 18 fined author Harvey O'Connor $500 and gave him a suspended one-year jail sentence for contempt of Congress. O'Connor had refused to answer questions before the Senate Government Operations Permanent Investigations Subcommittee during a 1953 inquiry into the State Department's overseas library program. O'Connor, whose books were used in the program, pleaded protection of the First Amendment, saying "my writings, books, and my political opinions are of no legitimate concern to the Subcommittee." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 307.) Judge McGarraghy ruled that Congress had the right to find out whether books used in the information program were written by Communists; hence, "the abridgement of the defendant's rights under the First Amendment" was justified. O'Connor said he would appeal his conviction.

Lawrence Baker Arguimbau was found guilty of contempt by Federal District Judge James W. Morris Nov. 2 and given suspended sentences of one year in jail and a $500 fine. A former Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor, Arguimbau on April 21, 1953 had told the House Un-American Activities Committee he had been a Communist in 1937–50 but refused to name his Party associates. He did not plead the Fifth Amendment but contested the validity of the resolution that created the Un-American Activities Committee. Judge Morris upheld the Committee's right to question Arguimbau.

CORPORATE, EXCISE TAXES

HR 4259 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 69) Feb. 22, 1955.

- Passed by the House Feb. 25 by a 242-175 roll-call vote. (See p. 140.)
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 36) March 1.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, March 15 by voice vote. (For roll-call votes, see p. 119.)
- Conference report (H Rept 305) approved by voice vote of the Senate March 25; by a 387-8 roll-call vote in the House March 30. (See p. 144.)

P.L. 18 -- Signed into law March 30.

Congress in 1955 extended for one year the existing rates on corporation and certain excise taxes, but not until a Democratic effort to cut personal income taxes was narrowly defeated.

The House approved a $20 income tax credit for each person entitled to a personal exemption, but the Senate turned it down. The Senate also defeated -- by a six-vote margin -- an attempt to couple a smaller income tax cut with a longer extension of corporation and excise rates and with repeal of several tax benefits included in the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Later the House agreed to drop its income tax credit. Excise and corporation rates were due to decrease on April 1 unless Congress enacted a law extending them. Faced with the prospect of heavy federal revenue losses if HR 4259 were not enacted by March 31, Democratic leaders gave up the fight and agreed to the bill requested by the Administration.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, the Revenue Act of 1955 extended until April 1, 1956:

The 52 percent corporate tax rate (scheduled to drop to 47 percent).

Existing excise tax rates on distilled spirits, beer, wine, cigarettes, gasoline, automobiles, motorcycles, trucks, buses, truck trailers, auto parts and accessories, and diesel and special motor fuels. (For rates, see adjoining chart.)

In July, Congress enacted a bill (HR 5647 -- PL 379) removing the excise tax from motorcycles.

Background

REFERENCES -- See "Excise Taxes" and "Revision of Internal Revenue Laws." (CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 495-97 and 476-89.)

More than $7 billion in tax cuts took effect during the first two years of the Eisenhower Administration. Most of the tax cuts were automatic -- scheduled under 1950 and 1951 Revenue Acts. About $1.4 billion in tax reductions were enacted by Congress, at the specific request of President Eisenhower, in the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

The tax reductions which became effective automatically were:

A 10 percent drop in individual income taxes, effective Jan. 1, 1954, as scheduled under the 1951 Revenue Act. Revenue loss: About $3 billion a year.

The excess-profits tax, scheduled to expire June 30, 1953, under the 1950 Revenue Act, was extended for six months at the request of President Eisenhower. It finally expired Jan. 1, 1954. Revenue loss: About $2 billion annually.

In addition, Congress in 1954 cut certain excise taxes -- over the objections of the Administration -- for an annual $1 billion revenue loss. Other excise tax reductions scheduled for April 1, 1954, under the 1951 Revenue Act were postponed for one year at the request of President Eisenhower.

In an attempt to place the defense program on a more nearly pay-as-we-go basis, Congress in 1951 approved the Revenue Act of 1951 (PL 183, 82nd Congress), which increased taxes by $5.7 billion annually. President Harry S. Truman first asked for a $16 billion increase, later reduced his request to $10 billion. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VI, 1951, p. 409.) The Act increased personal income and corporate taxes, and increased and extended excise taxes to March 31, 1954.

Another excise tax bill (HR 8224, PL 324, 83rd Congress) was passed in 1954. The measure was reported by the House Ways and Means Committee on March 4, and by March 31 had been passed by both chambers and signed by the President as the Excise Reduction Act of 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 495ff.) The Act eliminated some excise taxes, reduced others, and extended excise taxes until April 1, 1955.

1954 BILLS

The Act extended for one year excise taxes on alcoholic beverages, tobacco, vehicle fuels, and vehicles, including automotive parts and accessories. The Act reduced to 10 percent, effective April 1, 1954, the 20 percent excise tax on furs, jewelry and luggage; toilet preparations; electric light bulbs and tubes; cameras, lenses and film; leases of safe deposit boxes; and most general admission tickets exceeding 50 cents. It also reduced to 10 percent the 15 percent tax on sporting goods, mechanical pencils and lighters, transportation, local telephone and telegraph messages; and the 25 percent tax on long distance telephone calls. The act reduced to 5 percent, effective April 1, 1954, the 10 percent excise tax on home appliances such as refrigerators and freezers.

The measure retained the 20 percent excise tax on admissions to horse and dog races and cabarets and on club dues and initiations. The 11 percent excise tax on firearms, shells and cartridges was also retained.

Admissions costing 50 cents or less, admissions to school athletics (excluding post-season games), admissions to amateur civic theater performances, and admissions to non-profit museums and planetariums were exempted from excise taxes.

In the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, Congress enacted wholesale revisions of United States tax laws. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 476ff.) The law granted tax relief for both individuals and business firms, but Democratic attempts to increase taxpayers' individual exemptions were defeated. The Administration's proposal to cut taxes on dividend income received by individual stockholders was adopted in modified form. A provision permitting accelerated depreciation allowances on business and farm equipment was upheld in a Senate vote.

In both the House and Senate, Democrats lost in attempts to increase personal tax exemptions by $100 and delete dividend credits. The House vote March 18 was 204-210 on the Democrats' motion. The Senate voted June 30, 46-49, to reject a similar amendment offered by Walter F. George (D Ga.). An amendment by Wayne Morse (I Ore.) to delete the accelerated depreciation allowance was defeated, 20-60, July 1. (For voting, see CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 570-71, 568.)

PRESIDENT'S POSITION

In two messages early in 1955, President Eisenhower urged extension of corporation and excise tax rates due to drop April 1 and opposed any move to reduce taxes in 1955. He held out hope however, for a tax cut in 1956. In the messages, he told Congress:

"Last year we had a large tax cut and, for the first time in 75 years, a basic revision of federal tax laws. It is now clear that defense and other essential government costs must remain at a level precluding further tax reductions this year. Although excise and corporation income taxes must, therefore, be continued at their present rates, further tax cuts will be possible when justified by lower expenditures and by revenue increases arising from the nation's economic growth. I am hopeful that such reductions can be made next year." State of the Union Message, Jan. 6, 1955.

"However, further tax reduction remains a firm goal of this Administration, and our policy is directed to achieving both the savings in expenditures and the economic growth that will make such reductions possible.

"I hope that tax reductions will be so justified next year. If so, I shall recommend a reduction in taxes to spread the relief fairly among all taxpayers in a way which will be the most effective to relieve individual tax burdens and to increase incentive for effort and investment." Budget Message, Jan. 17, 1955.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- None. Chairman Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) introduced Feb. 18 a bill (HR 4200) to extend existing corporation and excise tax rates for one year.

On Feb. 19 Democratic members of the Committee, with the approval of Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas), voted to attach to the bill a provision granting, as of 1956, a $20 income tax reduction for every person entitled to a personal exemption.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 21 -- At a closed meeting, Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey opposed the income tax cut, saying it would reduce federal revenues about $2.3 billion over a full year. He said the tax cut proposal "is not responsible financial management" and accused the Democrats of "playing fast and loose with the welfare" of the nation.

ACTION -- The Committee voted, 16-9, Feb. 22 to report favorably a "clean bill" (HR 4259) that included the income tax provision (H Rept 69).

Fifteen Democrats and one Republican, Howard H. Baker (R Tenn.), supported the measure; nine Republicans opposed it.

PRESIDENT COMMENTS

President Eisenhower, at his Feb. 23 news conference labeled as some kind of a height in fiscal irresponsibility the Democratic proposal to cut income taxes. The President declined to say whether he would veto the pending revenue measure if the tax cut was tied to it. He also declined to give a flat answer when asked if taxes could be cut in 1956, but again expressed the hope they could be.

Floor Action

After two days of debate the House voted Feb. 25, on a 242-175 roll call, to pass the bill as reported by the Committee. (For voting, see chart, p. 140.)

Passage followed rejection of an amendment by Rep. Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) to strike out the income tax portion and defeat of a motion by Reed to recommit HR 4259 with specific instructions to delete the income tax cut.

Reed's amendment was defeated by a standing vote of 192-197; the motion to recommit was defeated on a roll-call vote of 205-210. Sixteen Democrats and 189 Republicans voted for recommittal; 205 Democrats and five Republicans voted for the income tax cut.

Debate began under a resolution (H Res 153), adopted by voice vote, that permitted only one amendment to the bill -- to strike out the income tax provision.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 4259 would have:

Granted a $20 income tax credit for each $600 personal exemption, effective Jan. 1, 1956.

Extended to April 1, 1956 the 52 percent corporation tax rate.

Extended until April 1, 1956 existing excise tax rates on distilled spirits, beer, wine, cigarettes, gasoline, automobiles, motorcycles, trucks, buses, truck trailers, auto parts and accessories, and diesel and special motor fuels.

DISPUTE OVER DEBT

DEBATE -- Feb. 24 -- Howard W. Smith (D Va.) -- "What we are proposing (by the income tax cut) is to borrow money to be paid by future generations for the purposes of reducing taxes for the present generation and I might say...to reduce the taxes for the present generation of voting age. ...we are actually...retaining the corporate and excise taxes for only one year with a retention of ...$2.8 billion; but you are reducing taxes and reducing the revenues of this country permanently by ...$2.3 billion a year."

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- "We are undertaking now to rectify the injustice of the Republican tax reduction bill of 1954 when only a small percentage of the $3 billion in reductions -- and nobody knows what it will be from the long-range angle -- goes to a small percentage of the taxpayers and in the main to the large corporations."

Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- "If the majority are honest and sincere in their belief in individual income tax reduction, why do they not propose such a cut to take effect now? The answer is...even the Democrats realize that present defense and other budget needs make such an immediate reduction unwise and irresponsible...what crystal ball permits them now to foresee the budget cuts which will justify a $2.3 billion tax reduction next January?"

John D. Dingell (D Mich.) -- "The $20 tax credit ...will help to offset the preferential tax treatment granted by the Republicans. It is a source of satisfaction to me... that five million families will be relieved from income tax liability...that 65 percent of the tax reduction benefits... will be realized by families having adjusted gross income under $5,000."

Hugh D. Scott, Jr. (R Pa.) -- "It is my conclusion, which I think is supported by evidence, that (the tax cut) is the gimmick they (the Democrats) thought of in the hope that they could buy the votes of the American people at 20 bucks a head."

INCONSISTENCY CHARGED

Feb. 25 -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- "Last year, when the deficit in the Treasury was about double what it is now, tax relief of about double the amount proposed here was advocated and urged by the Administration."

John W. Byrnes (R Wis.) -- "...the present Administration believes in action, not in a lot of unfulfilled promises. We are actually arriving at a balanced budget. That ...irritates the Democratic side of this House and that is why they want to reduce our revenues..."

Harold D. Donohue (D Mass.) -- "The $20 tax credit will extend to the taxpayers...the relief which (the President) said he hoped and planned to give them. ...this relief will expand private spending and tend to offset the depression in our economy of contracting government expenditures...this tax credit...is urgently needed to sustain an expanding economy."

Robert Hale (R Maine) -- "This measure ... would take 5 million taxpayers off the tax rolls. With the federal budget still far out of balance and the country in danger as never before, I can see no reason why 5 million people should be exempted from the necessity of paying any income taxes."

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Reed -- Eliminate the $20 income tax credit. Standing, 192-197.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 28 and March 1 on HR 4259.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 28 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey said the proposed tax cut passed by the House "can start us right back on the reckless road of inflation, with all its cruel thievery...Let us always remember that it is not the rich who need protection from inflation. It is the little folks who suffer the most when inflation takes hold." He said that "to vote a tax cut now--before we know we can afford it next year and without any indication of where the money is coming from --is nothing but an irresponsible gesture."

March 1 -- Dr. Leon H. Keyserling, Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers in the Truman Administration, called it "utterly indefensible" to contend the tax cut would be inflationary. He asserted the tax cut proposal "is not large enough nor fast enough to respond adequately to the rising threat of unemployment and national economic deficits." The best way to gain a balanced budget, he said, is to expand the economy so strongly that "reasonable levels of taxation" will bring far more revenue.

Stanley H. Ruttenberg, CIO research director, testified for the $20 income tax cut.

ACTION -- The Committee voted March 1 to delete the income tax credit and report the bill with the tax extensions requested by the Administration (S Rept 36).

The tax credit deletion was agreed to by a 9-6 vote, with Democratic Sens. Harry Flood Byrd (Va.), Committee Chairman, and Walter F. George (Ga.) joining seven Republicans to strike out the cut.

Also defeated in Committee were plans to:

Make the $20 reduction effective July 1, 1956, instead of Jan. 1, 1956, and continue the corporation rate levy to July 1, 1956, instead of April 1, 1956.

Increase personal exemptions to $650 in 1956 and to $700 in 1957.

Continue the 52 percent corporation levy indefinitely.

Provide a $10 tax cut in 1956, $15 in 1957, and $20 in 1958.

In submitting minority views on the report, the six Committee Democrats who had favored the $20 credit outlined a new proposal to cut income taxes, extend excise and corporate tax rates, and repeal three provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 in order to boost federal revenue. Their proposal was to:

Grant a $20 tax cut for the head of each household and a $10 deduction for each dependent, except for the taxpayer's wife or husband. Couples who benefited by more than $20 by using a joint return would not get an additional $20 credit.

Extend existing corporate and excise tax rates to July 1, 1957.

Repeal the accelerated depreciation provision of the 1954 tax bill, effective March 9.

Repeal the dividend credit and dividend exclusion provision of the 1954 tax bill, effective July 1.

Repeal a provision in the 1954 bill which permitted companies to establish reserves for future business expenses and charge them off against current income.

The minority report estimated that adoption of the proposal would result in a net gain to the government up to July 1, 1957, of $357 million in revenue. Repeal of the dividend and depreciation provision, the report said, would raise revenue slightly more than $1.6 billion while the income tax cut would decrease revenue by slightly more than $1.2 billion.

In addition, Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas), one of the six Senators signing the report, said repeal of the reserve provision in the 1954 bill would save the Treasury about $1 billion in 1955.

Secretary Humphrey commented on the Democratic proposal March 10, when he testified before the House Ways and Means Committee in favor of a bill (HR 4725) to repeal the 1954 provision on future business expenses.

He called the Senate Democratic tax proposal "bad from every point of view" and "just as political" as the House-passed $20 exemption. In addition, he said the Senate proposal would repeal sections of the 1954 tax law which Humphrey credited with a major role in bringing an economic upturn (the dividend and depreciation provisions).

The proposed extension of corporate and income tax rates to July 1, 1957, and the argument that this would produce needed revenue, were termed by Humphrey "just as silly and misleading as anything I can think of."

Floor Action

On March 15, after debating the Democratic substitute proposal for four days, the Senate turned it down by a 44-50 roll-call vote. Five Democrats joined 45 Republicans to defeat the substitute. One Republican voted with 43 Democrats in favor of it. (For voting, see chart, p. 119.)

An amendment sponsored by a majority of the Senate Finance Committee, to drop from the bill a straight $20 tax deduction approved by the House, was agreed to by a 61-32 roll-call vote. The bill was passed by voice vote March 15 and sent to conference with the House the next day.

DEBATE -- Proponents of the substitute measure contended that tax relief for individuals was needed to encourage consumer spending. The cost of the measure, they said, would be more than offset by greater revenue from repeal of the dividend and depreciation items. Opponents said the tax cut would be inflationary, and disputed arguments that the substitute would help balance the budget.

No opposition was expressed to extending corporation and excise rates, nor to repealing a 1954 provision that Democrats referred to as Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey's "blooper." Finance Committee Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) pledged that his Committee would act swiftly on separate legislation to repeal the provision, which dealt with reserves for future business expenses. (See story, p. 423.)

Several GOP Senators contended that repeal of the accelerated depreciation allowance would injure farmers in paying off farm machinery. Democrats said the 1954 provision chiefly aided corporations.

RELIEVE THE POOR TAXPAYER

March 10 -- Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- "It is our purpose to offer...relief...to the taxpayer in the low income group in lieu of the relief now available in the form of accelerated depreciation and dividend exemption."

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- "...every dollar of tax reduction proposed...can be paid for only by borrowing the money. Expenses have not been cut sufficiently to offset the loss in revenue...we cannot continue down the road of deficit financing."

March 11 -- Russell B. Long (D La.) -- People "in the middle- and lower-income brackets are entitled to tax reduction as a matter of simple justice. They have been ignored thus far by the Eisenhower Administration."

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- "The whole purpose of the Democratic tax proposal is to give a little extra to the consumer, to...increase spending in the market place, to generate new business. What is really bothering the Administration is not so much what we are proposing (but) the fact that the Democrats are proposing it...They would like to be able to make this proposal next year."

1954 LAW PRAISED

March 14 -- Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- The Administration's 1954 tax program "was carefully balanced to bring some measure of relief to every part of our economy. It was patterned for overall economic benefit -- not partisan political advantage." To risk the "confidence generated by the Administration's program" by adopting the Democratic substitute "would be the height of fiscal irresponsibility."

Edward Martin (R Pa.) -- "The national debt hangs over our heads as a constant threat to the stability and security of our nation." Every effort should be made to balance the budget, rather than reduce taxes.

Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- "Before the substitute proposal was drawn up," he asked "for assurance from the Administration...that if we had no tax cut this year there would be none next year," unless the budget was balanced. Getting no such assurance, he concluded that the Administration had in mind "a little shot in the arm to help business to some extent next year. If we can do that for business next year, we can do it for all the people this year."

Albert Gore (D Tenn.) -- "The real choice of the Senate is between tax reduction for the economically privileged few...or for the economically hard-pressed many...Unfortunately, the Senate is not faced with a choice between balancing the budget and voting tax relief." The 1954 provision on dividend income provides "a tax preference for income from corporation stock over earned income and all other income."

Byrd -- The substitute proposal "is a five-barreled blast loaded with complex legislation which has not been considered by any Congressional committee...Instead of balancing the budget and wiping out the deficit...(it) would over a period of time, add nearly $600 million to the existing deficit."

DEFICIT SPENDING

March 15 -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- By enacting the 1954 tax law when the budget was unbalanced, the Administration and Congress "endorsed deficit spending as a useful tool, if properly used."

A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- Adoption of the substitute proposal would set "a trend for inflation. We would be acting when no one knows whether or not we shall be engaged in a war before the passage of another year."

Eugene D. Millikin (R Colo.) -- Discussing claims that "the present tax law treats with brutality those in the lower income-tax brackets," he cited 22 provisions of the 1954 law that benefited individuals.

Alben W. Barkley (D Ky.) -- A cut of "$ 1 billion in taxes for the average man" would encourage buying and employment.

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- The substitute was a "hoax," would not benefit wage earners, and would be "a deliberate slap at every farmer."

Two proposed amendments were ruled out of order under terms of a debate limitation agreement that specified all amendments except the Johnson substitute must be germane to the bill. An amendment by Gore would have repealed the dividend provisions of the 1954 tax code; William Langer (R N.D.) proposed raising personal income tax exemptions to $800 in 1955 and $1,000 thereafter.

Three other amendments were withdrawn at the request of Byrd. He told Milton R. Young (R N.D.), who wished to refund the excise tax on gasoline used for farming purposes, that the Finance Committee would consider the matter as a separate bill. Also withdrawn were amendments by Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.), to raise the gasoline tax to 3 cents, and Francis Case (R S.D.), to revive the Renegotiation Act. Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) said he would not press his amendment to let the excise tax on cars drop to 7 percent.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

March 15 -- Johnson (Texas) and five other Democrats -- Grant $20 tax cut for heads of households and $10 cut for dependents, excluding spouses; extend existing corporate and excise tax rates to July 1, 1957; repeal accelerated depreciation, dividend credit provisions, and section dealing with reserves for future business expenses, of 1954 tax code. Roll call, 44-50.

Conference

The Senate-House Conference Committee on HR 4259 recommended March 25 (H Rept 305) that the $20 tax credit approved by the House be dropped from the bill.

ACTION -- The Senate March 25, by voice vote and without debate, agreed to the conference report.

The House agreed to the report March 30 by a 387-8 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 144.)

DEBATE -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- The Senate conferees were unwilling to compromise even on a modified proposal for a $10 income tax cut. Because of the government's need for revenue from the corporate and excise taxes, he "very reluctantly agreed to the Senate amendment" striking the tax credit.

Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) -- The Republicans "have always stood for tax reduction when the fiscal security of the nation permits. When the time is ripe for a further tax cut, the Republican Party will propose one."

Group Stands

Although the tax bill represented a major issue for lobbying organizations, the bill reached a House vote before they had a chance to marshal their forces.

With no time to organize letter-writing campaigns and other grass roots pressures, these groups had to skip preliminaries and rely on direct lobbying -- usually saved for late phases of a legislative struggle. They scurried to Capitol Hill to press their views on individual Congressmen, and inspired a brief rain of telegrams.

Both sides concentrated most of their activity on the Senate. Advocates of the income tax reduction -- led in the pressure sphere by Americans for Democratic Action and the Congress of Industrial Organizations -- conceded that they would have a harder time pushing the measure through the Senate than the House. Opponents of the cut -- led by the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. and the National Association of Manufacturers -- counted on the Senate to block the proposal.

The Senate Democrats' "package" proposal was endorsed by James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, while an American Farm Bureau Federation spokesman opposed "any reduction in personal income tax at this time."

Although the NAM, Chamber, ADA and CIO were on record as opposed to the existing excise tax structure, they did not actively oppose a one-year extension of the rates. Spokesmen for individual industries engaged in perfunctory lobbying for reduction of excises, but realized they had little chance for success.

TAX CODE REVISION

HR 4725 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 293) March 22, 1955.
- Passed by the House by voice vote March 24.
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 372) May 23.
- Passed, with amendment, by voice vote of the Senate May 26.
- House agreed to Senate amendments by unanimous consent June 6.

P.L. 74 -- Signed into law June 15.

Congress in 1955 repealed sections 452 and 462 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The two sections had permitted business firms to defer tax payments on income received for services to be performed in future years and to take a deduction for funds put into a reserve to meet certain types of estimated future expenses.

Democrats claimed that the sections allowed a "loophole" that would cause a loss of revenue in excess of $1 billion. Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey, though stating the reports of the estimated revenue loss were exaggerated, advised repeal of the sections.

PROVISIONS -- Repealed by HR 4725 were:

Section 452, Internal Revenue Code of 1954, deferring tax payments on income received for services to be performed in future years.

Section 462, Internal Revenue Code of 1954, deducting from taxable income money set aside to meet expenses expected in future years.

The bill also:

Made the repeal effective for taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1953.

Allowed taxpayers until Dec. 15, 1955, to make up tax deficiencies caused by repeal of the two sections.

Background

The two sections were minor provisions of the omnibus tax law enacted in 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 476ff.)

On Feb. 4, 1955, Rep. Herbert Zelenko (D N.Y.), during debate on the Revenue Act of 1955 above, stated that a "windfall" given to business firms by section 462 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 would mean a loss of "$5 billions" to the government. He introduced a bill (HR 4434) to repeal the provision.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) March 2 called for an investigation into reports of a huge "windfall" for some firms under the revised code.

Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey March 3 wrote the Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Jere Cooper (D Tenn.), that his Department was investigating several provisions of the 1954 tax code and would make recommendations for Congressional action when the studies were completed. He also stated that reports of the revenue loss involved were excessive.

On March 8, Humphrey, in another letter to Cooper, urged immediate repeal of sections 452 and 462, retroactive to their effective date. He said Treasury studies indicated many taxpayers were planning to use the sections to defer income and create deductions far in excess of anything contemplated at the time they were proposed. The objective of the sections, Humphrey stated, was to conform tax bookkeeping to business bookkeeping.

Chairman Cooper and Rep. Daniel A. Reed (R N.Y.) of the Committee introduced bills (HR 4725, HR 4726) to repeal the provisions.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- March 10, 11, 17, and 18, on HR 4725, 4726.

TESTIMONY -- March 10 -- Secretary Humphrey said the two provisions of the 1954 tax code were a serious mistake which would cost the government much money if not repealed. The estimate of anticipated revenue loss made by Rep. Zelenko, Humphrey said, was "grossly exaggerated." Humphrey estimated the loss would be in excess of $47 million.

March 11 -- Zelenko said he had been "very moderate" in estimating a $5 billion revenue loss to the government and recommended immediate repeal of the sections he claimed allowed the loss.

March 17 -- Paul D. Seghers, chairman, Committee on Federal Tax Legislation of the Federal Tax Forum, Inc., urged retention of the sections. He stated "the charge that these provisions are 'loopholes' in the law is patently false." Also requesting that the sections be kept in effect were spokesmen of the National Association of Manufacturers, Association of Cotton Textile Merchants, American Cotton Manufacturers Institute, and the National Alliance of Television and Electronic Service Associations.

Rep. Walter M. Mumma (R Pa.) testified in favor of retaining the sections, stating they encouraged good bookkeeping practices and aided businesses during short term hardships.

March 18 -- Rep. Fred Schwengel (R Iowa) asked for consideration of an exemption of insurance companies from the effect of possible repeal of the tax provisions.

Opposed to outright repeal of the sections were representatives of the Controllers Institute of America, Association of American Railroads, Machinery and Allied Products Institute, American Automobile Association, Magazine Publishers Association, Associated Business Publishers, Radio-Electronics-Television Manufacturers' Association, and the Holland Furnace Co.

The American Trucking Associations, Inc. March 22 filed a statement asking retention of the section that provided for a tax deduction for estimated reserves.

ACTION -- The Committee unanimously reported HR 4725 (H Rept 293), with technical amendments, March 22.

Floor Action

The House March 24 passed the bill by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- Repealed by HR 4725, effective Jan. 1, 1954, would be:

Section 452 -- Deferring tax payments on income received for services to be performed in future years.

Section 462 -- Deducting from taxable income money set aside to meet expenses expected in future years.

A Committee amendment allowed taxpayers until Sept. 15, 1955, to pay the required taxes without penalty.

DEBATE -- Rep. Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- Explained provisions of HR 4725.

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- Section 462 would give "a windfall of several billion dollars" to "big corporations."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- May 11 and 12 on HR 4725.

TESTIMONY -- May 11 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey renewed his recommendations for outright repeal of the sections. He said revenue losses under the two sections might run as high as $1 billion, 20 times more than first estimated.

J.S. Seidman of the American Institute of Accountants urged modification rather than outright repeal of the sections. He said a recent study by his group indicated the revenue loss would not exceed $500 million. This could be softened sharply if the deductions were spread over a 10-year period, he said.

Jacquin D. Bierman, representing 370 magazines, asked the Committee to retain the provision allowing a taxpayer to put off paying income taxes on income received in one year for services to be performed in the future. Those publishers who were not permitted to defer tax payments on pre-paid subscriptions would be hard hit by repeal, he said.

Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) asked the Committee to recommend repeal of a special $50 tax relief given stockholders on dividend income in the 1954 Internal Revenue Act.

May 12 -- Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) said the "windfall" provisions of the 1954 law would cause the government to lose $4.7 billion.

William H. Danne of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. urged the Committee not to make a final decision to repeal the two sections without considering the inequities "which would be suffered by taxpayers who in good faith and justifiable reliance on those sections... have taken irrevocable steps." He said that Section 452 on prepaid income had no long-range effect on revenue since "it merely permits the deferral" of taxation.

ACTION -- HR 4725 was reported May 23 (S Rept 372) after the Committee rejected Sen. Gore's proposal to eliminate the $50 deduction on dividend income. The Committee amended the House-passed bill to give corporations three additional months, until Dec. 15, 1955, to make up tax deficiencies caused by taking advantage of the two sections.

Floor Action

The Senate May 26 passed HR 4725, with the Committee amendment, by voice vote and returned it to the House.

DEBATE -- Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) -- Offered an amendment to repeal provisions of the 1954 tax code granting a $50 deduction on income from stock dividends, which he said "discriminate against income received from investment in noncorporate enterprise." He withdrew his proposal after Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) of the Senate Finance Committee assured him the changes would be considered when a general review of tax legislation was undertaken.

FINAL ACTION

On June 6, the House concurred in the Senate amendment to the bill by voice vote and sent HR 4725 to the President.

FURTHER REVISION PROPOSED

Chairman Cooper of the House Ways and Means Committee May 6 released a letter from Secretary of Treasury Humphrey that listed some 70 errors in the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Humphrey described them as "wholly uncontroversial...and purely clerical in nature." Cooper said the Committee would take them up at a later date.

On May 20 Rep. Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) said that another "highly dangerous loophole" existed in the 1954 tax law. Section 1032, which exempts corporations from taxation on profits from sale of their own stock, should be reviewed by the Treasury Department, Mills said, because of the possibility of a large revenue loss to the government. Later, Mills made public, in a July 29 speech before the House, the Secretary of Treasury's reply that stated "...the new rules adopted in 1954 are better than the old law." The letter also said, "There are relatively few instances where corporations deal in their own stock for profit and loss." Mills said that section encouraged corporations to speculate in their own stocks and renewed his request for a review of the workings of section 1032.

CUSTOMS REVISION

HR 6040 -- Reported by the House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 858) June 18, 1955.

- Passed by voice vote of the House June 22. (For roll-call vote, see p. 154.)

The Administration's measure, intended to improve methods of valuation of customs and to simplify other customs procedures, met with complaints by some Congressmen that "back-door" tariff cuts would result. The House passed the bill (HR 6040) but at the conclusion of Senate hearings, further action was postponed until 1956.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to the Senate, HR 6040 would:

Make "export value" the preferred standard for valuation of imports, eliminating the existing alternative of "foreign value" (the wholesale price for consumption in the foreign country involved.)

Define "export value" and other standards to be used when export value could not be determined.

Require that any tariff reductions resulting from enactment of the bill be considered in "peril point" and "escape clause" proceedings.

Simplify the conversion of foreign currencies for customs valuation purposes by permitting use of the N.Y. Federal Reserve Bank's quarterly exchange rate certification if it did not vary by 5 percent or more from the daily rate.

Declare that no modification of the Antidumping Act was intended in the bill and direct the Secretary of Treasury to review the Act and recommend any amendment needed to aid enforcement of it.

Repeal some 30 obsolete provisions of customs law.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Customs Study." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 521ff.) Also see "Reciprocal Trade Agreements Extension," p. 289.)

Congress passed Customs Simplification Acts in 1953 and 1954, but neither of these provided the basic revision of customs law sought by foreign exporters and U.S. importers.

The 1954 Act directed the Tariff Commission to make a study of tariff classifications for the purpose of revising them, and to make a report within two years, or by Sept. 1, 1956. The Commission was also directed to file an interim report by March 15, 1955.

In his Jan. 10, 1955, foreign trade message, President Eisenhower called for further action to simplify customs, but added that the interim report of the Tariff Commission "should enable the Congress to determine whether legislative steps should then be taken or should await submission of the final report."

The President said "the uncertainties and confusion arising from the complex system of valuation on imported articles cause unwarranted delays in the determination of customs duties."

No recommendations were included in the Tariff Commission's March 15 report, which was confined to a statement of the principles and procedures to be followed by the Commission in making its over-all study. On May 5, certain changes in the method of determining the value of imports were proposed in identical bills

(HR 6040, 6041) introduced by two members of the Ways and Means Committee, Chairman Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) and Rep. Thomas A. Jenkins (R Ohio).

The Cooper-Jenkins proposal would make the foreign export value of merchandise imported into the U.S. the principal base for determining duties to be paid.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- On HR 6040, May 23-24.

TESTIMONY -- May 23 -- Assistant Secretary of Treasury H. Chapman Rose urged enactment of the bill in order to try to speed the international exchange of goods. Under existing procedures, he said, a foreign exporter often cannot tell in advance whether his product will be classified under a high-tariff category or a medium-tariff category. He attributed a six-month backlog of tariff cases to complex customs procedures.

May 24 -- O.R. Strackbein of the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy opposed the proposal. He contended it would be "an invitation to use the United States as the dumping ground of the world."

Lewis R. Parker of the Albany (N.Y.) Felt Co. said the bill would automatically reduce tariffs in his industry by 10 percent. The Manufacturing Chemists Association said the bill would cut tariffs on chemicals and would work unnecessary hardship on the industry.

Support for the measure came from spokesmen for the U.S. Council of the International Chamber of Commerce, the Committee for a National Trade Policy, and the American Association of Port Authorities.

ACTION -- The Committee June 18 reported HR 6040, which would amend provisions of the Tariff Act and repeal certain obsolete provisions of the customs laws (H Rept 858).

Floor Action

The House June 22 passed the bill by voice vote. A motion to recommit it and delete import valuation provisions was rejected by a 143-232 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 154.)

A closed rule (H Res 282) prohibiting all amendments except those offered by the Ways and Means Committee was adopted by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- "Elimination of 'foreign value' and the substitution of 'export value' as the primary basis for customs valuation is expected to greatly expedite appraising imported merchandise and to considerably reduce costs of administration." The charge that the change "substantially reduces protection for domestic producers...is not so." Of total imports in 1954 of $10.5 billion, only $1.4 billion (ad valorem imports) would be affected by the bill. The average decrease in valuation on those would be 2.5 percent, or $5 million less than customs duties collected in 1954.

Thomas A. Jenkins (R Ohio) -- "I stand second to none in this House in my concern that American industry receive adequate tariff protection....(But) there is no tariff aspect in this bill." It will "bring greater efficiency and economy into" customs procedures.

William E. Miller (R N.Y.) -- "This is a larger tariff-reduction bill than HR 1," the reciprocal trade law. "We are automatically and arbitrarily reducing our tariffs by from 10 to 20 percent with no reciprocity involved at all."

John W. Byrnes (R Wis.) -- "I...believe in providing protection to our domestic producers against unfair competition from imports, but...protection ought not to be on the basis of complicating customs procedures so that everything that comes in gets tied up in red tape." Imports "which we need, and on which there is no competition...have to bear this handicap (which) is passed on to the American consumers."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- July 6-8, on HR 6040.

TESTIMONY -- July 6 -- Support for the bill came from spokesmen for the Treasury Department, National Council of American Importers, Inc., American Farm Bureau Federation, U.S. Council of the International Chamber of Commerce, and the Detroit Board of Commerce.

July 7 -- The American Tariff League, Inc., opposed HR 6040 "because there is just one major fault in the bill -- it uses the avenue of customs simplification to effect tariff reduction.... Under the circumstances, American producers and workers can only assume that the worst will happen to them...that duties on individual items might be cut 25 percent or more." The Tariff League's stand was explained by Richard H. Anthony, executive secretary.

Richard B. Tucker, appearing for the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Plate Glass Co., said that while HR 6040 "may achieve some administrative simplification...it will result in giving broad arbitrary power to customs appraising officers, and the net immediate effect will be to reduce the amount of duties collected on a broad range of products."

July 8 -- George L. Bell of the Committee for a National Trade Policy supported the bill. Opposition came from spokesmen for cotton, wool, and synthetic fabric interests. A representative of the Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation also opposed the bill.

ACTION -- At the conclusion of hearings, the Committee postponed further action on the bill until 1956.

DEBT LIMIT

HR 6992 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 914) June 27, 1955.

- Passed by the House, by a roll-call vote of 267-56, June 27. (See page 156.)
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 688) June 29.
- Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, June 30.

P.L. 124 -- Signed into law June 30.

By enacting HR 6992, Congress:

Extended until June 30, 1956, the existing $6 billion temporary increase in the statutory debt limit of $275 billion.

Background

REFERENCE -- See "Debt Limit" (CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 498) for a summary of all debt-limit legislation since the first ceiling was set in 1917.

In 1954 the President asked for a $15 billion increase in the $275 billion permanent debt limit. Congress granted a temporary increase of $6 billion, scheduled to expire on June 30, 1955.

Changes in the actual national debt during the second half of the fiscal year 1955 were:

Date	Total debt in billions *	Per Capita debt
Dec. 31, 1954	$278.8	$1,700
March 31, 1955	274.	1,671
June 15, 1955	277.	1,679

*Includes some funds not subject to the debt limit.

President Eisenhower, in his Economic Report to Congress on Jan. 20, 1955, said: "While no changes in taxation are now recommended, there is a need for greater flexibility in the management of federal finances, and this requires an increase in the present statutory debt limit...large enough to provide the Treasury with the latitude to do its job."

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARING -- June 27 on HR 6992.

TESTIMONY -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey, supporting HR 6992, said the government would "try to live within" the temporary $281 billion ceiling set by the bill. However, he added, "if the least thing goes wrong," it might be necessary to request an additional increase.

ACTION -- HR 6992 was reported June 27 (H Rept 914).

Floor Action

The House June 27 passed the bill by a roll-call vote of 267-56. (For voting, see chart, p. 156.)

DEBATE -- Jere Cooper (D Tenn.) -- "...we are faced with the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury... states that he needs the temporary $6 billion increase in the debt ceiling continued for another year. I am just as reluctant to increase...the ceiling on the public debt as any Member of the House, but under present circumstances, I do not feel that we have any choice other than to comply with the request...."

Thomas A. Jenkins (R Ohio) -- "All this does in effect is to give the Treasury a reasonable leeway in dealing with periodic fluctuations in government income and outgo. It is anticipated that the permanent debt will be approximately the same at the termination of the proposed extension as it is today."

H. R. Gross (R Iowa) -- "...this procedure is the sure road to fiscal irresponsibility and folly.... The answer to financial stability on the part of the federal government is reducted spending, not steadily increasing debt."

Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.) -- "The debt is approximately $274.6 billion, with the permanent ceiling at $275 billion. In order to conduct the business of the government, this increase on a temporary basis is necessary."

(See Congressional Record, June 27.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARING -- June 29.

TESTIMONY -- Secretary of Treasury Humphrey and W. Randolph Burgess, deputy to the Secretary, appeared in a closed session to support HR 6992.

ACTION -- The Committee June 29 reported the bill (S Rept 688) by a 14-1 vote. Sen. George W. Malone (R Nev.) cast the "nay" vote.

Floor Action

The Senate June 30 passed HR 6992 by voice vote, clearing the temporary $281 billion debt measure for the President to sign later that day.

DEBATE -- Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- "I recognize, with reluctance, the necessity for...immediate enactment...for the simple reason...that (HR 6992) provides for a minimum necessary to maintain the integrity of...the United States. But I suggest that this additional temporary extension should be regarded by the Administration as an indication of Congressional notice that it should not be repeated again."

RENEGOTIATION ACT

HR 4904 --
- Reported by the House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 450) April 27, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the House April 28.
- Reported by the Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 582) June 20, with amendments.
- Passed by the Senate, amended by voice vote, June 21.
- Conference report (H Rept 1188) agreed to by the Senate July 18, and the House July 21, by voice votes.

P. L. 216 -- Signed into law Aug. 3.

As requested by President Eisenhower, Congress in 1955 revived the Renegotiation Act (covering defense contracts), which had expired on Dec. 31, 1954.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 4904:

Extended the Renegotiation Act until Dec. 31, 1956.

Exempted from renegotiation contracts and subcontracts for standard commercial articles and services.

Exempted construction contracts let by competitive bid after Dec. 31, 1954, except for military housing contracts financed under the National Housing Act.

Extended exemption to persons selling new, durable productive equipment for incorporation in mechanisms sold to the government.

Directed the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to report, by May 31, 1956, whether the Act should be extended again or limited to specific items.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Renegotiation Act." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 525.)

The Renegotiation Act of 1951, as extended in 1954 by Public Law 764, was to expire on Dec. 31, 1954. A number of exemptions were granted in the 1954 law.

President Eisenhower on March 4, 1955, sent Congress a special message urging renewal of the Act until Dec. 31, 1956. The President said that, despite improvements in contracting, there remained "an area in which only renegotiation can be effective to assure that the United States gets what it needs for defense at fair prices."

House

COMMITTEE-- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- April 27 reported HR 4904 (H Rept 450), which would extend the Act through 1956.

The Committee amended HR 4904 to provide that profit limitation under the Vinson-Trammel Act, dealing with Navy shipbuilding, and the Merchant Marine Act would not apply to any contract subject to the Renegotiation Act. This provision was made effective on amounts received by contractors after Dec. 31, 1953.

Floor Action

The House April 28, by voice vote and without debate, passed HR 4904, as amended by the Committee.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARINGS -- June 7, 8.

TESTIMONY -- June 7 -- Secretary of Air Force Harold E. Talbott urged approval of HR 4904. Ross Nichols, speaking for the National Association of Manufacturers, said renegotiation destroyed incentives to maximum productive efficiency and was unprofitable for the government.

June 8 -- Theron J. Rice, representing the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., said there was "overwhelming evidence that renegotiation not only is unnecessary but is undesirable under current economic conditions." Others who opposed the bill included spokesmen for the Illinois Manufacturing Association and the Machinery and Allied Products Institute.

Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.), an author of the renegotiation law used during World War II, said extension "is clearly indicated." He submitted several cases of abnormally high profits which he said the government had been able to recover in part through renegotiation.

ACTION -- The Committee reported the bill June 20, with amendments (S Rept 582).

The Committee added a provision to exempt from the Act contracts awarded by competitive bids for construction of new military buildings, defense plants, or additions to existing facilities. Military family housing projects, however, would remain subject to renegotiation.

The House provision to exempt from profit limitations in other laws maritime articles subject to the Renegotiation Act was deleted by the Senate Committee.

Floor Action

The Senate June 21 passed HR 4904 by voice vote. Committee amendments and one floor amendment were accepted.

PROVISIONS -- As amended by the Senate, HR 4904 would:

Extend the Renegotiation Act through Dec. 31, 1956.

Exempt from renegotiation contractors and subcontractors of standard commercial services (textile finishing, heat treating, etc.).

Exempt construction contracts made by competitive bid, except for military housing contracts financed under the National Housing Act.

Extend exemption to persons selling new durable productive equipment for incorporation in equipment sold to the government.

Permit the Renegotiation Board to review renegotiated contracts in which inequities had occurred and to consider the profits and losses of the contractor over a period of years.

Direct the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to report, by May 31, 1956, whether the Act should be extended further, or limited to specific items.

DEBATE -- Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) -- The proposed report by the Internal Revenue Committee "is vitally important.... I hope the study will...determine whether competitive bidding is a sufficient safeguard in the awarding of government contracts."

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- Although companies doing less than $500,000 business annually with the government are exempt from renegotiation, the Act nevertheless penalizes small contractors, as compared to large producers of commercial articles (automobiles, tires, etc.) who are exempted.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Won acceptance of an amendment permitting the Renegotiation Board to review inequitable contract renegotiations. Offered, and later withdrew, at Byrd's request, an amendment to provide higher court review of Tax Court decisions on renegotiation cases.

Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- It "is very unfair" to exempt contractors "who build roads, highways, and houses" and not exempt small manufacturers.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Morse -- Permit the Renegotiation Board to review inequitable renegotiated contracts and consider the profits and losses of the contractor over a period of years. Voice vote.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee July 14 reported (H Rept 1188) a compromise version of HR 4904. Conferees agreed on the Senate version except for the provision authorizing the Renegotiation Board to review contracts renegotiated previously.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate July 18 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Opposed conferees' agreement to drop his amendment. "We are dealing here with a group of businessmen who entered into arrangements with the government for war contracts...over....say, four years. In one of those years they made a profit. In the other three years they lost money. The government is forcing renegotiation of the contract for the year in which they made money... The Renegotiation Board says there would have to be new legislation to correct what the...Board admits is an injustice...." Should the government "be allowed to do an injustice to businessmen?"

HOUSE ACTION

The House July 21 agreed to the conference report on HR 4904 by voice vote, without debate.

RUBBER PLANTS SALE

H Res 170, 171 -- Reported unfavorably by House Armed Services Committee (H Repts 225, 227) March 17, 1955.

H Res 170 -- Rejected by the House March 22 on a 132-283 roll-call vote. (See p. 142.)

H Res 171 -- Rejected by the House March 23 on a 137-276 roll call.

S Res 76, 78, 79 -- Reported unfavorably by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Repts 117, 118) March 22.

S Res 76 -- Rejected by the Senate March 23 by a 31-56 roll-call vote. (See p. 120.)

S Res 78, 79 -- Rejected by the Senate March 23 on a 39-48 roll call.

The sale to private enterprise of 24 government-owned synthetic rubber plants, after approval by Congress, took effect on March 26, 1955. Terms of the sale were worked out by a Presidential commission, operating under a law enacted in 1953.

The Rubber Producing Facilities Disposal Act of 1953 specified that sales approved by the Disposal Commission would go into effect unless disapproved by either the House or Senate within 60 days after the proposed sales were submitted to Congress. Democrats led the 1955 opposition to the Commission's proposals but were unable to gain the support of a majority of either house.

PROVISIONS -- Under contracts negotiated by the Rubber Producing Facilities Disposal Commission, 24 of 27 government-owned synthetic rubber plants were sold for a base price of $259,829,000. Improvements to the plants, raw materials, spare parts, and stock-in-hand, when sold, would bring the total return to the government to $310,565,000, the Commission estimated.

The successful bidders, and the number of plants sold to each, were:

Shell Chemical Corporation (3)
Standard Oil of California (1)
U.S. Rubber Co. (2)
American Synthetic Rubber Corporation (1)
Copolymer Corporation (2)
Esso Standard Oil Co. (1)
Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (2)

Background

REFERENCE -- "Sale of Federal Rubber Plants," CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 423-25.

Presidents Harry S. Truman, in 1950 and 1952, and Dwight D. Eisenhower, in 1953, recommended sale of the government's rubber plants, which had been built to supply rubber during World War II. In 1953 Congress passed the disposal law (PL 205), which authorized a commission to negotiate for sale of the plants under specified conditions.

COMMISSION NAMED

President Eisenhower named Holman D. Pettibone, chairman, and Leslie A. Rounds and Everett R. Cook, members of the Disposal Commission.

The Commission reported to Congress on Jan. 24, 1955, recommending the sale of 24 of the government's plants. There were no bids for two plants that were already out of operation, the Commission said, and the only bid for the remaining plant -- at Baytown, Texas -- had been rejected.

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HEARINGS -- March 10, 11, 14 and 15 on H Res 170, to disapprove the entire sale proposal; H Res 171, to block the "package" sale of three California plants to Shell Chemical Corporation; and HR 2882, to re-open negotiations for the sale of a copolymer plant at Baytown, Texas.

TESTIMONY -- March 10 -- Chairman Carl Vinson (D Ga.) praised the disposal plan and said it would give taxpayers "full, fair value" for their money.

Appearing in opposition to the plan, on grounds it might promote monopoly, were Reps. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) and Wright Patman (D Texas), who had introduced H Res 170. Patman said he had been authorized by a majority of the members of the House Small Business Committee to oppose the disposal plan on their behalf.

Reps. Albert Thomas and Jack B. Brooks (both, D Texas) testified for HR 2882.

March 11 -- Yates and Patman contended that the Disposal Commission had not observed safeguards that would protect small rubber fabricators.

March 14 -- Witnesses challenged the legality of the "package" sale to Shell. Representing unsuccessful bidders for one of the three plants, the witnesses were John L. Connolly of Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. and its subsidiary, Midland Rubber Corp., and Jack B. Blalock, attorney for oilman Edwin W. Pauley.

March 15 -- Representatives of Esso Standard Oil, Phillips petroleum, and Shell Chemical Corp., and Holman D. Pettibone of the Rubber Disposal Commission testified. Rep. Clyde Doyle (D Calif.) spoke for H Res 171.

ACTION -- The Committee March 16 voted, 3-27, against H Res 170, which would express House opposition to the entire proposed plan; and, 4-28, against H Res 171, which would block sale of three Los Angeles plants.

In reporting the resolutions unfavorably to the House (H Repts 225, 227), the Committee expressed approval of the sales as promoting the nation's security and protecting the interests of small business.

Floor Action

H Res 170 was voted down by the House, on a 132-283 roll call, March 22. Its companion resolution (H Res 171) was rejected March 23 by a 137-276 record vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 142.)

DEBATE -- March 22 -- Carl Vinson (D Ga.) -- The Rubber Commission "has done a truly remarkable job in recovering...the full fair value of these facilities...Small business could not possibly operate these plants, except by joining together...for the purchase of one or more. And that is exactly what two of the purchasers have done."

Wright Patman (D Texas) -- The proposed sale would not protect the public against monopoly. It would give four rubber companies, which "control and distribute 80 percent of rubber tires," the "opportunity to get the remaining 20 percent."

Dewey Short (R Mo.) -- "I cannot share the apprehension...about corruption by big business...It is big business that has made us the greatest nation on earth."

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- The sale price "is drastically inadequate." It "is a 'sucker' deal."

Leslie C. Arends (R Ill.) -- The Commission should be commended for a plan that "meets every criteria."

Paul Cunningham (R Iowa) -- "The basic issue is: Should a major industry remain nationalized when there is a profitable opportunity to get the government out of it?"

March 23 -- Debate on H Res 171 centered on the legality of the "package" sale to Shell. Reps. Clyde Doyle, George P. Miller, B. F. Sisk, Chet Holifield (all California Democrats) and Melvin Price (D Ill.) contended it was illegal. Chairman Vinson and other members of the Armed Services Committee upheld the contract.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency Production and Stabilization Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 8-10 on the proposal to sell the rubber plants to private industry, and on a bill (S 691) to reopen negotiations for the disposal of a plant at Baytown, Texas.

TESTIMONY -- March 8 -- Sens. Lyndon B. Johnson and Price Daniel (both, D Texas) urged approval of S 691, saying that local citizens were prepared to bid for the Baytown plant, which otherwise would go into mothballs.

Commission Chairman Holman T. Pettibone and Sen. John W. Bricker (R Ohio) said enactment of S 691 might jeopardize sale of the other 24 plants unless their prospective buyers signed waivers that would permit new negotiations on the Baytown plant.

March 9 -- John L. Connolly of Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. and its subsidiary, Midland Rubber Corp., and Jack B. Blalock, attorney for Edwin W. Pauley, protested the plan to sell three Los Angeles plants to Shell Chemical Corp.

Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes said the Justice Department saw no conflict with antitrust law in the Rubber Commission's recommendations. Owen Kane of the General Accounting Office also approved the proposals. Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) said several companies that would get the plants had been defendants in antitrust cases.

March 10 -- Witnesses represented companies that successfully bid for some of the 24 plants: Goodrich-Gulf Chemicals; Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.; Goodyear Synthetic Rubber Corp.; Esso Standard Oil's Chemical Product Operations; and U.S. Rubber Co.

DISAPPROVAL URGED

On March 11 Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.), who said the Commission's disposal plan needed more study, introduced S Res 76, to express Senate disapproval of the plan. On March 15 Sens. Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) and Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) introduced S Res 78 and 79, to block sale of the three California plants to Shell.

ACTION -- The Subcommittee March 17 voted:

4-1, to report S Res 76 unfavorably to the full Committee.

3-2, against a motion to reject S Res 78 and 79.

Unanimously to report S 691 "favorably in principle" to the Committee.

The full Committee voted March 21, 10-5, to report unfavorably on S Res 76, 78 and 79 (S Repts 117, 118) and to report favorably S 691, with amendments. The five dissenters, all Democrats, filed minority views to the Committee reports.

Floor Action

The Senate March 23 rejected S Res 76 by a 31-56 roll-call vote and S Res 78 and 79 by a 39-48 roll call. (For voting, see chart, p. 120.) S 691 was passed by voice vote and sent to the House.

PROVISIONS -- As passed with Committee amendments, S 691 would:

Authorize, for 30 days after enactment of the bill, bids for purchase of a copolymer plant at Baytown, Texas, and permit 60 days for negotiations.

Impose terms and conditions for the sale as set by the Rubber Producing Facilities Disposal Act of 1953 (PL 205, 83rd Congress).

DEBATE -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Under the Rubber Commission's proposals, 88 percent of the copolymer and butyl capacity would be sold "to four large rubber companies and three large oil companies. In my dictionary, that spells monopoly."

J. Allen Frear, Jr. (D Del.) -- The Commission "complied substantially" with the law and met the criteria spelled out by Congress.

Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- Shell Chemical Corporation's lump sum bid for three plants should be set aside because the law "specifically states that bids shall be on individual plants."

Frear -- Shell bid $30 million, whereas the highest separate bids came to $28 million. The Comptroller General ruled the Shell bid legal.

HOUSE CONCURRENCE

On March 24 the House passed S 691 by voice vote, without debate, and sent it to the President. Mr. Eisenhower signed it into law (PL 19) March 31. The Baytown plant was sold July 15 to the United Rubber and Chemical Co., a subsidiary of United Carbon Co.

Sale of the other 24 synthetic rubber plants became effective March 26.

SALE OF WEST VIRGINIA PLANT

In July, Congress passed a bill (HR 7301 -- PL 336) authorizing the Rubber Commission to re-offer for sale a synthetic rubber facility at Institute, W.Va. for which no bid had been received in the original period. A similar provision had been inserted, by Senate amendment, in the bill (S 2391) extending the Defense Production Act. (See p. 472.)

Six bids for the Institute plant, which had not operated since September, 1953, were received in October. The Commission's recommendation for sale of the plant would be sent to Congress in January, 1956.

HIGHWAY PROPOSALS

S 1048 -- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 350) May 13, 1955.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, on a voice vote May 25. (For roll-call votes, see p. 125.)

HR 7474 -- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 1336) July 21.

- Rejected by the House, on a 123-292 roll-call vote, July 27. (See p. 160.)

Despite wide agreement on the need for a large-scale highway program, Congress in 1955 failed to pass any highway legislation.

President Eisenhower Feb. 22, in a special highway message to Congress, proposed a federal bond issue -- instead of direct appropriations from revenues -- to finance highway improvements. The bond issue would be outside the public debt. This proposal was voted down by both the Senate and House.

S 1048 followed the lines of past federal-aid highway acts, but increased funds to be allocated. The bill would have authorized $900 million for primary and secondary roads in each of fiscal years 1957-61. Federal aid for the National System of Interstate Highways would have totaled $1 billion for fiscal 1957; $1,250 million for fiscal 1958; $1,500 million for fiscal 1959; and $2 billion for each of fiscal years 1960-61.

In its bill, the Senate did not spell out any method of providing special funds for the highway expansion program. The Constitution assigns to the House responsibility for initiating any revenue-producing legislation. Thus, had S 1048 become law in the form passed by the Senate, money to carry out the program would have come from the general fund of the Treasury.

HR 7474 was a "pay-as-you-drive" proposal which would have authorized $24 billion over 13 years for improving the National System of Interstate Highways, plus nearly $12 billion for primary and secondary roads. The federal share of the program would have been financed through a 16-year levy of additional taxes on trucks, buses, fuel, tires, and inner tubes. The states would have provided another $13 billion.

The prospect of the growing number of vehicles turning the nation's roads into a vast traffic jam prompted 1955 attempts to expand and modernize the highway system. Studies showed enough motor vehicles in 1955 to cover every traffic lane in the United States with trucks, autos, and buses at 700 foot intervals.

In addition, the highway system had become vital to peacetime economy and wartime safety. The problem was to find a program that state governments, business organizations, and individual taxpayers would support and could afford.

For precedent, Congressmen could examine an ever-broadening program of federal aid for state roads dating back to 1806, when the federal government improved the National Pike between Cumberland, Md., and Wheeling, W. Va.

LEGISLATIVE GUIDEPOSTS

Other significant developments in the federal highway program which formed part of the backdrop for the 1955 proposals:

1893 -- Congress created the Office of Road Inquiry to study methods of road making, publish material on the subject, and build short "example" roads throughout the country.

1912 -- The first federal aid for highways was authorized; $500 million was approved for an experimental program of rural road construction.

1916 -- The Federal-Aid Road Act was enacted, foundation for the federal-state highway programs. The Act provided federal grants for approved roads. The states were required to supervise construction of the roads and maintain them through highway departments. The Act authorized $5 million in federal aid for the fiscal year 1917.

1921 -- The Federal Highway Act required state highway departments, in cooperation with the federal government, to designate a system of principal interstate and intercounty roads. Use of federal-aid funds was restricted to this system. States were required to match federal aid with 50 percent of the construction cost of any approved project.

1932 -- The federal government was authorized to loan money to the states for use in matching federal-aid highway funds.

1934 -- Congress granted permission for use of 1.5 percent of regular federal-aid funds for surveys, plans, and engineering investigations.

1940-41 -- The federal government was permitted to finance entire engineering cost and 75 percent of construction cost of roads needed for national defense.

1944 -- The Federal-Aid Act, for the first time authorized specific funds for city road improvements. Prior emphasis had been on surfacing rural roads. The Act also authorized the National System of Interstate Highways, a special network of roads not to exceed 40,000 miles. The Act stipulated the roads would be located so as "to connect by routes, as direct as practicable, the principal metropolitan areas, cities and industrial centers, to serve the national defense, and to connect at suitable border points with routes of continental importance in the Dominion of Canada and the Republic of Mexico."

1946 -- The regular federal-aid program was resumed on a larger scale. Federal-aid authorization reached $500 million.

1952 -- For the first time, a specific allocation was made for the National System of Interstate Highways.

The amount of federal aid authorized for roads between 1948 and 1954:*

System	1948	1950	1952	1954
	(In millions of dollars)
Primary	$202.5	$225	$247.5	$315
Secondary	135	150	165	210
Urban	112.5	125	137.5	175
Subtotal	$450.0	$500	$550.0	$700
Interstate	0	0	25.0	175
TOTAL	$450.0	$500	$575.0	$875

(Source: S Rept 350, First Session, 84th Congress.)

In the Interstate System, federal participation is limited to 60 percent of cost of construction. In public land states this can be increased by four-tenths of the percentage of the area of the state that is public land. All other participation is limited to 50 percent of cost of construction. In public land states, this can be increased by one-half of the percentage of the area of the state that is public land.

For the Primary System, allotments are made in proportion to area, population, and mileage of post roads, each being given equal weight. For the Interstate System, one-half of funds are apportioned as in the Primary System and one-half on the basis of total population. For the Secondary System, apportionments are made as in the Primary System, with rural population replacing total population. For Urban Projects, allotments are in proportion to population in municipalities of 5,000 persons or more.

The Federal-Aid Highway Acts, 1948-54, were for two-year periods. In the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1954, approved May 6, Congress directed the Secretary of Commerce to "make a comprehensive study of all phases of highway financing, including a study of the costs of completing the several systems of highways in the several states..."

On July 12, 1954, President Eisenhower, through Vice President Richard M. Nixon, proposed a $50 billion joint federal-state modernization of the nation's highways designed to give the United States, by 1970, adequate roads for an estimated population of 200 million persons.

Speaking from the President's notes at the 46th annual Conference of Governors at Bolton Landing, N.Y., Nixon outlined a four-point program for the nation's "obsolete highway net" to cut down accidents and "meet the needs" of any future atomic war. The President, in State College, Pa., to attend the funeral of Mrs. Milton Eisenhower, wife of his brother, had proposed:

"1. A grand plan for a properly articulated system that solves the problems of speedy, safe transcontinental travel; inter-city communication; access highways and farm-to-market movements; metropolitan area congestion....

"2. A financing proposal based on self-liquidation of each project where that is possible -- through tolls or the assured increase in gas tax revenues; or federal help where the national interest demands it....

"3. A cooperative alliance between the federal government and the states so that local government -- the most efficient sort of government in the administration of funds -- will be the manager of its own area....

"4. Very probably, a program initiated by the federal government with state cooperation for the planning and construction of a modern interstate highway system; empowered, for example, to advance funds or guarantee the obligations of localities or states which undertake to construct new or modernize existing highways."

The President also asked the conference to recommend a program to meet highway needs. The governors named a special highway committee to carry out the request.

On Sept. 7, 1954, President Eisenhower appointed his own national highway advisory committee under the chairmanship of Gen. Lucius D. Clay (ret.). The governors' highway committee began its study about the same time.

GOVERNORS' REPORT

Gov. Robert F. Kennon (D La.) Dec. 3, 1954, presented the President with the governors' recommendations:

- Spend $101 billion -- $30 billion to come from federal funds -- over a 10-year period for an expanded highway system.
- Divide the federal contribution of $30 billion into $22.5 billion for the National System of Interstate Highways, $5.5 billion for other highways normally getting federal funds, and "an undetermined amount" for urban-acess roads.
- Retain existing formulas for determining state and federal shares of highway projects except for the National System of Interstate Highways to be improved almost entirely at government expense.
- Retain existing federal taxes on motor fuels and lubricating oils; no new taxes on highway user items.
- Permit "due credit" to states that constructed roads within the interstate system of their own accord.
- Provide for conference among state and federal officials to determine which roads should be constructed as limited acess facilities and which rights-of-way should be obtained first.

President Eisenhower Jan. 1, 1955, in his State of the Union message, again called for a highway program:

"A modern, efficient highway system is essential to meet the needs of our growing population, our expanding economy, and our national security. We are accelerating our highway improvement program as rapidly as possible under existing state and federal laws and authorizations. However, this effort will not in itself assure our people of an adequate highway system. On my recommendation, this problem has been carefully considered by the Conference of State Governors and by a special Advisory Committee on a National Highway Program, composed of leading private citizens. I have received the recommendations of the Governors' Conference and will shortly receive the views of the special Advisory Committee. Aided by their findings, I shall submit on Jan. 27 detailed recommendations which will meet our most pressing national highway needs."

Advisory Committee Report

The Clay committee submitted its report to President Eisenhower Jan. 11, 1955. The report repeated the governors' contention that the necessary highway program for the next 10 years would cost $101 billion. The Clay committee study was made in cooperation with a special committee from the Conference and with the Inter-agency Committee of the Federal Agencies.

BOND PROPOSAL

The Clay committee recommended creation of a Federal Highway Corporation to issue $20 billion worth of 3 percent bonds for the National System of Interstate Highways. The bonds would not count as part of the federal debt.

Full cost of the $20 billion in bonds would reach nearly $32 billion, including interest. The Clay committee estimated federal gasoline and lubricating oil taxes -- at current per-gallon rates -- would feed nearly $56 billion into the Treasury during the 30-year term of the bond issues. Subtracting nearly $19 billion -- the cost of the continuing $623 million a year program -- the committee found that $37 billion would remain. That would pay off the bonds and cover the $5 billion not raised through bonds.

Ordinarily, less is spent on highways than is collected from motor fuel and oil taxes. The committee's proposal would channel into highways money that normally would be spent on other federal programs.

There had been frequent suggestions that revenue from gasoline and oil taxes be reserved for highway expenditures, but the committee rejected such formal earmarking. The proposed corporation would pay off its bonds from regular Congressional appropriations. The committee noted the close relationship between costs and tax revenue merely as evidence that the project could be self-liquidating.

NEED FOR HIGHWAY PROGRAM

Highway expansion would more than pay for itself indirectly, the committee contended. Proposed improvements, it said, would cut transportation costs about one cent a mile. And modern transportation would help the economy grow. Aside from dollars and cents, the committee said, modern highways would reduce the accident toll and help place the nation on a sound defense footing. Others had emphasized the anti-depression value of a big road program as a pump-primer.

Although the highway program would be the biggest single construction project on record, the committee said expenditures would not be out of line with the expanding economy. Highway spending would total about 2.3 percent of the gross national product during the 10-year program, compared with 0.9 percent in 1953 and a high point of 1.8 percent in 1931.

The committee made no specific suggestions on how states could pay their increased share, except that federal assumption of the interstate-highway burden would release state funds. Limited use of toll roads was approved. The committee said it was "confident" the states would "step up to this challenge."

FINANCING PLANS

The Clay committee suggested the following plan for financing the federal government's proposed $25 billion share of the $27 billion program for modernizing the interstate highway system:

- Construction expenditures would start at $1 billion in 1956, rise to $2.9 billion annually in 1960-63, and dip to $2.5 billion in 1965.

- Bond issues, totaling $20,235,000,000 would start at $500 million in 1956, rise to $2.5 billion in 1963, and dip to $2,135,000,000 by 1965.
- In each of the 10 years 1956-65, the difference between construction expenditures and bond proceeds would be made up by appropriations from general revenues. These appropriations, totaling $4,765,000,000, would start at $500 million, rise to $600 million in 1958, and dip to $365 million by 1965.
- Interest, totaling $11,548,000,000 would be paid annually in 1957-87. Principal would be paid off in 10 installments during 1967-87. The biggest payment of interest plus principal would be made in 1979, when the total would be $2,824,000,000.

HIGHWAY NEEDS

Total construction needs of the U.S. highway system for the next 10 years (1955-64), as outlined by the Clay committee:

Highway System	Amount
Interstate - rural	$13,052,000,000
Interstate - urban	10,862,000,000

PLAN ATTACKED

Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.), Senate Finance Committee, Jan 15 said the Clay program would "violate financing principles, defy budgetary control, and evade federal debt law." He dismissed as "legerdemain" the advisors' key plan for financing the federal share of the program through bonds.

Byrd outlined a plan which emphasized states' rights. The federal government would cut its gasoline tax from two cents to one-half cent a gallon, permitting states to raise their taxes and build more highways with less control by Washington. Acceptance of the Federal Highway Corporation plan, Byrd predicted, would lead to "endless outlays" for other programs.

The American Automobile Association Jan. 24 told President Eisenhower the 10-year development program proposed by the Clay committee "has a pork-barrel and political potential of serious dimensions." In a letter to the President, AAA President Andrew J. Sordoni said the organization favored a large-scale nighway program but vigorously opposed some aspects of the advisory committee report.

EISENHOWER MESSAGE

President Eisenhower Feb. 22 asked Congress for "comprehensive and quick" action to improve the nation's "inadequate" highway network.

The President did not specifically endorse the recommendations of his Advisory Committee on a National Highway program, but asked Congress to consider that report, as well as a Bureau of Public Roads' study on highway financing ordered in 1954.

Mr. Eisenhower said the two reports "show that a 10-year construction program to modernize all our roads and streets will require expenditure of $101 billion by all levels of government." The studies constituted, he said, an "exhaustive examination of the national highway system, its problems and their remedies."

He listed four reasons for improving the nation's highways: reduce accidents, lower the cost of vehicle operation, make possible quick evacuation of cities in case of atomic attack, and alleviate existing and prospective traffic congestion.

QUESTION OF FINANCING

As to the financing of the program, the President did not mention his Advisory Committee's controversial proposal that a federal corporation issue over $20 billion in interest-bearing bonds. But he said he was "inclined to the view" that special bond issues would be sounder than straight appropriations from the Treasury. (White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the language constituted endorsement of the advisory group's proposal.)

Although the Advisory group opposed earmarking receipts from federal gasoline and oil taxes as payment for the federal share of the highway program, the President said financing should be based on "revenues from present gas and diesel oil taxes, augmented in limited instances with tolls." The tax receipts could be "pledged" for repayment of highway bonds, Mr. Eisenhower added.

The President met with Democratic and Republican Congressional leaders Feb. 21 to discuss his highway program. On Feb. 22 Sen. Francis Case (R. S.D.) introduced a bill (S 1160), co-sponsored by the ranking members of the Public Works Committee, Sens. Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) and Edward Martin (R Pa.), to carry on the program. Chavez said, however, he did not agree with all provisions of the bill.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works Public Roads Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 21 to April 15, intermittently, on S 1048, introduced by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) and S 1160, the administration-backed program. S 1048 proposed expanding the existing federal-aid system and the National System of Interstate Highways.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 21 -- Francis V. duPont, consultant on highways to the Secretary of Commerce, and C.D. Curtiss, Commissioner of the Bureau of Public Roads, outlined the need for an expanded highway program.

Feb. 23 -- Matt Triggs of the American Farm Bureau Federation opposed any increase in federal contributions to highway construction. Lloyd C. Halvorson of the National Grange approved the increase for primary, secondary, and urban roads provided in S 1048, and favored the fuller federal payment for interstate network roads called for in S 1160.

George D. Riley of the AFL said S 1048 would make "a substantial contribution" toward meeting highway needs.

A provision in the Administration bill that would utilize for 30 years any gasoline tax revenues over $622.5 million annually for payment on highway bonds was criticized by Gore and Case, who said he introduced S 1160 without reading it.

Feb. 25 -- George T. McCoy of California, president, and Rex Whitton of Missouri and R. H. Baldock of Oregon, directors, Association of State Highway Officials, asked for additional money for roads and suggested combining features of both bills. Increased federal funds in S 1048 were needed for primary, farm, and urban road systems, while S 1160 offered the better plan for interstate highways, they said. John A. Baker of the National Farmers Union called the President's plan a "windfall to financiers."

GOVERNORS' VIEWS

March 2 -- Gov. Robert F. Kennon (D La.), representing the Governors' Conference, said there was "a crying need" for a highway program, but declined to take a position on either of the bills. Gov. Lane Dwinell (R N.H.) said it would be "wise to examine the boldest and most courageous plan of all -- that of doing the job on as close to a pay-as-you-go basis as possible."

Gov. Walter J. Kohler (R Wis.) supported the President's program. He said the Governors' Conference thought states should be reimbursed for money spent on toll roads that become part of an interstate network. All three said the government should assure most of the expense of the projected interstate system.

Ex-Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, (D Colo., 1937-55), currently Colorado's governor, urged enactment of S 1048 or adoption of an expanded program under existing law. The President's proposal for a federal corporation to issue bonds for highway building was assailed by Johnson as "just bad business." He said "we should face the issue and go right out and raise taxes."

Sen. Edward Martin (R Pa.), ranking minority Committee member, suggested increasing the federal gasoline tax by 1-1½ cents a gallon to finance new roads.

March 4 -- C. A. Stoldt of the Oklahoma State Highway Department said he favored S 1048, but wanted a greater federal share in interstate roads. Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.), a member of the Subcommittee, called the Administration highway plan a "bonanza" for bankers. Neuberger supported a proposal to raise federal gasoline taxes to finance an expanded highway program.

"PIECEMEAL" BILL OPPOSED

March 10 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks said S 1048 was a piecemeal plan and that a highway project "of this magnitude cannot be undertaken successfully on a piecemeal basis anymore." Weeks called S 1160 a "constructive and realistic" proposal. Chairman Gore said S 1160 emphasized high-speed cross-country roads, but involved "de-emphasis" of all other highways.

March 11 -- Chairman Clay of the President's Advisory Committee on a National Highway Program called it "economic folly" not to go ahead with an expanded highway program. He said the Administration program was aimed at giving the nation highway standards of 1975 in a building program to be finished in 1965.

March 14 -- James L. Bossemeyer of the National Association of Travel Organizations saw benefits in both bills. S.E. Wiseman of the American Toll Ways Authority recommended a nationwide system of toll roads. Irving Reed, an Alaskan highway engineer, urged that Alaska be included in any federal program.

March 16 -- James J. Nance of the American Automobile Manufacturers Association urged enactment of the Administration program.

Weeks submitted a table of Administration estimates on how much highway building would be accomplished under the conflicting proposals: He said under S 1160, the interstate system would be 100 percent finished in 10 years, compared to 31 percent under S 1048. S 1160 would finish 25 percent of primary road needs and 27 percent of secondary roads, compared to 49 and 41 percent of the primary and secondary road requirements to be completed under S 1048.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO PROPOSAL

March 18 -- Sen. Byrd said the Administration program was "perfectly unjust" and provided "windfalls" to favored states. Byrd said enactment of S 1160 would "destroy sound budgetary procedure and take the longest step yet toward concentrating power in the federal government." He supported a pay-as-you-go highway plan, suggested repeal of the federal 2-cent gasoline tax so that states could reimpose it, advocated continuation of federal aid to primary, secondary, and urban road systems. John Harper of the National Oil Jobbers Council also opposed S 1160.

March 22 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey said he would not object to Congress raising the federal gasoline tax in order to finance the program on a pay-as-you-go basis. Humphrey favored S 1160 in principle, said provision was made in it for keeping possible inflationary effects of the program under control.

March 23 -- Sens. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) and Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) criticized both bills for not providing for civil defense needs. They said the measures overlooked the need for rapid evacuation of target areas. Kefauver offered amendments to provide evacuation routes. Maj. Gen. Paul F. Yount, chief of Army transportation, endorsed S 1160 on behalf of the Department of Defense.

March 24 -- Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson urged consideration of civil defense needs in any highway legislation approved. He said he could not present specific proposals, but asked for "broad language recognizing civil defense needs."

March 28 -- Comptroller General Joseph Campbell opposed the Administration program because of what he termed "objectionable" methods of financing through bond issues. Campbell said he supported the position of the General Accounting Office that money borrowed by the government under the Administration program should be part of the public debt.

March 29 -- Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., supported S 1160, said that the "goodwill and sense of responsibility" of Congress would guarantee payment of bonds issued under the proposed plan. Brownell said "comparatively minor amendments" would meet objections to the issuance of bonds for interstate highway construction.

ROADBUILDERS FOR CLAY PLAN

March 31 -- An official of the American Road Builders Association, J.N. Robertson, said road builders could handle the Administration's $101 billion program with "economy and dispatch" even though the task would be one that "staggers the imagination."

April 1 -- Carl E. Fritts of the Automotive Safety Foundation said a modern road system could save 3,500 lives a year. He testified that the death rate on modern, controlled, limited-access highways had been less than half that on parallel roads not as modern.

Sidney J. Williams of the National Safety Council said that if traffic increased 50 percent in the next 10 years as had been estimated, accidents would take about 55,000 lives a year if roads were not improved. Traffic accidents in 1954 claimed about 36,300 persons.

H.A. Thomson of the Pennsylvania State Association of Township Supervisors said his group did not favor any of the financing provisions in the bills under study, added that local roads were as necessary as interstate highways.

April 13 -- Members of Congress from Colorado and Utah, and Gov. Johnson (Colo.) urged that the highway between Denver and Salt Lake City be placed in the federal interstate highway system as proposed April 13 in a bill (S 1668) introduced by Sen. Eugene D. Millikin (R Colo.) and seven other Senators.

April 14 -- Representatives of public utility groups and the American Trucking Association testified.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee April 29 voted to report to the full Committee an amended version of S 1048 providing $12,250,000,000 in federal funds for a five-year highway program. The bill would also raise the federal gasoline tax 1 cent a gallon (to 3 cents a gallon) and limit truck weights.

Subcommittee Chairman Gore said the final version of the bill was a compromise between the original version of S 1048 and the Administration bill (S1160), and was approved by a 6-3 vote. He described the bill as "the first five-year installment" of a long-range program. The Subcommittee rejected an Administration provision to finance the road program through a new federal borrowing agency.

The full Committee May 6 rejected, by a 4-8 vote, the Administration's 10-year plan. On May 13 it reported S 1048 (S Rept 350) by an 8-5 vote. The proposed increase in the federal gasoline tax was dropped from the bill. Included was a provision requiring workers on interstate highways to be paid the "prevailing wage" as provided in the Davis-Bacon Act of 1931.

MINORITY VIEWS

Sens. Prescott Bush (R Conn.), Norris Cotton (R N.H.), and Martin, in a minority report, said they objected to S 1048 because:

"It will not build within 10 years, or any other given period, the National System of Interstate Highways essential in peacetime to the growth of our prosperity and in time of war vital to survival.

"It offers no plan to finance construction of the Interstate System except through higher taxes and increased general debt.

"It creates an illusion of roads which will not be there.

"It places burdensome and expensive federal controls over highway construction and operation which heretofore have been left exclusively to the states.

"It discriminates against states which have had the initiative to go forward with highways, both free and toll, serving the interstate system."

The minority trio contended S 1048 "scatters billions of politically-guided federal dollars over the country for the next five years as though they were shot from a blunderbuss. These widely scattered dollars will not build those roads having the greatest national interest. They will not bring about the completion of the National System of Interstate Highways so vitally needed."

Floor Action

The Senate May 25, by voice vote, passed S 1048, amended, after four days of debate. A recommittal motion by Prescott Bush (R Conn.) was defeated by a roll-call vote of 39-50. (For voting, see chart, p. 125.)

The Senate rejected, by a 31-60 roll-call vote, an amendment by Martin to substitute the provisions of the Administration-backed bill (S 1160) for those of S 1048. The provision in S 1048 requiring payment of "prevailing" wages to interstate highway workers was eliminated by voice vote.

PRIMARY, SECONDARY ROADS

PROVISIONS -- As approved by the Senate, S 1048 would have:

Authorized appropriation of $900 million annually for fiscal years 1957-61 to be distributed as follows: $400 million for projects on the federal-aid primary highway system; $300 million for the federal-aid secondary system; and $200 million for the federal-aid primary highways in urban areas and for approved urban extensions of the secondary system.

Apportioned the money to states according to the following formula: one-third in the ratio of a state's area to total U.S. area; one-third in the ratio of a state's rural population to the total U.S. rural population, as shown by the 1940 census; and one-third in the ratio of the mileage of a state's rural delivery and star routes to total such mileage in the U.S.

Provided that sums given any state would be available for expenditure in that state for two years after the end of the fiscal year for which they were authorized, but then would lapse.

INTERSTATE SYSTEM

Authorized the following amounts for construction and improvement of the National System of Interstate Highways, including extension through urban areas: $1 billion for fiscal 1957; $1,250,000,000 for fiscal 1958; $1,500,000,000 for fiscal 1959; and $2 billion for each of fiscal years 1960 and 1961.

Increased the mileage limitation on the National System of Interstate Highways from 40,000 miles to 42,500 miles.

Apportioned one-half of the funds for interstate highways in the ratio of a state's population to total U.S. population, but provided no state would receive less than .75 percent of the total interstate appropriation. The other half would be apportioned according to the formula for distribution of total highway funds.

Provided that the government would pay 90 percent of the total cost of interstate highways; in addition, the government would pay part, but not more than one-half, of the remaining 10 percent in any state containing unreserved lands and nontaxable Indian lands.

Prescribed weights and dimensions of vehicles used on the National System of Interstate Highways.

Allowed the continued operation of all vehicles which could lawfully operate on July 1, 1955, despite the new weight-dimension standards.

Permitted states, if the governor, state highway department, and Secretary of Commerce approved, to shift 20 percent of each of their federal-aid primary, secondary, and primary-urban funds to one of the other funds.

Permitted the Secretary of Commerce to acquire lands, including control of access from adjoining lands, required for construction of projects in the National System of Interstate Highways, with costs of acquiring the land to be paid from state highway construction and improvement funds.

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to submit to the House and Senate Public Works Committees by Feb. 1, 1956, recommendations for the best utilization of the National System of Interstate Highways in civil defense target areas.

FEDERAL ROADS

Other provisions of the bill would have:

Granted the Secretary of Commerce authority to spend not more than $100 million for fiscal 1956 to acquire rights-of-way for federal-aid highway projects.

Authorized appropriations of $22.5 million for forest highways and $24 million for forest development trails and roads for each fiscal year 1958-61.

Authorized $12.5 million for each fiscal year 1958-61 for construction and improvement of roads and trails in national parks.

Authorized $11 million for each fiscal year 1958-61 for highway construction and improvement within Indian reservations.

Authorized $2 million for each fiscal year 1956-61 for completing sections of federal-aid highways lying entirely within the public domain.

Granted authority to the appropriate Cabinet Secretary to obligate funds, approve projects, and enter into contracts for forest highways and trails, parkways, and Indian roads one year in advance of the year for which funds would be authorized.

Repealed fiscal 1957 authorizations for the federal-aid highway systems included in the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1954.

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to reimburse, from federal funds, up to 50 percent of the cost of relocation of utilities caused by construction of federal highway projects.

Required approval by the Secretary of Commerce of a certified statement by state highway departments that design and construction of projects were in accord with procedures approved in the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1950. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VI, 1950, pp. 602ff.)

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to report not later than Feb. 1, 1959, on the success of the program and to make recommendations in regard to its extension.

Continued existing laws with respect to bypassing cities and towns with federal-aid highway projects.

Required that agreements between the Secretary of Commerce and a state highway department provide that the state would not add additional entrances or exits to a highway without approval by the Secretary.

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to encourage states to consider multiple-state compacts for construction and operation of toll roads as a supplement to the federal-aid highway systems.

Granted the consent of Congress to states wishing to negotiate interstate compacts providing for construction and operation of interstate toll roads.

Required that such compacts be ratified by state legislatures and approved by Congress before becoming binding on the states.

Required states which plan to accept funds under the federal-aid highway program to submit a plan for carrying out the purposes of the act.

Made the act effective upon its enactment.

NEW CONCEPT DESCRIBED

DEBATE -- May 20 -- Albert Gore (D Tenn.) -- S 1048, as reported, would authorize a program "whose magnitude has perhaps been unequaled in our history, with the exception of programs for the prosecution of war and measures for the preservation of the national security." The bill would chart "a new federal policy and an entirely new concept of highway construction." It would "permit maximum flexibility to meet the varying needs of the states" and would "insure proper integration of our highway network and the maintenance of adequate standards of construction."

Edward Martin (R Pa.) -- "The pay-as-you-use plan, based on federal gasoline and special fuel tax revenues, offers a sound basis for complete liquidation of the indebtedness, which cannot be avoided if we are to go forward without delay on a highway program...The most careful consideration must be given to the method of financing...without imposing new and heavier taxes."

Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- "When the time comes, very few states will fail to find the means...to match the federal funds in the committee bill. But...if they do it, many states will...tie up so many of their resources that they will feel the pinch in every last state activity, including public education."

May 23 -- Martin -- The strong feature of the Administration bill (S 1160) was that it would complete roads "in 10 years for a need of 20 years from now, and they will be paid for in 30 years."

Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- "The Gore bill (S 1048)...does far more justice and equity to the majority of the states...than does the Administration bill...(which would) concentrate so vast a proportion of additional highway revenues on the interstate system that rural and secondary road improvements would be virtually abandoned." The board or corporation created under the Administration bill to administer highway funds "would be subjected to the most intense political pressure...with the result that many of the smaller states...might be discriminated against..."

Walter F. George (D Ga.) -- A provision, which he opposed, to give the government control of advertising within 500 feet of the interstate highways looked "very strongly toward federal control of what I think are matters which ought to remain within the jurisdiction of the states...The bill will not be passed if it contains this provision."

May 24 -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- The provision prescribing truck weights and dimensions "would work grave injustices to the trucking industry and to all operators of large trucks and combinations."

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- If the Administration substitute was adopted, "Congress will have lost control of our road-building program and the expenditure of the taxpayers' funds. If bonds are issued, Congress will have no control whatsoever over the manner in which the proceeds are spent."

May 25 -- Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) -- The financing method in S 1048 had not been "clearly thought out... Funds would be allocated to states which would not have available to them money with which to match the federal amounts...The moneys would simply be resting in the fund year after year..."

Charles E. Potter (R Mich.) -- "The Gore bill would give Michigan only $278 million -- less than half the amount which is required. The substitute bill...would give us an interstate highway system which is considered adequate."

Martin -- S 1048 represents "an unrealistic approach to the problem of prompt completion of the interstate system...The authorization of S 1048 is...less than 30 percent of the estimated cost of the system. This amount will not build the roads and, being inadequate to do the whole job, will result in greatly increased costs."

(See Congressional Record, May 20, 23, 24, 25.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 23 -- Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) -- Eliminate language giving the government exclusive right to control advertising "on lands adjoining and not exceeding 500 feet from the right-of-way" of interstate highways. Voice.

May 25 -- Dennis Chavez (D N.M.) -- Eliminate section providing that workers on interstate highways would be paid the "prevailing wage" in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act. Standing.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Modified amendment to specify that funds could not be refused any state which allowed continued operation on its public highways of any vehicle which could be legally operated on July 1, 1955. Voice.

Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Delete provision which would have reserved the right of federal reimbursement to states of their costs in relocating certain public utilities facilities. Voice.

John Stennis (D Miss.) -- Delete section providing that no more than 2 percent of any state's federal-aid highway funds could be used for relocation of certain utilities. Voice.

Kerr -- Require reimbursement to be decided according to the laws, but not the "practice," of states. Voice.

Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- Direct Secretary of Commerce to report to the House and Senate Public Works Committees by Feb. 1, 1956, recommendations for the best utilization of interstate highways in civil-defense target areas. Voice.

Two amendments to the Martin substitute were accepted but, as the substitute itself was later rejected, these amendments had no effect on the bill:

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- Authorize an increase of 2,500 miles in the National System of Interstate Highways as provided in S 1160. Voice.

Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) -- Eliminate language in S 1160 allowing a state credit for an existing toll highway if it met certain standards. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Edward Martin (R Pa.) -- Substitute the provisions of the Administration bill (S 1160) for the provisions of S 1048. Roll-call, 31-60.

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Require autos and trucks using the National System of Interstate Highways to buy special annual license stamps costing from $4 to $200 according to weight. Voice.

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) -- Make additions to certain highways effective only upon proclamation by the President that at least 30,000 miles of the National System of Interstate Highways had been constructed or improved so as to be adequate. Voice.

Holland -- Delete amendment which would refuse highway funds to states not conforming with prescribed weights and dimensions for vehicles on such highways. Standing.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HEARINGS -- Began April 18 on HR 4260, HR 4261, HR 4364, HR 4518, HR 7072, and S 1048---all proposals for improving the nation's highway program. The hearings on all but the financing phase of the bills ended June 3.

TESTIMONY -- April 18 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, supporting HR 4260, said the necessity for an interstate express highway system "justifies unusual procedures and credit financing." He backed a provision calling for the issuance of federal bonds by a federal highway corporation which would be outside the national debt limit.

Rep. Brady Gentry (D Texas) said the plan overlooked additional highway needs during the 30-year period of the program as it would earmark gasoline tax revenues to pay off the bonds. Weeks said the highways to be built were expected to last 30 years, adding that "the basic issue...is the need to obtain in 10 years an interstate system adequate for the next 20 or 30 years."

April 19 -- Public Roads Commissioner C.D. Curtiss and Francis V. duPont, a Commerce Department highway consultant, supported HR 4260.

April 20 -- Presidential highway advisor Lucius D. Clay backed HR 4560. He said other programs would not provide a national highway system "within a reasonable length of time."

April 21 -- Maj. Gen. Paul F. Yount, Army chief of transportation, generally supported HR 4560 and discussed military transportation needs.

CLAY DEFENDS BONDS

April 22 -- Clay said the proposal in HR 4260 to finance highway building through a federal highway corporation outside the national debt limit was the "most conservative way of handling the program."

Rep. Gentry told Clay he had done a good job as head of the advisory commission but hadn't been bold enough. Gentry said the only way to solve the road problem was to put through a sizable increase in the federal gasoline tax.

April 26 -- Keith L. Seegmiller of the National Association of County Officials urged greater attention to secondary roads. "It is of small consolation to us in the county courthouses," he said, "to know that a fine highway has been built over the mountain, perhaps some 30 miles away. Our immediate concern is how to get over the mountain..."

Seegmiller and William C. MacDougall of the County Supervisors Association of California generally supported the Administration plan for greater aid.

April 27 -- Representatives of the Private Truck Council of America, Inc. and the Truck Trailer Manufacturing Association endorsed the objectives of HR 4260.

April 28 -- John Harper of the National Oil Jobbers Council opposed provisions of HR 4260 which would encourage toll roads.

GOVERNORS DIFFER ON PROGRAMS

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- The President's proposed highway program was backed by three Democratic and three Republican governors from New England states meeting at the Governors' Conference May 2 and 3. They said the Administration program would give New England more roads faster and at less cost than any other highway proposal.

But Govs. Averell Harriman (D N.Y.) and George M. Leader (D Pa.) favored the "pay-as-you-go" highway plan of Sen. Gore. Govs. Orville L. Freeman (D Minn.) and Hugh L. White (D Miss.) criticized the Administration proposal, on grounds it might lead to "political favoritism" among the states. Gov. Allan Shivers (D Texas) and Gov. G. Mennen Williams (D Mich.) protested the federal government's gasoline tax, which would be continued under both plans.

Speaking before the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. May 2, Lester L. Colbert, president of the Chrysler Corp., said anything smaller than Mr. Eisenhower's proposed 10-year, $101 billion program would be "less than enough to fill the country's needs."

FEDERAL ENCROACHMENT SEEN

May 3 -- As hearings resumed, Matt Triggs of the American Farm Bureau Federation said the Administration program would mean further federal "encroachment" on states' rights.

May 4 -- Governors of Wisconsin, Louisiana, Connecticut, New Jersey, Kansas, Washington, and Nebraska spoke in favor of the Administration program.

May 5 -- Officials of the State Highway Commission of New Mexico and George Koss, president of the Associated General Contractors of American, Inc., favored HR 4260.

May 9 -- Mayor Roy Hofheinz of Houston, Texas, representing the Conference of Mayors, favored the Administration highway program. Also testifying was Robert Moses, New York coordinator for public works construction.

May 10, 11 -- Representatives of the American Association of State Highway Officials urged Congress to authorize an expanded road building program. The group did not suggest how the program should be financed.

May 12 -- Representatives of the National Grange and the American Trucking Association generally favored the Administration program.

May 16 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey upheld the Administration program and said gasoline taxes rather than a direct federal appropriation should be used to finance it. He said he wanted the aid to be kept outside the federal debt through a highway corporation because "where you have an earning asset like the new highway system, I think it is appropriate to use the installment buying system."

May 17 -- Comptroller General Joseph Campbell said the Administration's financing plan "is inadvisable because...the borrowings would not be included in the public debt obligations" of the U.S. He said he favored other aspects of the Administration program and recommended their financing through direct appropriations.

May 18 -- Mayors representing the American Municipal Association endorsed the Administration's revenue bond system of financing. They also stressed the need for quick improvement of roads to be used in evacuating cities in case of enemy attack.

May 19 -- Spokesmen for the National Safety Council and the Automotive Safety Foundation urged an extended highway program because, they said, it would help cut traffic accidents and lead to greater highway safety.

May 23 -- Spokesmen for Illinois and California generally supported the Administration bill.

May 24 -- James J. Nance, president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association and of the Studebaker-Packard Corp., said the Interstate highway system was the key to future expansion of traffic in the United States. "Unless emergency action is taken," Nance said, "the system will never catch up with growing traffic demands."

May 25 -- Generally favoring HR 4260 were representatives of highway and road builders' associations.

May 26 -- Representatives of the Association of American Railroads submitted a statement with several suggestions about the highway program.

Sen. Gore, sponsor of S 1048, urged enactment of the Senate-passed measure.

A meeting in Denver, Colo., June 1, of the governors of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, South Dakota, North Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, and Colorado resulted in a resolution urging Congress "to proceed expeditiously with the enactment of the pending road program" and the House to "bring the Senate bill (S 1048) more in harmony with the governors' highway proposal which was worked out by the Clay Committee."

SPECIAL HEARINGS

The House Public Works Committee, with members of the House Ways and Means Committee sitting in, devoted July 11-12 to hearings on tax increases on gasoline and other highway user items as recommended in HR 7072, introduced June 28 by Rep. George H. Fallon (D Md.), chairman of the Roads Subcommittee. The tax revenue anticipated over a 15-year period under the measure was $11.8 billion.

The tax increases proposed, effective for fiscal 1956-70, were:

Gasoline -- 3 cents a gallon (from 2 cents).

Diesel fuel -- 5 cents a gallon (from 2 cents).

Large tires -- 15 cents a pound (from 5 cents).

Large inner tubes -- 15 cents a pound (from 9 cents.)

Excise tax on trucks, buses, and trailers -- 10 percent (from 8 percent).

Camelback (for retreaded tires) -- 15 cents a pound (new tax).

TESTIMONY -- July 11 -- The American Trucking Associations said they'd rather have no highway bill at all than one financed by the proposed tax increases. The American Farm Bureau Federation said a higher gasoline tax would be "discriminatory" to farmers. The National Association of Independent Tire Dealers also opposed the proposed tax increases.

July 12 -- Secretary of Treasury Humphrey said the Administration special bonding plan "still offers the best method" of financing new highway construction. But, he said, he was willing to accept the Subcommittee's pay-as-you-go plan.

The tax plan was endorsed by the American Automobile Association and the American Association of Highway Officials. The National Grange and tire manufacturers opposed it.

ACTION -- July 13 -- The Committee rejected by a 14-19 vote the Administration's proposal to finance the program by issuing bonds. All Republicans except Bruce Alger (Texas) supported the Administration plan, all Democrats were against it. Also rejected, by a 4-27 vote, was a motion to cut proposed federal aid funds for urban roads.

The Committee approved a 12-year building program which called for $24 billion in federal funds for the interstate system.

July 14 -- The Committee tentatively approved the tax increases on gasoline and other highway user items described above.

July 15 -- Generally approved HR 7072.

July 18 -- Adopted a motion by Russell V. Mack (R Wash.) to reconsider the highway measure.

July 19 -- Mack attempted to kill the camelback tax, but instead the Committee made it applicable to large tires only. On the motion of John J. Dempsey (D N.M.), the Committee reduced the proposed tax increase on diesel fuel, setting it at 4 cents a gallon. The Committee then extended the new tax rates for an additional year, into mid-1971.

BILL REPORTED

July 21 -- Reported a "clean bill" (HR 7474 -- H Rept 1336) calling for a $48.5 billion road-building program over the next 13 years. HR 7474 authorized federal outlays of $35.5 billion, with the states to construct the highways and pay the remaining $13 billion. Increases in gasoline and highway use taxes were voted to bring in $12.4 billion in revenue for the federal share of the program.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House floor, major sections of HR 7474 would have:

Authorized the following taxes to run until mid-1971:

Gasoline -- 3 cents a gallon.
Diesel fuel -- 4 cents a gallon.
Large tires -- 15 cents a pound.
Large inner tubes -- 15 cents a pound.
Excise tax on buses, trucks, and trailers -- 10 percent.
Camelback -- 15 cents a pound on the compound used for retreading tires, but only for large passenger car tires and truck tires.

Exempted from the new taxes farmers and transit companies who could show that 75 percent of their business was done within city limits.

Provided for a 40,000-mile interstate highway system for which the federal government would pay $24 billion, the states $2.5 billion, through fiscal 1969.

Provided $725 million in federal funds for other federal-state roads in fiscal 1957, expressed an intent to make 12 more $25 million increases annually.

Provided $1.1 billion for roads in national parks and forests, paid for entirely by the federal government.

Required payment of prevailing wages in construction of interstate highways.

Authorized federal payments for half the cost of relocating utility lines.

Provided that sums given to states would be available for expenditure for two years after the end of the fiscal year for which they were authorized.

Prescribed weights and dimensions of vehicles allowed on the national interstate highway system.

Allowed the continued operation of all vehicles which could legally operate as of March 1, 1956, despite the new standards.

MINORITY VIEWS

Committee Members Robert E. Jones Jr. (D. Ala.), Frank E. Smith (D Miss.), T.A. Thompson (D La.), and Iris Faircloth Blitch (D Ga.) took exception to HR 7474.

"We feel that the tax features of the bill have been considered too hurriedly to be acted on by the Congress at the present time," they said.

They endorsed the rejection of the Clay committee proposal, however, declaring: "The Clay plan would cost the taxpayers of the country some $12 billion in interest that would build no roads....

"HR 7474 proposes to expend $24 billion in federal funds on a system of roads that totals only 40,000 miles (National System of Interstate Highways), by contrast with a total of 720,000 miles on the entire federal-aid system...If HR 7474 becomes law, more than two-thirds of all federal highway expenditures will be devoted to highways serving only one-seventh of the country's traffic."

UTILITY, WAGE PROVISIONS CRITICIZED

Additional minority views appeared in a separate opinion by Reps. Jones, Blitch, W. R. Hull, Jr. (D Mo.), Brady Gentry (D Texas), and Bruce Alger (R Texas).

They objected to a provision which would have authorized payment, for relocating utility lines, of "almost $1 billion during the next 13 years out of funds sorely needed for highway construction." They contended it might "become a permanent charge upon the highway users for service rendered not for them, but for others... The utilities will not pay one cent of it but they expect to occupy it, free of any charge."

Alger and Gentry, in another opinion, criticized a provision authorizing the Secretary of Labor to prescribe the prevailing wage for interstate highway construction workers. They said it was a matter "already being done by the state to the extent which local conditions require the state to take part."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- John V. Lawrence, managing director of American Trucking Associations, July 20 criticized "assertions" that the truck industry was "lobbying...to defeat the program (HR 7474) for a national defense highway system." Lawrence said "nothing could be further from the truth." He added that ATA "not only was one of the (program's) earliest, most vigorous and consistent supporters...but...was the first taxpaying group to testify publicly as to its willingness to accept additional federal taxes, if necessary, to make the program an actuality."

On July 22 ATA wired Congressmen that ATA's objections were directed at provisions of HR 7474 calling for higher taxes on diesel fuel and truck tires than on gasoline and automobile tires. Said ATA: "The same rate of tax for cars and trucks produces enormously greater tax payments per truck than per car."

Floor Action

The House July 27 rejected proposed highway legislation, defeating HR 7474 by a 123-292 roll-call vote. The Administration's proposed highway plan was rejected by a 193-221 roll call. The vote came on a motion to recommit HR 7474 and substitute the bond proposal. (For voting, see chart, p. 160.)

On July 26 the House adopted, on a 274-129 roll call, a rule (H Res 314) prohibiting amendments to the tax proposals included in HR 7474 but leaving the rest of the bill open to amendment.

President Eisenhower July 28 appealed to the House to "reconsider" highway legislation before adjourning. Emphasizing the nation's need for more highway construction, he said differences over financing methods "should not be permitted to deny our people these critically needed roads."

A possible compromise was offered in the House July 27 by Rep. Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.) but was ruled out of order. It would have kept the tax increases proposed by Democrats and added to the bill provisions setting up a corporation empowered to issue $15 billion in bonds, to mature in 20 years.

FARMERS, TRUCKERS PENALIZED

DEBATE -- July 26 -- Earl Wilson (R Ind.) -- The bill is "one of the largest tax bills ever" debated, but under the rule, it "cannot be remedied. You are ramming it down the throats of all farmers and truck drivers and a lot of business enterprises."

Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- The President's program for a 10-year, $31,225,000,000 highway program financed by bonds "will not raise taxes; it will not increase the federal debt;" it is supported by "the majority of the nation's governors and mayors."

George H. Fallon (D Md.) -- The Senate, "because of the huge interest cost of $11.5 billion and the mortgage on the highways of America for 30 years, voted down" the Administration plan. "We were told...that if we brought... a straight authorization bill" (similar to the Senate's) to the House floor, "the President would not sign it," because it would increase the national debt. "So we were faced with only one alternative,...the unpopular course of bringing a bill in here that will finance this program and build it in a period of 12 years and pay for it in a period of 15 years" by raising taxes.

Noah M. Mason (R Ill.) -- Opposed HR 7474 and supported the Administration plan because "the automobile and truck owners of America are now paying more than their fair share of the taxes."

Frank E. Smith (D Miss.) -- The Administration plan is based on "financial legerdemain" which would try to "conceal an addition to the national debt." The substitute proposed by T. Ashton Thompson (D La.) for a smaller highway program "is the most conservative and soundest approach" to the problem.

Gardner R. Withrow (R Wis.) -- "I have been literally deluged with telegrams and other communications from the people back home, asking me to spare them the added burden of this proposed increase in the federal gasoline tax."

William H. Ayres (R Ohio) -- "Coming from the rubber capital of the world and the largest trucking center in the U.S. (Akron)...I perhaps am responsible for bringing" those interests to Washington. "The railroads were lobbying behind the scenes" for HR 7474, asking for "a 50-cent-per-pound increase in tire taxes...I told my boys, 'You better come...' I do not think it is right for Congress to enact discriminatory legislation that will put the trucking industry at a disadvantage and give a competitor an advantage."

July 27 -- D. R. Matthews (D Fla.) -- The Democratic bill "is the proposal of fiscal responsibility, pay as you go, call an ace an ace and a spade a spade."

Russell V. Mack (R Wash.) -- The President, Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey, his fiscal advisers and most of the governors say the Administration plan "is financially sound and workable."

Paul C. Jones (D Mo.) -- The Administration's plan "merely offers a vehicle for a group of New York bankers to enrich themselves at the expense of the taxpayers. On a pay as you go basis we can raise sufficent funds to build all of the highways that could possibly be built."

COMPROMISE URGED

Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.) -- Urging "give and take" in order to pass a highway bill, he proposed combining the tax increase provisions with a modified bond proposal so that a bill could be taken to conference with the Senate, and "a good compromise bill" enacted.

(See Congressional Record, July 26, 27.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

July 26 -- Mack -- Amend substitute bill offered by Dondero (see below) to require that interstate highway workers be paid local prevailing wages, as prescribed in the Davis-Bacon Act of 1931. Voice.

July 27 -- J. Harry McGregor (R Ohio) -- Amend Dondero substitute to permit agreements between the Secretary of Commerce and state highway departments to insure competitive service stations and other facilities adjacent to interstate highways. Voice.

Robert E. Jones (D Ala.) -- Delete section of HR 7474 authorizing 50 percent reimbursement to states that pay public utilities for relocating lines on the highways. Standing, 125-75.

Frank M. Clark (D Pa.) -- Require that progress report by the Secretary of Commerce be submitted in 1956 (rather than 1957). Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

July 26 -- T. Ashton Thompson (D La.) -- Substitute for the bill a modified highway plan authorizing $1 billion for interstate highways for 10 years, $725 million for other highways, and omitting all tax provisions. Standing, 89-178.

July 27 -- George A. Dondero (R Mich.) -- Substitute for the bill the Administration plan for a corporation empowered to issue $21 billion in 30-year, interest-bearing bonds. Teller, 178-184.

James C. Wright, Jr. (D Texas) -- Cut authorization for the interstate highway system to an average of $1 billion annually. Standing, 55-115.

Earl Wilson (R Ind.) -- Deny funds to any state or city practicing segregation in restaurants, rest-rooms, or road construction. Standing, 24-102.

Bruce Alger (R Texas) -- Delete section of HR 7474 requiring payment of prevailing wages to highway construction workers. Voice.

Highway Aftermath

President Eisenhower July 28 declared that differences over financing methods should not "deny our people these critically needed roads."

"I am deeply disappointed," he said, "by the rejection by the House of Representatives of legislation to authorize a nationwide system of highways.

"The nation badly needs new highways. The good of our people, of our economy, and of our defense, requires that construction of these highways be undertaken at once...I would devoutly hope that the Congress would reconsider this entire matter before terminating this session."

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) the same day declared a compromise measure could be worked out at "this session if we really want to do it. I would favor a compromise in order to get some kind of a bill."

Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.) said, "There's no chance of getting the bill up again, and there will be great difficulty in the future for any bill at all except a straight authorization" (a bill which would authorize highway construction but not the taxes to pay for it.).

Rep. Russell V. Mack (R Wash.) made public a letter in which he urged the President to call a special session of Congress not later than Nov. 1, "to be devoted solely and exclusively to producing a highway law adequate to the nation's needs."

GOVERNORS URGE ACTION

Governors attending the 47th annual governors conference Aug. 10 called upon Congress to enact a national highway program immediately, but disagreed on how the program should be financed. Govs. G. Mennen Williams (D Mich.), Raymond Gary (D Okla.), and Walter J. Kohler (R Wis.) called for Congressional action at a special session in 1955. Govs. J. Hugo Aronson (R Mont.), Theodore R. McKeldin (R Md.) and Marvin Griffin (D Ga.) favored the Administration's 10-year highway program to be financed by a bond issue. But many governors criticized this proposal, notably James E. Folsom (D Ala.) and J. Bracken Lee (R Utah.). Gov. William G. Stratton (R Ill.) favored a five-year program, while Gov. Leo A. Hoegh (R Iowa) wanted a 15-year program.

After a meeting with President Eisenhower in Gettysburg, Pa., Nov. 17, Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks said the Administration was "leaning toward" a pay-as-you-go highway program in which federal funds would total $25 billion. The program, which was still in the planning stage, probably would require increased taxes on gasoline and other highway items, Weeks said.

Group Stands

Views expressed by some national organizations concerned with highway legislation:

Automobile Manufacturers' Association -- On May 24, 1955, it urged the federal government to pay most of the cost of the interstate system because of "its paramount national importance" and to increase aid for other roads.

National Grange -- Endorsed in principle President Eisenhower's highway program at its 88th annual session Nov. 10-18, 1954, in Spokane, Wash.

American Farm Bureau Federation -- Opposed "any expansion of federal participation in financing of highway construction" at its convention Dec. 12-16, 1954.

Independent Advisory Committee to the Trucking Industry, Inc. -- July 12 protested that tax increases on diesel oil and heavy tires proposed in HR 7474 were "rank injustice." The ACT, a labor-management committee, was headed by: Dave Beck, general president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, chairman; Burt Seymour, president of Associated Transport, Inc., and vice president of the American Trucking Associations, cochairman; Roy Fruehauf, president of Fruehauf Trailer Co., cochairman; and Walter Carey, chairman of the American Trucking Associations Foundation, cochairman.

For other organizations' views see Lobby Roundup, p. 673.)

TAX PROTESTS

Rep. George Fallon (D Md.), author of the pay-as-you-drive plan which failed in the House, said July 27 that more than 10,000 telegrams were delivered to the Capitol opposing tax features of the bill.

Other legislators gave these views of why legislation failed in the House July 27:

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas): "I think the people who are going to have to pay for those roads put on a propaganda thing and beat the bill."

Majority Leader McCormack: "Everyone wants a highway program but no one wants to pay for it. I have a sneaky idea that the truckers of the country played an important part in what happened."

COLORADO RIVER PLAN

S 500 -- Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 128) March 30, 1955.

• Passed by the Senate, amended, on a 58-23 roll-call vote April 20. (See p. 122.)

HR 3383 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 1087) July 8.

A billion dollar program to construct water storage facilities in the Upper Colorado River Basin stalled halfway through Congress in 1955. The Senate April 20 passed S 500 on a 58-23 roll-call vote, but the House shelved a similar bill until the second session of the 84th Congress.

The Senate-approved measure would authorize $1,092,999,800 worth of water storage projects in Colorado, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, and Wyoming.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Colorado River Storage Project." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 508-9).

Providing enough water to quench the future thirst of the Upper Colorado River Basin was the intent of several bills introduced in 1955.

The importance of water to the West's economy was realized as early as 1847, when Brigham Young's Latter-Day Saints built the first significant western irrigation project.

The federal government in 1902 embarked on its first large-scale project to send water into parched acreage in the West. The Reclamation Act of that year poured water into 17 western states. The result was lush, green fields by the 1906 harvest.

In subsequent years, dams which stored water for thirsty crops also put water to work turning generators. Hydroelectric power soon became a boon accompanying irrigation.

In 1954, the Interior Department's Bureau of Reclamation took stock. In 50 years, it had built 69 reclamation projects, irrigating 7.1 million acres, feeding water to 56 urban areas, and installing 4.7 million kilowatts of power capacity. The investment: $2.4 billion. The claimed return: $10 billion worth of crops, $6.8 billion in farm income, $10 billion in nonfarm income in reclamation project areas.

One of the most important lifelines in this growth was the Colorado River System. The lower basin, including parts of California, Nevada, and Arizona, was developed first. The growth of Southern California was particularly rapid.

COLORADO RIVER COMPACT

Soon after the turn of the century, the upper basin states of Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, and New Mexico became fearful that the states downstream might beat them to all the water claims. These fears led to a conference between upper and lower basin officials. They drafted the Colorado River Compact in 1922. By 1929 it had been ratified by the affected states.

The compact stipulated that the upper and lower basins each were to receive "the exclusive beneficial consumptive use" of 7.5 million acre-feet of Colorado River water a year (an acre-foot is enough water to cover one acre to the depth of one foot). Another conference in 1948 reaffirmed the provisions of the compact.

The Upper Colorado River Commission, representing the states of Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming, worked out a plan, in cooperation with the federal Bureau of Reclamation, designed to utilize their share of river water to the greatest extent possible.

The plan was the basis for two bills (HR 4449, S 1555) which were reported out of committee in 1954. Although both had Administration backing, neither came to a vote in the 83rd Congress.

President Eisenhower in his State of the Union Message Jan. 6, 1955, reasserted his support for the project: "The federal government must shoulder its own partnership obligations by undertaking projects of such complexity and size that their success requires federal development. In keeping with this principle, I again urge the Congress to approve the development of the Upper Colorado River Basin to conserve and assure better use of precious water essential to the future of the West."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs Subcommittee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 28 through March 5 on S 500, introduced by Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.).

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 28 -- Supporting the project were Fred G. Aandahl, Assistant Secretary of Interior; Sen. Dennis Chavez (D N.M.); Commissioner of Reclamation Wilbur A. Dexheimer; John Mutz, Bureau of Reclamation; Glenn L. Emmons, Commissioner of Indian Affairs; J. G. Will, secretary and chief counsel, Upper Colorado River Commission; E.O. Larson, district director, Bureau of Reclamation, Salt Lake City, Utah; G.B. Keesee, Gallup, N.M.; and Norman Littell, counsel, Navaho tribe.

March 1 -- Gov. Edwin C. Johnson (D Colo.) recommended expansion of the bill's terms to include authorization of 18 additional irrigation units, costing $218 million, in Colorado, and construction of the Juniper dam, near Craig, Colo. He suggested clarification of the intent to dedicate power revenues from the project to development of irrigation units.

Sen. Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) said in a statement the project would benefit production of defense minerals. He said some California groups opposed the project in efforts to get "our water."

Others supporting S 500 were Elmer Bennett, Department of Interior legislative counsel, and Ivan Crawford and Allen Mitchem, Denver, Colo.

March 2 -- Administrator Val Peterson, Federal Civil Defense Administration, said the project would develop an area suitable for an evacuation center in case of hydrogen bomb attacks on the West Coast.

David D. Moffatt, Jr., Utah Power and Light Co., and L. R. Patterson, Public Service Co. of Colorado, supported S 500 in behalf of a group of utilities in the region. The utilities said they would be willing to contract to deliver power from the project to government preference customers at "reasonable" transmission charges and would buy any surplus power.

THREAT TO DINOSAUR PARK

Gen. U.S. Grant, III, (ret.), American Planning and Civic Association, opposed one segment of the project, the proposed Echo Park dam, on grounds that it would "destroy by flooding a unique and inspiring area," portions of Dinosaur National Monument.

Mayor William J. Welch, Jr., of Price, Utah, and a group from Carbon County, Utah, opposed the Gooseberry project. J.S. McAllister, Sanpete County, N.M., endorsed the Gooseberry project.

Witnesses favorable to S 500 were Reps. Antonio M. Fernandez (D N.M.), E. Keith Thomson (R Wyo.), William A. Dawson (R Utah), and Henry A. Dixon (R Utah); Norman W. Barlow, acting Wyoming Upper Colorado River commissioner; Angus McDonald, National Farmers Union; Charles J. Fain, National Rural Electric Cooperative Association; George D. Clyde, Utah Commissioner of Interstate Streams; John Bliss, acting New Mexico state engineer; and William Zimmerman, Jr., Association on American Indian Affairs.

March 3 -- James H. Howard, attorney for the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, urged postponement of action on S 500 pending a Supreme Court decision on a related water compact dispute between California and Arizona.

Samuel B. Morris, chief engineer for Los Angeles water development, urged postponement pending the report on water policy by the (Hoover) Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government. He said high power rates would subsidize irrigation projects under terms of the bill.

Gilmore Tillman, Los Angeles chief city attorney for water and power, also opposed the project.

Dr. Richard C. Bradley, Cornell University, questioned figures on evaporation loss which had been used to justify selection of the Echo Park dam site in preference to alternative sites urged by many conservationists.

CALIFORNIANS PROTEST

March 4 -- Four representatives of the Colorado River Board of California opposed the bill. Raymond Matthew, chief engineer, claimed the project would require federal subsidies of $5,000 an acre for irrigated land worth only $150 an acre.

Benjamin G. Griffith, president of the Los Angeles Board of Water and Power, said the bill would mean a "re-interpretation" of the Colorado River Compact which would "diminish or nullify" his board's contracts for water from Hoover Dam on the lower Colorado River.

March 5 -- Opposing the bill were Joseph W. Penfold, Izaak Walton League; David R. Brower, Sierra Club; Sigurd Olson, Fred Packard and Charles Eggert, National Parks Association; C.R. Gutermuth, Wildlife Management Association; Spencer Smith, Forest Conservation Society; Howard Zahniser, Wilderness Society; and James Howard, general counsel, Metropolitan Water District of Southern California.

ACTION -- The Subcommittee March 24 approved S 500 for full committee consideration.

On March 30, by an 11-1 vote, the full Committee favorably reported S 500 (S Rept 128) after voting 2-10 against eliminating Echo Park Dam, in Colorado, from the project. The bill would authorize construction of 18 projects in the upper basin.

Floor Action

The Senate April 20 passed S 500 by a roll-call vote of 58-23. (For voting, see chart, p. 122.)[1]

An amendment that would have denied authorization for the Echo Park Dam, in the Dinosaur National Monument, was rejected by a 30-52 roll call.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, in amended form, S 500 would:

Authorize the Secretary of Interior to construct six storage reservoirs (all but one to include hydroelectric power plants) in the upper basin: Curecanti, Echo Park, Flaming Gorge, Glen Canyon, Juniper, and Navaho.

Require that construction of Curecanti and Juniper be deferred until the Interior Department investigated and reported to Congress that the economic benefits of the two projects would exceed their costs.

Authorize construction of 12 participating projects for irrigation purposes, contingent upon a report by the Interior Secretary that the costs could be repaid.

Authorize conditionally -- subject to re-authorization by Congress -- construction of 21 other participating projects on which economic reports must be submitted to affected states as well as to Congress.

Authorize $1,092,999,800 for storage units and participating projects.

Require repayment, within 50 years, of irrigation costs without interest, and power and municipal water costs with interest.

Establish an Upper Colorado River Basin fund to receive appropriations allotted the projects and money repaid on them.

Specify that revenues received after costs were repaid should be used for the benefit of the entire Colorado River Basin.

Require the Interior Secretary to comply with provisions of the Colorado River Compact, Upper Colorado River Basin Compact, Boulder Canyon laws, and the Mexican treaty, in storing and releasing water from the projects.

Authorize states to sue the United States in the Supreme Court if the Secretary failed to abide by those agreements.

Authorize the government to convey water and land rights to Denver, Colo., for the municipal water system.

Instruct the Interior Secretary to build and maintain recreational and wildlife facilities on lands used in the project, and to consult an advisory committee on the operation of the authorized works.

WATER NEEDS STRESSED

DEBATE -- The bill's proponents, mainly western Senators, said the upper basin badly needed water for power and irrigation purposes and pointed to advantages already received by lower basin states. California's Senators voiced fears that the bill would injure the state's interests in Colorado River water. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) opposed the bill on grounds it was an economically unsound "boondoggle."

April 18 -- Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- Congress should recognize the upper basin as an area "that needs and deserves conservation of its water resources for irrigation to stabilize its agriculture and hydropower to stimulate its industrial and rural development."

Eugene D. Millikin (R Colo.) -- "Only three percent of the total cost of the project (an estimated $1.1 billion) is non-reimbursible" to the government. The reservoirs "will be wealth-producing assets." Authorization of Echo Park Dam would not set "a precedent that might endanger other national monuments or parks," as charged by conservationists.

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- S 500 "seriously violates the precedents" of Congress and "places in very real jeopardy (California's) rights to water."

April 19 -- Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) -- All of the project except Echo Park Dam should be authorized. Dam construction in a national monument would constitute a "dangerous precedent" for the invasion of national parks.

Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) -- When the Dinosaur Monument was expanded in 1938, it constituted "an invasion of the power rights...previously established" in the area.

Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- Echo Park Dam "is the second most efficient dam in the project, in terms of storage, conserving water, and power production...It is in the center of other lesser reservoirs, improving their efficiency."

April 20 -- Kuchel -- The bill, by hinting at more upper basin projects in the future, "has become almost a Christmas tree."

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- "Within measurable time, the nation will need greatly increased cheap power, publicly developed, (and) more reclaimed and irrigated land.... What is good for the nation as a whole is good for every section of the nation."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

April 20 -- Kuchel -- Assign revenues received after repayment of the project's cost for use within the Colorado River basin (instead of in the upper basin only). Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

April 20 -- Kuchel -- Remove section specifying that the bill did not preclude further water developments in the upper basin. Voice.

Neuberger -- Delete authorization for Echo Park Dam. Roll call, 30-52.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 9-28 on a number of bills to authorize the Colorado project.

TESTIMONY -- March 9 -- Fred G. Aandahl, Assistant Secretary of Interior, said the proposed dams might later divert some water for irrigation, but initially they would be needed to provide storage to meet commitments in the lower basin.

March 10 -- Elmer Bennett, legislative counsel, Department of Interior; and Glenn L. Emmons, commissioner, Bureau of Indian Affairs, supported the bill.

March 11 -- Eleven witnesses from Colorado, including Mayor Quigg Newton of Denver, testified generally in favor of the legislation, though mixed testimony was presented regarding inclusion of a proposal by the city of Denver to divert water from the Blue River, a tributary of the Colorado River.

March 14 -- Sen. Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah); Charles J. Fain, assistant general manager, National Rural Electric Cooperative Association; and nine other witnesses from New Mexico, Colorado and Utah testified favorably.

March 16 -- Testifying for the project were Sens. Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.) and Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.); ex-Sen. Edward D. Crippa (R Wyo., 1954), representing Gov. Milward L. Simpson (R Wyo.); and representatives of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, National Farmers Union, Association of American Indians, Navaho Tribal Council, Dr. J. Leroy Kay, of the Carnegie Museum, Pittsburgh, Pa.; and other witnesses from Colorado, Utah, and Wyoming.

March 17 -- Maj. Gen. U.S. Grant, III, representing the American Planning and Civic Association; ex-Gov. Leslie A. Miller (D Wyo., 1935-39); and David Brower, Sierra Club of California, opposed the project.

March 18 -- Opposing the project were Rep. Chet Holifield (D Calif.) and spokesmen for the Colorado River Board of California, the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, and the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power.

March 28 -- Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) supported the project and attacked arguments of conservationist groups that the Echo Park and Split Mountain Dams would constitute "invasion" of the national park system. Rep. John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) and conservation officials opposed the Upper Colorado project.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- On June 14, the Subcommittee reported HR 3383, with amendments, to the full Committee, after approving the bill by an 18-6 vote. It eliminated provisions for Echo Park Dam and approved $760 million for the initial phase of the project, compared to $1 billion authorized by the Senate. Subcommittee Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) said that while the bill was not all he had hoped for, "it is all we possibly can hope to get through the House."

The full Committee July 8 reported (H Rept 1087) HR 3383 with the $760 million authorization.

PROVISIONS -- In comparison with S 500, HR 3383 would have:

Eliminated storage and power dams at Echo Park and Juniper.

Eliminated Gooseberry as a participating irrigation project and put it among participating irrigation projects to be conditionally authorized and further studied.

Added a conditional authorization for a participating irrigation project at Animas-La Plata.

Authorized an appropriation of $760 million for the project compared to an estimated cost of nearly $1.1 billion for S 500's projects.

In its report, the Committee said HR 3383 was in general accord with Congressional policy toward reclamation projects, and "in some respects the provisions of this bill are more conservative than established policy. The repayment required...is designed to insure...the return to the Treasury of expenditures for power, irrigation, municipal, and industrial water supply purposes.

"Expenditures for power and municipal and industrial water supply will be returned with interest during construction. Expenditures for irrigation will be returned without interest in equal annual installments within 50 years after the expiration of any authorized development period. After all project costs have been returned, many millions of dollars of net annual project revenues will continue to flow into the Treasury."

MINORITY VIEWS FILED

Six Committee members joined in a minority report assailing the project. Listing 21 objections to HR 3383 were John R. Pillion (R N.Y.), James A. Haley (D Fla.), George A. Shuford (D N.C.), James B. Utt (R Calif.), Craig Hosmer (R Calif.), and John P. Saylor (R Pa.).

The minority contended the project would cost a minimum of $1.5 billion before it was finished, even though some features were eliminated. Their report said: "Although such expensive and integral parts of the whole project as Echo Park have been deleted from the House bill to make it appear palatable, they cannot be deleted from the project. Like an iceberg the House bill displays only part of its mass to view but the remaining bulk nevertheless exists and must be reckoned with."

Haley and Shuford also joined in a separate statement in which they said the eventual cost of the project would be as much as $5 billion.

Rep. William A. Dawson (R Utah), in announcing that HR 3383 had been approved by the House Committee without Echo Park, said June 28:

"The opposition from conservation organizations has been such as to convince us in the four-state area...that authorizing legislation could not be passed unless this dam was taken out.... We in the sparsely settled, arid West have neither the money nor organization to cope with the resources and mailing lists of the so-called conservationists."

Group Stands

One of the hottest disputes concerning the Colorado River development project was whether a dam should be built in Echo Park, Colorado. The proposed dam site was in the most scenic part of the national park land. These conservation groups were among those opposing the dam on grounds it would seriously deface the park:

• Trustees for Conservation. In a statement printed in the June 27 "Congressional Record," Ansel Adams, president of Trustees for Conservation said: "Conservationists should write their Congressmen...to vote against all Colorado River Storage project legislation with or without Echo Park Dam. For, if the project is defeated now, as it should be, it will be returned to the Bureau of Reclamation to be revised as a complete and sound project without Echo Park Dam or any other dam invading a national park or monument."

• Citizens Committee on Natural Resources, in the June 22 "Congressional Record:" "This action (by the House Committee) establishing a board of engineers to prepare a report on the Echo Park Dam is simply putting the dam back into the bill after taking it out."

• Council of Conservationists, in the June 22 Record: "This (proposal to establish an Echo Park Dam study committee) is only maneuvering to throw Echo Park Dam opponents off the scent."

(On the Senate floor July 14, Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) attacked the Council of Conservationists and said "honest conservationists" did not realize they were serving as "the unsuspecting pawn of a water-power lobby.")

Spokesmen for some groups took the opposite tack on Echo Park. Sen. Watkins read several of their opinions into the March 23 Record:

• O.A. Knight, chairman of the CIO Committee on Power, Atomic Energy and Resources Development: "From a careful study of the facts presented to me and my committee, I am persuaded that the maximum benefit to mankind will result from the earliest possible completion of the upper Colorado River storage project including Echo Park Dam."

• Herbert F. Smart, secretary and past president of the Utah Wildlife Federation and member of the Land Policy Committee of the National Wildlife Federation: "The Echo Park Reservoir will greatly enhance the wildlife and fisheries resources of Colorado, Utah, and Wyoming."

TRINITY RIVER

HR 4663 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 602) May 19, 1955.
• Passed by the House on a 230-153 roll-call vote June 21. (See p. 154.)
• Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee July 27 (S Rept 1154).
• Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 30.
P.L. 386 -- Signed into law Aug. 12.

Congress in 1955 authorized $225 million to harness Trinity River water for irrigation and power in California's Central Valley. The plan called for a 2.5 million acre-feet dam on the Trinity River and diversion of its water to the nearby Sacramento River.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, HR 4663:

Authorized $225 million for dams, water tunnels, canals, and power stations in the Trinity River area near Redding, Calif.

Specified that the construction work should be integrated with other projects in the Central Valley in the most "beneficial and most economic" manner.

Stipulated that preference customers (such as co-ops and municipalities) should have priority to contract for 25 percent of the power provided by the project.

Stipulated that 50,000 acre-feet annually must be released from the Trinity Reservoir to downstream users.

Directed the Secretary of Interior to keep a check on conditions in the project area, such as the depth of streams, to safeguard fish and wildlife.

Authorized the Secretary to reimburse Trinity County for road repair and construction necessitated by the project and for school and property tax revenue lost through federal use of county land.

Directed the Secretary to submit within 18 months, for Congressional approval, any tentative agreements with private firms for lease of the project's falling water.

Authorized the Secretary to improve the project's property for public use and to take steps to safeguard the land's natural beauty.

Background

The projects authorized in HR 4663 were designed to supply electrical power to Northern California and irrigation water to the San Joaquin and Sacramento River Basins.

The project had been under study since 1923 and was part of the 1931 California State Water Plan. In 1942, the federal Bureau of Reclamation embarked on a $572,000 study of the project.

In 1953, the federal government ruled the project met the requirements of the Reclamation Act. On Feb. 17, 1955, Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay recommended its construction.

(For additional background on the need for water storage projects in the West, see Colorado River Plan above.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- April 13-15, on HR 4663.

TESTIMONY -- April 13 -- Officials of the Department of Interior and of the Sacramento Calif., reclamation bureau supported the bill.

April 14 -- Representatives of the City of Redding, Calif., asked for Redding's inclusion in any "partnership" involving power features of the proposed project.

April 15 -- Support for HR 4663 came from Rep. Hubert B. Scudder (R Calif.) and California state Sen. Edwin J. Regan.

PARTNERSHIP PROPOSED

Officials of the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. of San Francisco asked for an amendment to allow the company and the federal government to cooperate in constructing the project. Robert H. Gerdes, company vice president, said the partnership would save the government $50 million in capital expenditures and provide $171 million more revenue over a 50-year period than if the entire project was constructed by the Bureau of Reclamation.

(The reported bill did not include the requested amendment.)

ACTION -- The Committee reported HR 4663 (H Rept 602) May 19.

Floor Action

The House June 21 passed, by a 230-153 roll-call vote the bill (HR 4663), amended, to authorize the Trinity River project. (For voting, see chart, p. 154.)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 4663:

Authorized a $225 million reservoir and power project on the Trinity River in California.

Provided that the project would be integrated and coordinated, both financially and operationally, with other features of the Central Valley project "to effectuate the fullest, most beneficial, and most economic utilization of water resources."

Specified that contracts for sale and delivery of the additional electric energy available from the Central Valley project would be made in accordance with preferences in the federal reclamation laws. Preference customers in Trinity County would receive a first preference to the extent of 25 percent of additional energy and could renew their option on the power in each successive fifth year.

Authorized the Secretary of Interior to make payment from construction appropriations to Trinity County for additional costs, incurred because of construction of the project, which would "constitute an undue burden upon the county."

Authorized the Secretary to continue negotiations on power facility construction with private firms.

Required the Secretary to report any results of negotiations or an agreement within 18 months of enactment of HR 4663. Congress would still have to approve any agreement reached.

GOOD DOLLAR VALUE

DEBATE -- Clair Engle (D Calif.) -- Economically, "this is one of the finest projects ever brought before Congress. It has a benefit-to-cost ratio of 3.31 to 1, meaning that the federal government will get back $3.31 in value for every dollar it puts in."

William E. Miller (R N.Y.) -- The irrigation aspects should be authorized but the power part dropped until the Interior Department reaches an agreement with the Pacific Gas Co. "to pay for the power facilities themselves, instead of the federal government doing it." As written, the bill would permit public power advocates "to get a foot in the door."

Engle -- Californians want the water, primarily. "We get the power incidentally." The reservoir would have to be built by the government and requires 85 percent of the total authorization. "The private power company proposal was to put up $50 million to build the power houses...the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. itself is for this bill."

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- "This is the best reclamation project (Congress) will ever be privileged to vote upon," principally because of the cost-benefit ratio and the "partnership power" provision.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Saylor -- Limit the in-lieu tax payment (to be paid Trinity County by the Secretary of Interior) to the amount of taxes paid on property and improvements taken over for the project. Voice vote.

Hubert B. Scudder (R Calif.) -- Ensure that 50,000 acre-feet of water in the reservoir would be made available each year for Humboldt County and downstream water users. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- July 14 on HR 4663 and S 178, which also would have provided additional power and irrigation facilities in the West San Joaquin Division area, including a dam and reservoir on San Luis Creek.

TESTIMONY -- Fred G. Aandahl, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, urged acceptance of a private company's offer to build the power features of the Trinity project.

ACTION -- The Committee July 27 reported the House bill (HR 4663 -- S Rept 1154) without amendment.

Floor Action

The Senate July 30 passed the bill by voice vote and sent it to the President.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 4663 was identical to the version passed by the House.

DEBATE -- Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "I serve clear notice...to the Secretary of the Interior that those of us... opposed to his partnership giveaway scheme want him to understand that any attempt...in the future to approve (a partnership proposal for the Trinity River project) is not going to have any favorable effect on us...."

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- "There is no attempt...to start any program of partnership one way or the other."

FRYINGPAN PROJECT

S 300 -- Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 233) April 28, 1955.

The Fryingpan-Arkansas project, involving an authorization of $156.5 million for a network of reservoirs and canals near Aspen, Colo., was again under Congressional consideration in 1955.

The project would provide additional water for irrigation and seven hydroelectric plants with a capacity of 104,800 kilowatts. Plans called for reservoirs on both slopes of the Continental Divide in Colorado and diversion of about 70,000 acre feet of water from Hunter Creek and the Fryingpan River to the basin of the Arkansas River.

The Senate version did not undergo any floor action in the first session of the 84th Congress and a similar House measure (HR 412) did not get out of committee.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Fryingpan-Arkansas." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 512ff.)

A bill (S 964) to authorize the project was passed by the Senate in 1954. A House bill (HR 236) did not, officially, come under consideration because the House rejected the rule to authorize debate on the measure by a 188-195 roll-call vote.

President Eisenhower requested Congressional authorization of the project in 1955. The fiscal 1956 budget provided for a $2 million supplemental appropriation.

ANALYSIS OF PROJECT

The 1955 Senate bill (S 300) called for diverting about 70,000 acre feet of water annually from Hunter Creek and the Fryingpan River (parts of the Colorado River System), on the western slope of the Continental Divide in Colorado, through a six-mile tunnel in the Divide to the basin of the Arkansas River on the eastern slope in Colorado. Besides adding the diverted 70,000 acre feet to the Arkansas basin's supply, the project would regulate the flow of the Arkansas River to increase the total amount of additional water available to about 183,000 acre feet a year.

In addition to the tunnel and networks of canals, the project would involve construction of a reservoir near Pueblo and enlargement of the existing Sugar Loaf and Twin Lakes reservoirs, all on the eastern slope, to a total storage capacity of 777,000 acre feet. On the western slope, a reservoir with a capacity of 28,000 acre feet would be built near Aspen to insure a water supply for the area from which water would be diverted.

The project would open no new land to irrigation, but would provide supplemental irrigation for 322,000 acres.

Seven hydroelectric plants would be installed, with a capacity of 104,800 kilowatts. They would generate about 505,000 kilowatt hours annually.

About 20,500 acre feet of municipal and industrial water would be supplied annually to cities and towns, including Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

ISSUES INVOLVED

To a great extent, much of the debate over the Upper Colorado Project (see pp. 442ff.) paralleled the arguments and issues in the Fryingpan-Arkansas debate, differing only in degree and detail.

Just as in the argument over Upper Colorado, there were disputes on repayment, feasibility, and justification. The conservationists' objection to a dam in a national park did not apply to Fryingpan-Arkansas.

Southern California's objections based on interpretation of water rights were less concrete in the case of Fryingpan-Arkansas than in debate over the Upper Colorado plan.

Southern California contended:

The diversion of 70,000 acre feet would be minor in itself, but the project was an opening wedge for the much larger (some 900,000 acre feet) Gunnison-Arkansas project.

There should be a moratorium on diversions until a limit had been set to protect the rights of the Lower Colorado River Basin.

Proponents contended:

Colorado has the right to use its own water as it sees fit, and the project would use only about 2 percent of Colorado's allotment. (The Upper Colorado River Basin Compact of 1948 apportioned about 51 percent of the Upper Basin's allotment to Colorado.)

California's opposition to the project showed that it opposed any development of Upper Basin water resources.

The Fryingpan-Arkansas project would be entirely independent of the Upper Colorado project and would not be a commitment for later authorization of Gunnison-Arkansas.

Water rights within Colorado were in dispute. Some residents of the western slope in the vicinity of Aspen contended:

Diversion would inundate scenic areas that attract tourists.

Diversion would take away water that the western slope will need to develop its economy.

Proponents contended:

The inundated area would affect only a few home owners, while improving the recreational attractions of the Aspen area.

The rugged western slope has surplus water, and has only limited potential for agricultural and industrial development.

The western slope's water needs would be fully protected. The Aspen Reservoir would be insurance against deficiencies. The project's "operating principles" include various guarantees, including a provision that, if a shortage should develop, diversion to the eastern slope would be curtailed before the western slope's water supply could be cut back.

In arguing the justification of the project, its proponents contended:

Droughts have cut back arable land in the Arkansas basin of Colorado from 550,000 to 460,000 acres.

All the water resources which could be developed by private enterprise have been developed; the Arkansas Basin will not be able to develop much further without tapping additional water sources.

Much of the shortage is due to the Arkansas River's erratic flow; through storage and other regulation measures, periods of surplus and shortage could be equalized; because of uncertainty, farmers are forced to waste some water by over-irrigation when flow is heavy; charges for irrigation water would be cheap "crop insurance."

The Project would not eliminate the Arkansas Basin's water deficiency -- amounting to about 35 percent of requirements -- but would reduce it to about 16 percent; more water could be used, but the western slope would not permit diversion of a greater quantity.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 16-25 on S 300, to authorize $156.5 million Fryingpan-Arkansas water project.

TESTIMONY -- March 16 -- Gov. Edwin C. Johnson (D Colo.), Sen. Gordon Allott (R Colo.), Rep. J. Edgar Chenoweth (R Colo.), and Fred G. Aandahl, Assistant Secretary of Interior, said the project was vital to the needs of the Arkansas River basin.

March 17 -- Charles Boustead of the Southeastern Colorado Water Development Association and the Pueblo, Colo., Chamber of Commerce, presented 75 petitions favoring the project.

March 25 -- Opposing S 300 were spokesmen for the Colorado River Board of California and the Pitkin County, Colo., Water Users Association.

Support for the bill came from representatives of the Southeastern Colorado Water Development Association.

ACTION -- The Committee reported the bill April 28 (S Rept 233).

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, S 300 would have:

Authorized the Secretary of Interior, through the Bureau of Reclamation, to construct, operate, and maintain the project.

Provided for the use of revenues from commercial power sales to pay off certain portions of the actual construction costs in 60 years.

Continued rights of western Colorado water users to water stored in the Green Mountain Reservoir, Colorado-Big Thompson project.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 9-July 16, intermittently on HR 412, to authorize construction of the Fryingpan-Arkansas irrigation and reclamation project.

TESTIMONY -- May 9 -- Wilbur A. Dexheimer, Commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, said the "water-use restrictions...placed on the residents" of the Fryingpan-Arkansas area were becoming "more acute with each passing year."

May 11 -- Representatives of electrical associations, research and power groups, farmers and organized labor favored the legislation.

May 12 -- Support for the bill came from four residents of Pueblo, Colo., while opposition was expressed by persons residing in Aspen, Colo., and other parts of Pitkin County.

May 17 -- Representatives of the Colorado River Board of California opposed HR 412.

July 1 -- Reclamation Bureau officials assured the Subcommittee the proposed project could operate in the winter with open canals. Commissioner Dexheimer said freezing would be no problem in power plant operation because no water would be taken from the frozen river.

Ben Powell, Reclamation Bureau engineer from Colorado, said the canals would deliver sufficient water to the power plants even if the canal surface was frozen. The frozen surface, he said, would, in effect, make an ice-covered conduit.

July 15 -- George E. Tomlinson, assistant chief of project development for the Bureau, said there was sufficient water available for the project. Careful studies had shown, he said, that no decreed water rights on the western slope of Colorado would be hurt by the project's construction. The Subcommittee also heard from Colorado regional engineers before adjourning the hearings.

The bill was not reported to the House in 1955.

HELLS CANYON

Senate and House subcommittees in the first session of the 84th Congress held hearings on bills (S 1333, HR 4719) to authorize federal construction of a 722-foot high dam at Hells Canyon, a chasm in the Snake River near the Oregon-Idaho border.

Neither bill had reached the floor when Congress adjourned Aug. 2, 1955. But on Aug. 4, the Federal Power Commission granted the Idaho Power Co., a private utility, a 50-year lease to enable it to build three small dams in the area, Brownlee, Oxbow, and Low Hells Canyon.

Democrats swore the FPC ruling would not be the last word in the issue of whether the government or private industry should build the Hells Canyon project. They promised to revive the matter in the 1956 session of Congress.

Background

The Idaho Power Co. applied to the Federal Power Commission in 1950 for a license to build the Oxbow Dam, one of the three dams in its plan for development of the Snake River on the Oregon-Idaho border. The company already was selling power in the area, generating some itself and buying some from publicly owned dams. In 1953, the company filed applications for the other two dams; Hells Canyon, north (downstream) of Oxbow; and Brownlee, south (upstream) of Oxbow.

President Truman's Secretary of Interior, Oscar Chapman, intervened in FPC proceedings on the Oxbow application, opposing the license. The Bureau of Reclamation had inherited from the Army Corps of Engineers a plan to build a 722-foot-high federal dam at Hells Canyon, a narrow, 7000-foot-deep chasm. The dam site would be on the Snake about 90 miles north of Weiser, Idaho. The federal dam plan was part of the over-all plan for developing the Columbia River Basin. The Oxbow Dam would rule out the federal dam.

When the Eisenhower Administration took office in 1953, Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay withdrew his Department's objections to the Idaho Power Co. license. Advocates of public power continued their opposition to the license during FPC hearings.

The federal dam proposal had been before Congress for some years, but a clear-cut decision on its merits was never reached. Public power advocates introduced bills to authorize -- and order -- federal construction of the high-dam project.

DESCRIPTION OF DAMS

Hydroelectric power was the overriding purpose of both the federal and private proposals. Neither would have supplied any water for irrigation. But plans called for the federal project to contribute part of its power revenues to payment of the cost of a proposed irrigation project -- in the Mountain Home desert between Boise and Twin Falls, Idaho -- upstream from the dam. The 1955 bills would not have authorized the Mountain Home project, but would have directed the Secretary of Interior to report to Congress on its feasibility not later than the 85th Congress. Irrigation water would have been diverted by tunnel from the Payette River, a tributary of the Snake.

Involved in the debate were eight federal dams -- some of which had not received appropriations -- downstream from Hells Canyon. These dams would expand their power-generation capacity if water were impounded at Hells Canyon.

There was wide variation in statistical measurements of the projects. A consensus of informed estimates:

- The federal project would cost about $600 million, including the cost of transmission lines and additional generators for the downstream dams. The Idaho Power Co. project would cost about $154 million, not counting downstream costs. (The company contended costs of the federal project were under-estimated.)

- The federal dam would have storage capacity for about 3.9 million acre feet of useful water. The private project's Brownlee dam would have a capacity of about 1 million acre feet. The company's other two dams would be "run-of-the-river" -- impounding no substantial amount of water.

- The federal project would have a capacity of about 900,000 kilowatts, including capacity at Hells Canyon and added capacity at the eight downstream dams. The private project would have a total capacity of about 610,000 kilowatts. (The company contended the federal project would have a capacity of only about 570,000 kilowatts.)

- Plans for Mountain Home irrigation were fluid. One leading plan called for irrigating 192,000 acres initially, and later irrigating additional portions of the 370,000-acre area. Secretary McKay estimated the irrigation project's cost at about $283 million. The Bureau of Reclamation estimated that the 192,000 irrigated acres would yield $8.2 million worth of crops a year, and also claimed less direct benefits.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee, Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- April 4-May 6 on S 1333, which would authorize construction of a $500 million federal dam at Hells Canyon.

TESTIMONY -- April 4 -- At Boise, Idaho, Chairman James E. Murray (D Mont.) of the full Committee, in a statement opening the hearings, urged the 29 co-sponsors of S 1333 to join him "in requesting the Federal Power Commission to suspend any further application of the Idaho Power Co. to build three low-level dams in the Hells Canyon area until Congress has had an opportunity to act" on S 1333.

Idaho Gov. Robert E. Smylie (R) called proposed federal construction at Hells Canyon "tragic," and said 75 percent of the people of Idaho agreed with him. He opposed S 1333 on grounds it would mean federal control of the Snake River with subsequent loss of water rights by Idaho.

The Committee heard further testimony by opponents and proponents of the project at Boise, then flew to Lewiston, Idaho, for additional testimony.

April 5 -- Former Sen. Clarence C. Dill (D Wash., 1923-35) told the Committee at Pasco, Wash., that the results of federal construction "will do more for private enterprise than anything since the coming of the railroads to this area." For this reason, he said, it was "very unfortunate" the Hells Canyon battle had been depicted strictly as a public-private power fight.

Loren Markham of the Spokane, Wash., Chamber of Commerce said a high dam offered little chance of helping to meet Northwest power needs during an expected critical period.

Don T. Miller, Spokane weekly editor, said "the majority of people in the Northwest are willing to abide by the decision of the Federal Power Commission. The majority hope, I believe, that the Snake River will be developed by American competitive free enterprise, which would get the job done sooner and protect the water rights of the people of Idaho." Agreeing with Miller was A. S. Grant, a Baker, Ore., attorney.

Supporting federal construction were spokesmen for organized labor, the Washington State Grange, Young Democrats, and several municipally owned utility groups serving the area.

GOVERNORS OPPOSE FEDERAL DAM

April 6 -- At a Portland, Ore., session, Washington Gov. Arthur B. Langlie (R) and Oregon Gov. Paul Patterson(R) opposed federal construction. Langlie said a high-level dam would be "phony" and "a monument to government error." Patterson said it would be illogical and unrealistic for Congress to authorize federal construction. He said even if Congress authorized funds, there was no assurance the project would be constructed immediately.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.), who introduced S 1333, said it was "the right of Congress to provide for the economic emancipation of the Northwest." He charged both governors with "a highly provincial state attitude" in a situation where "a regional attitude" was called for.

May 2 -- Supporting the federal project were Reps. Gracie Pfost (D Idaho), Lee Metcalf (D Mont.), Don Magnuson (D Wash.), and Edith Green (D Ore.).

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT VIEWS

Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay sent the Committee a report which said the Department was "firmly convinced that where a non-federal proposal can provide results which...are reasonably comparable with those anticipated from a federal project, people of the region should be encouraged to utilize...the available capacities of public and private organizations for doing the job on a non-federal basis under conditions fully protecting the public interest."

May 3 -- Favoring the legislation were representatives of the CIO, Cooperative League, Farmers Union Central Exchange, and National Rural Electric Cooperatives.

May 4 -- Spokesmen for the American Federation of Labor and the National Farmers Union favored the project. Opposing it were members of the Idaho State Reclamation Association.

May 5 -- The National Reclamation Association and other members of irrigation and reclamation groups opposed the bill.

May 6 -- Opposition to S 1333 came from spokesmen for the Mountain Home Reclamation Committee, Boise, Idaho, and the Idaho Power Co.; W. Glen Slan, consulting engineer, La Mesa, Calif.; and Bernard Williams of Boise.

ONE PRIVATE DAM APPROVED

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- A Federal Power Commission examiner May 6 recommended that the Idaho Power Co. be authorized to build a dam at the Brownlee site on the Snake River. The examiner, William J. Costello, rejected Idaho Power applications for permission to build at two other dam sites, Oxbow and Hells Canyon.

The examiner said that on the basis of a theoretical comparison, federal planners would choose the high dam if confronted with a choice between it and Idaho Power's three-dam proposal. However, he said that an FPC recommendation to Congress for a high dam would be "completely useless" because of the remote possibility of an authorization and appropriations for a high dam.

Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) May 6 said the decision was a "major step in the destruction" of the Army Engineers' "master plan for the full development of the power resources of the Columbia Basin." Rep. Pfost said the recommendation for one dam made Idaho Power's arguments for three dams "null and void." Sen. Morse said the President and the Administration "have the obligation to support the high dam project or bear the burden if the Snake and Columbia are consigned to inadequate development."

The Council of State Chambers of Commerce May 30 called the projected federal dam at Hells Canyon an "unnecessary burden on taxpayers." An authorization by Congress to build such a dam, the Council said, would be the "biggest step taken toward socializing electric power in the U.S. since the federal monopolization of power in the TVA area." Sen. Neuberger said May 30 the Council's report was "riddled with deliberate distortions."

ACTION -- The Subcommittee June 8 approved S 1333 and sent it to the full Committee. No further action was taken on the bill in 1955.

House

COMMITTEE -- Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee, Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- July 11-15 on bills (HR 4719, 4730, 4739, 4740) to authorize federal construction of the Hells Canyon project.

TESTIMONY -- July 11 -- Engineers of the Bureau of Reclamation and the Bonneville Power Administration discussed technical aspects of the proposal.

July 13 -- The engineers, under cross-examination, generally agreed Congressional action should be delayed until the FPC ruled on the Idaho Power Co.'s application to construct three dams.

A letter from Assistant Secretary of Interior Fred G. Aandahl also asked the Subcommittee to defer action.

July 14 -- Holland Houston, adviser to Washington Gov. Langlie on power matters, said steam plants and not dams should be built for power production in the Pacific Northwest. He said large storage projects such as that envisaged at Hells Canyon eventually would produce power at greater cost than steam plants. He said the federal proposal for one large dam would produce power for 4.95 mills per kilowatt hour, while the Idaho Power Co. proposal for three smaller dams could produce power for 1.94 mills per kilowatt hour.

Two Idaho proponents of federal construction presented their views.

July 15 -- Opposition to federal construction was expressed by various Idaho residents and spokesmen for the National Reclamation Association and the Idaho Power Co.

BILL APPROVED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee July 19 rejected, 11-13, a motion by Rep. A. L. Miller (R Neb.) to table the authorization bills.

On July 27 it approved for the full Committee an amended bill (HR 4719) to authorize federal construction of the Hells Canyon project.

FPC Action

The Federal Power Commission Aug. 4 granted the Idaho Power Co.'s applications to build three dams on the Snake River. The FPC unanimously granted the firm a 50-year lease to construct the Brownlee, Oxbow, and Low Hells Canyon Dams. Construction of the dams, the FPC added, would "preclude a federally constructed single high dam" at Hells Canyon. The action overruled the FPC examiner's recommednation that Idaho Power be licensed to build only at the Brownlee site.

The decision was met by Democratic charges the FPC deceived Congress in announcing its decision Aug. 4, two days after adjournment. The FPC decision bore a notation it had been reached July 27, a day before FPC Chairman Jerome K. Kuykendall told House Select Small Business Subcommittee No. 1 the Hells Canyon matter "is before the Commission now."

REACTION VARIED

Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) Aug. 10 urged the Office of Defense Mobilization to deny tax concession applications for Hells Canyon construction of the Idaho Power Co. Morse said approval of these applications would result in "a direct cost to the federal government" of $31,357,000.

Sens. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) and James E. Murray (D Mont.) protested the FPC's handling of Hells Canyon.

Supporting the FPC decision were Sens. James H. Duff (R Pa.) and Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah). Duff Aug. 7 said the government should not do what the public could do for itself. Watkins Aug. 9 said it was "a lot of baloney" to suggest the Administration was opposed to any new federal power projects, and cited GOP support for the Upper Colorado reclamation and power project as an example.

The National Hells Canyon Association -- leading proponent of the federal dam -- eight Washington State public utility districts, and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association Sept. 1 filed petitions for rehearing of the Hells Canyon proposals by the FPC. The request was turned down by the FPC Sept. 29.

On Sept. 23, the Hells Canyon Association asked permission to oppose the Idaho Power Company's application for tax write-offs on the proposed dams. In a letter to Director Arthur S. Flemming of the Office of Defense Mobilization, Evelyn Cooper, Washington attorney representing the Association, requested "an opportunity to examine the applications and to be heard thereon."

Opposing Stands

The major Hells Canyon issue was whether the federal government or private industry should construct the project. The following breakdown lists the main arguments of opposing groups.

NEED

Proponents of the private project contended:

The Idaho Power Co. needs and could sell additional power capacity, although its customers had not been subjected to "brownouts" as had some other areas.

Power rates for the federal project would have to be inflated to provide a subsidy to irrigation.

The irrigation subsidy could be provided by dams other than Hells Canyon.

Proponents of the federal project contended:

The company's rates are high, and it might prove difficult to sell the additional power at such rates.

The federal project would generate more power, but it could be sold because it would be cheaper.

Although the area suffers from no serious power shortage, there is great additional potential demand which would become effective as power became available at low federal rates; for example, development of phosphate beds and low-grade copper deposits in the region would be feasible only with cheap power.

Potential power needs are so great that the full potential of resources should be utilized; although the company could generate power several years sooner than the federal project, the company's plan would produce less than the full amount available, and would preclude full development of the site later.

There is no assurance that the company would build its proposed Brownlee and Hells Canyon dams; it might stop after building the more profitable Oxbow dam.

FEASIBILITY

Proponents of the private project contended:

The high federal dam would seldom be full to capacity; in relatively dry years, the high dam would produce less power than the three low dams.

Estimates of the federal dam's advantage in downstream generation are inflated; there is no evidence that Congress would appropriate funds for the downstream dams, and the high dam's efficiency depends largely on their construction.

Proponents of the federal project contended:

The high dam would fill.

FINANCING

Proponents of the private project contended:

In view of efforts to balance the budget, it is doubtful that Congress would appropriate funds for the federal dam even if it were authorized, especially since the company's alternative would do the job; thus, if the company's project were rejected, the Hells Canyon site might not be developed at all.

Besides the federal project's cost to the taxpayer, the Treasury would lose tax revenue the company's project would yield.

Proponents of the federal project contended:

Greater economic development that would be made possible by the federal project would yield increased revenue to the Treasury from the broadened tax base.

Provision is made for repayment of the federal investment.

POWER POLICY

Proponents of the private project contended:

The company's proposal was in line with the Administration's "partnership" power policy, which limits federal power development to those projects that are beyond the capacity of private and other local interests.

Proponents of the federal project contended:

The "partnership" policy results in "give-aways" of public resources to private interests.

The policy saddles the federal government with less profitable projects, and yields the most desirable projects to private interests.

IDAHO INTERESTS

Fear was expressed that the federal project would impinge on Idaho's rights to power. The company contended its proposal would stimulate the economy of southern Idaho and eastern Oregon more than the federal project would. Proponents of the federal dam contended that the area's interests would be protected by a provision in the 1955 bills that would reserve 500,000 kilowatts of Hells Canyon power for sections of southern Idaho and eastern Oregon.

NIAGARA POWER

One of three Congressional skirmishes in the power war of 1955 was fought over rival plans for development of Niagara River power facilities. When Congress adjourned the outcome was still in doubt. Other subjects of public versus private power controversy were proposed projects in Hells Canyon on the Snake River, and the Atomic Energy Commission's contract with the Dixon-Yates private power combine for a new installation in Arkansas. (See story, above and pp. 533ff.)

Hearings on rival bills for Niagara development were held by the House Public Works Committee and by the Flood Control -- River and Harbors Subcommittee of the Senate Public Works Committee. Neither committee sent a Niagara bill to the floor in 1955.

Private forces sought approval of similar bills: S 6, introduced by Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.); HR 142, by Rep. William E. Miller (R N.Y.); and HR 420, by Rep. George A. Dondero (R Mich.). These measures outlined plans to develop the Niagara waters by private enterprise.

Public power groups pushed similar bills: S 1823, introduced by Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) and 16 others; and HR 5878, by Rep. Irwin D. Davidson (D N.Y.). Both would authorize public development by the New York State Power Authority.

Another bill (HR 5706) submitted by Rep. Charles A. Buckley (D N.Y.) would have left the choice between public and private licensee to the Federal Power Commission under the terms of the Federal Power Act, which requires that the FPC favor a public over a private applicant when their plans are "equally well adapted" to improving the resources in question.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Niagara Power". (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 511-12.)

A treaty with Canada signed on Feb. 27, 1950, determined the U.S. share of Niagara waters for power development and required Congressional approval of any redevelopment project.

A 1953 bill offered, like the 1955 measure, by Sen. Capehart and Reps. Dondero and Miller in behalf of the Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation and four associated utility companies, was passed by the House July 9, 1953. A rival bill sponsored by Sen. Irving M. Ives (R N.Y.) and backed by Governor Thomas E. Dewey would have given authority to develop power to the N.Y. Power Authority.

In 1954 a bill was reported by the Senate Public Works Committee (S 2599 -- S Rept 2501) directing the FPC to further development plans under the provisions of the Federal Power Act.

The Bureau of the Budget in a letter to the Senate Committee, April 8, 1954, had urged that the FPC be allowed to decide who should develop the hydroelectric power potential of the Niagara.

BASIC DIFFERENCES

The Lehman proposal, S 1823, provided that the FPC license the N.Y. Power Authority to develop Niagara power facilities. It called for preference in the sale of power to public bodies and cooperatives, and for the "lowest rates reasonably possible" to "domestic and rural consumers." The bill authorized building transmission lines when necessary, and construction of a scenic drive and park.

Capehart's bill favored power projects "by private enterprise and without recourse to public funds," directed the FPC to license a private applicant, preferably the one "most able to commence actual construction and...operation promptly" of the project. The bill provided for preference in the sale of power to "directions from the Department of Defense for supplying power to governmental installations or to industries requiring power to produce materials essential to the national security."

Group Stands

Five large upstate N.Y. utility companies supported the Capehart measure and stood ready to apply for the FPC license. Earle J. Machold, president of Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation and spokesman for the five, testified that they were ready to start building.

Also favoring the Capehart bill were spokesmen for the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., the National Association of Manufacturers, and the Grange and Farm Bureau Federation of N.Y. state.

Backers of the Lehman proposal for public development were N.Y. Governor Averell Harriman (D), ex-Governor Thomas E. Dewey (R), and N.Y. City Mayor Robert F. Wagner. Rep. Buckley also supported the bill, which was drafted to incorporate some features of his measure.

The Buckley bill was supported by Chairman Robert Moses of the N.Y. Power Authority, who continued to favor it after Buckley expressed approval of the Lehman measure.

ADMINISTRATION VIEWS

The FPC did not support any of the bills but urged "prompt utilization" of the Niagara resources. No bill for federal development was pending, and the FPC took no stand between N.Y. state and private development.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HEARINGS -- June 8-10 on proposals to use the U.S. share of Niagara River waters for power purposes under the U.S.-Canadian Treaty of 1950.

TESTIMONY -- June 8 -- Col. William Whipple of the Army Corps of Engineers, said $60 million worth of power was being lost each year by the failure to build new power plants at Niagara Falls. Willard W. Gatchell, general counsel of the Federal Power Commission, said the FPC urged "prompt utilization" of Niagara's resources.

Rep. Irwin D. Davidson (D N.Y.) said failure to use Niagara power was costing consumers in the area "unnecessary expense daily."

June 9 -- Earle J. Machold, president of Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation and spokesman for four other utility companies, said private groups could build new power plants at Niagara Falls "without exploitation and without government subsidy."

Chairman Moses of the New York State Power Authority said Congress had no authority to take from the state its right to construct new power plants at Niagara Falls. He said private power companies had been responsible for destroying "50 percent of the beauty of Niagara Falls and its gorge." And, should they be permitted to undertake further development, he said, their "first consideration would be one of profit."

June 10 -- Sen. Lehman urged enactment of a bill (HR 5878) authorizing the N.Y. State Power Authority to construct and operate the Niagara Power project. He labelled as "unthinkable" any measure to allow private power development in the area. Both N.Y. Democrats and Republicans favored state development of the river, he said, adding that "the advocates of the giveaway of Niagara Power to private interests are in a distinct minority."

Gov. Harriman of New York, in a telegram to the Committee, said passage of legislation to authorize construction by private companies of the power plants "would fly in the face of the long established policy of the people of our state."

Supporting measures to permit private development of the river power were spokesmen for the National Association of Manufacturers, the Grange, and Farm Bureau Federation of N.Y. state.

Robert R. Balmer of the NAM said five privately owned utilities in the state were ready to invest the capital needed to develop the river.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works Flood Control -- River and Harbors Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- July 13-15 on proposals for the power development of the Niagara River.

TESTIMONY -- July 13 -- Sen. Lehman advanced his bill (S 1823) to authorize New York state to develop the river. He said his proposal would not cost the federal government anything and the state would also preserve the beauty of Niagara Falls and develop a parkway in the area.

Rep. Davidson said public development was necessary to prevent "another steal for the giant private power monopoly."

July 14 -- Sen. Capehart supported his measure (S 6) to permit private development of the river. He said "it is just unbelievable" that other than private enterprise be allowed to construct and operate power plants at Niagara Falls. If the five power companies desiring to construct the facilities were not authorized to do so, Capehart said, "we might as well give up the idea of private power in this country."

The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said private development would mean better operation than state development. Also supporting S 6 were spokesmen for the New York City local of the Utility Workers Union (CIO), N.Y. State Association of Electrical Workers (AFL), Associated Industries of New York, and the State Grange.

Supporting the Lehman bill were representatives of the national CIO, National Rural Electric Cooperative, National Farmers Union and American Public Power Association.

STATE-OWNERSHIP FAVORED

July 15 -- Gordon R. Clapp, former administrator of the Tennessee Valley Authority and currently deputy administrator of New York City, speaking for Mayor Wagner, said state development of Niagara River power would result in lower cost electricity for the city's residents. He supported the proposal to permit the state to develop the river's resources.

S 1823, said Clapp, contained "safeguards to assure the benefits of low-cost Niagara power to the electric consumer" and would "not permit that power to be gobbled up by private interests near the site." Also supporting S 1823 were the mayors of Dunkirk, Booneville, and Jamestown, all in New York.

Earle J. Machold, president of Niagara Mohawk, supported the Capehart bill. Machold said the N.Y. State Power Authority had conceded New York City was outside the project's "marketing area," and the project could benefit N.Y. consumers "only if it is tax-paying rather than...tax-subsidized."

Rep. William E. Miller (R N.Y.) also supported S 6. He said the "overwhelming evidence" was that "every category of consumer and taxpayer" supported development by private enterprise. Others favoring S 6 included spokesmen for Niagara County, the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, National Association of Manufacturers, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL), and Citizens Public Expenditure Survey, Inc.

ACTION -- The Committee July 27 deferred until 1956 consideration of bills (S 6, 1823) to authorize power development of the Niagara River.

NATURAL GAS

HR 6645 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 992) June 28, 1955.

• Passed by the House, amended, on a 209-203 roll-call vote. July 28. (See p. 162.)

S 1853 -- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 1219) July 28.

HR 6645 and S 1853 would exempt producers of natural gas from federal public utility regulation under the Natural Gas Act. The bills also included safeguards designed to protect the pipeline companies and consumers from unreasonable rates.

Pressure for the natural gas bill came primarily from producers in such states as Texas and Oklahoma, while opposition came from municipal spokesmen fearful of rate increases.

When the House passed the bill by a 209-203 vote, July 28, Democratic Members from Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Florida, and Arkansas voted unanimously for it. The majority of Democrats, however, opposed the bill while Republicans split, 123-67, for it.

An analysis Congressional Quarterly made to determine the extent, if any, to which the rural or urban character of Congressional districts was related to the votes of their Representatives revealed, with regard to the gas bill, that:

Representatives who opposed unregulated gas rates came from districts that were substantially more urban than districts whose Representatives supported the measure.

On the average, 64 of every 100 persons in the U.S. live in cities of 2,500 or more, according to the 1950 census. Supporters of the gas bill -- Republicans and Democrats -- represented districts in which 55 of every 100 persons live in urban areas. The ratio for opponents' districts was 68 per 100.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Natural Gas Amendment." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 503ff.)

The natural gas industry has three major segments: producers, pipeliners, and distributors. Short sketches of the role each plays in getting natural gas from the well to the consumer:

PRODUCER -- Engages in exploration and development of natural gas wells. The process is hit or miss; according to the industry, an average of eight exploratory holes are dug before a well is located. Independent producers do not have pipelines for conveying their gas to the customer as non-independents do. A Supreme Court decision in June, 1954, brought the independent producer under the jurisdiction of the Federal Power Commission.

PIPELINER -- Transports the gas from the well to the city distributors for ultimate consumption. To carry out this function pipeline companies have built up a system of pipelines with total mileage greater than U.S. railroad trackage. Pipeline firms are regulated under the Natural Gas Act of 1938 by the Federal Power Commission.

DISTRIBUTOR -- Supplies gas for consumption within a given franchise area. Distributors are normally given a monopoly, but like other public utilities, the rates are set and are otherwise regulated by the state or city agency.

The Gas Problem

An outline of the major developments leading to the existing controversy over how much federal regulation should be exercised over the natural gas industry:

WHAT CONGRESS SAID IN THE LAW

Section 1 (b) of the Natural Gas Act of 1938 states: "The provisions of this Act shall apply to the transportation of natural gas in interstate commerce, to the sale in interstate commerce of natural gas for resale for ultimate public consumption for domestic, commercial, industrial, or any other use, and to natural-gas companies engaged in such transportation or sale, but shall not apply to any other transportation or sale of natural gas or to the local distribution of natural gas or to the facilities used for such distribution or to the production or gathering of natural gas."

ACTION BY THE SUPREME COURT

By a (5-3) decision in Phillips Petroleum Co. vs. Wisconsin (347 U.S. 674), the Supreme Court on June 7, 1954, upheld a lower court in saying that all sales of natural gas in interstate commerce for resale were subject to regulation by the Federal Power Commission whether made before, during or after production or gathering.

REVERSAL BY THE FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION

Having previously ruled on numerous occasions that it had no jurisdiction over sales of natural gas by independent producers and gatherers, the FPC issued order No. 174 (July, 1954), No. 174-A (August, 1954) and 174-B (December, 1954) which required independent producers to file certificates of public convenience and necessity by Dec. 1, 1955; froze prices in contracts between pipelines and producers at levels of June 7, 1954; and prohibited producers from making new or discontinuing former deliveries of gas to interstate pipelines without prior FPC approval and certification.

FUEL REPORT

In 1954, President Eisenhower appointed a committee to study the nation's fuel problems. It was headed by Arthur S. Flemming, director of the Office of Defense Mobilization. Members included heads of the Departments of State, Treasury, Defense, Justice, Interior, Commerce, and Labor.

After a five-month study, the President's Advisory Committee on Energy Supplies and Resources Policy recommended Feb. 26:

(1) Federal regulation of natural gas should begin when it enters interstate pipelines and not at the wellhead. The proposal ran counter to the 1954 Supreme Court decision in the Phillips case.

(2) Oil imports should be restricted to 1954 totals, to prevent impairment of the domestic fuel industry. If the limitation could not be achieved voluntarily, the Committee implied, action by Congress would be advocated.

Attempts to limit oil imports were made during consideration of legislation extending the reciprocal trade agreements law. (See pp. 289ff.)

Among comments by Congressmen on the report:

Sen. A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- "This endorsement should convince Congress that legislative correction of the Supreme Court at this session is absolutely necessary."

Sen. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) -- "The weasel-worded section on natural gas means that the White House is giving Administration backing to what amounts to a repeal of the Supreme Court decision in the Phillips case. This means that consumers had better get ready for more millions on their gas bills."

GAS BILL INTRODUCED

Rep. Oren Harris (D Ark.) March 2 introduced a bill (HR 4560) to amend the Natural Gas Act to relieve independent producers and gatherers of natural gas from federal regulation and to protect consumers against exorbitant rates. The bill was designed to carry out recommendations made by the President's Advisory Committee. Sen. Alexander Wiley (R Wis.) said in the Senate March 8 he had written the President urging him to reject his Committee's recommendation.

The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee March 12 approved a policy statement declaring that the Federal Power Commission should regulate certain types of price increase clauses in contracts between producers and interstate pipelines.

Chairman Percy Priest (D Tenn.) termed the vote "an informal consensus" that the FPC should have authority over clauses which might "trigger" unreasonable price increases.

A group of municipal and state officials met with President Eisenhower March 18 to protest proposed exemption of independent natural gas producers from federal regulation. The President discussed the question with the group, but said he had made no decision on the matter. The group told the President that "60 million users of natural gas" would lose their existing protection against "unreasonable rates" if the proposed legislation was approved.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARINGS -- March 22 through May 2, intermittently. The first hearings were on HR 4560 (Harris' bill) and HR 4675, introduced by Rep. Carl Hinshaw (R Calif.), which also would reduce federal regulation of the gas industry.

TESTIMONY -- March 22 -- Chairman Jerome K. Kuykendall of the Federal Power Commission supported the bills. "It is the considered opinion of the majority of this Commission," he said, "that legislation should be considered which will exempt from the operations of the Natural Gas Act independent producers and gatherers of natural gas who sell gas at wholesale to pipeline companies" engaged in interstate commerce.

He said the FPC did not see why federal control should be put on natural gas while competitive fuels, coal and oil, were left free of regulation.

March 23 -- Ernest O. Thompson, a member of the Texas Railroad Commission which enforces that state's oil and gas conservation law, urged approval of HR 4560. Unless such legislation were enacted, he said, "the search for oil and gas (will be) inhibited, decreased, and...the interstate marketing of gas...deterred." Federal control, he continued, was "sure to result in both short supply and higher prices."

March 24 -- David T. Searls, Houston, Texas, attorney, supported HR 4560. He said that it was not the intent of Congress when it passed the Natural Gas Act in 1938 to place gas producers under federal control.

March 25 -- Rep. Clement J. Zablocki (D Wis.) opposed the bills. Reps. Hale Boggs (D La.), Harley O. Staggers (D W. Va.), Walter Rogers (D Texas), Charles A. Vanik (D Ohio), and James E. Van Zandt (R Pa.) supported bills they had introduced to revise the Natural Gas Act.

John W. Boatwright, an economist for Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, urged enactment of HR 4560. He said continued federal controls would lead to diminishing supplies of gas at higher prices.

GAS USERS, NAM FOR BILLS

March 29 -- John F. Merriam, representing the Independent Natural Gas Users Association of America and the Northern Natural Gas Pipe Line Co., backed HR 4560 and 4675. Statements favoring the bills were filed by the National Association of Manufacturers and the Investors League, Inc., of New York City.

March 30 -- E.S. Walker, representing the governor of New Mexico, opposed federal regulation. Statements supporting the bills were filed for the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., National Grange, American National Cattlemen's Association, and the National Wool Growers Association.

March 31 -- J. French Robinson of the Consolidated Natural Gas Co. asked for continued federal regulation of producers selling gas under contracts calling for automatic price increases.

April 15 -- Some opposition to the bills was registered by spokesmen for the Public Service Electric & Gas Co., Newark, N.J.; Philadelphia (Pa.) Gas Works; Brooklyn (N.Y.) Union Gas Co.; Lake Shore Gas Co., Ashtabula, Ohio; Philadelphia (Pa.) Electric Co.; Commonwealth Natural Gas Corp., Richmond, Va.; and the New England Power Service Co.

April 18 -- Patrick L. Farnand of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Gas Co. opposed the bills and contended that higher consumer prices for natural gas had resulted primarily from rising costs of gas in the field. Supporting the measures were spokesmen for the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Oil Jobbers Council.

April 19 -- Rep. Keith Thomson (R Wyo.) supported the bills. Rep. Edmund P. Radwan (R N.Y.) was joined by Wesley W. Cooper, a member of the Arlington (Va.) County Board, in opposing the bills. Cooper said natural gas prices should be regulated at all levels of production, transmission, and distribution for "protection of the public interest."

COAL GROUPS PROTEST GAS PRACTICES

April 20 -- Spokesmen for the National Coal Association urged support of a bill (HR 4943) to grant the FPC authority to regulate prices on natural gas sold by pipeline companies directly to large industrial users and to enforce conservation practices on natural gas. They also said they would oppose measures to free natural gas from price regulation at the well, unless such legislation included provisions for conservation and industry-sales regulation.

April 21 -- Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers (Ind.) urged enactment of HR 4943, which he said was "designed to eliminate wasteful, cut-throat competitive practices of the gas industry." He said a "substantial part" of the gain by natural gas could be attributed to "inequalities in the law which give natural gas unmerited advantage over coal."

April 22 -- Rep. Bruce Alger (R Texas) said "price-fixing regulations will have a tendency to reduce, rather than increase, the search for new markets.... Gas must be allowed to seek its true price level through free competetion with competitive fuels, or it will be found necessary to regulate the prices of these fuels also and thus establish a federal bureau control over all of our energy resources."

April 25 -- Joseph W. Childs of the United Rubber Workers (CIO) said the elimination of federal control would result in sharp consumer price increases. Opposition to HR 4560, 4675 also came from Americans for Democratic Action and Thomas C. Buchanan of Beaver, Pa., a former FPC chairman.

April 26 -- Representatives of 50 mayors and member municipalities of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers opposed the legislation.

April 27 -- Wisconsin Attorney General Vernon R. Thomson, opposing the bills, said HR 4560 included the "greatest collection of ingenious devices so far conceived which are inimical to the interest of the consumer." Opposition also was expressed by representatives of the League of Virginia Municipalities, Denver, Colo., Wayne County, Mich., St. Paul, Minn., Covington, Ky., Chicago, and Cleveland.

MAYORS, GOVERNOR OPPOSE BILLS

April 28 -- Mayors Robert F. Wagner of New York City and Thomas D'Alesandro, Jr., of Baltimore opposed the bills. Wagner said FPC retention of regulatory authority was "required for the protection of consumers." D'Alesandro said that "unless the trend of higher prices for gas purchased in the field is checked by federal regulation, we are convinced that the advantages...from natural gas...will soon be wiped out and...(it) will cost as much or more than manufactured gas."

Opposition also came from Tennessee Gov. Frank G. Clement (D) who said a fluctuation of the field price of natural gas would "create a tremendous financial impact upon (Tennessee's) total economic structure." Clement's views were in a statement read by Tennessee Attorney General George F. McCandless.

April 1 -- J. French Robinson of the Consolidated Natural Gas Co. requested continued federal regulation of producers selling gas under contracts calling for automatic price increases.

April 14 -- Randall J. Leboeuf, Jr., counsel for the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, testified for that company and 13 similar concerns. Leboeuf said to give producers "a complete freedom from any effective restraint" on their prices "would seriously injure" the nation's 21 million gas consumers. He added that "stringent" regulation of the producers was "not suited to the realities of the gas producing business."

May 2 -- FPC Chairman Kuykendall said the agency saw no need for federal rate control over natural gas sold directly by pipeline companies to industrial consumers, a provision found in HR 4943. He said the Commission majority felt there was a "great amount of competition" among producers. It would be "difficult, if not impossible," he said, to exercise control over them.

AMENDMENTS VOTED

ACTION -- May 18 -- Chairman Priest said the Committee, in executive session, had adopted an amendment to HR 4560 that would require the FPC to determine, when a rate boost was based on an "escalator" clause, whether the higher producer's price represented the "reasonable market price" for gas at the wellhead. The amendment would give consumers some protection from automatic increases in the wellhead price of natural gas.

May 26 -- The Committee approved an amendment to allow natural gas pipelines a "reasonable market price" for their gas. Previously the FPC had fixed rates pipelines could charge local distributors on the basis of cost of developing gas sources.

The Committee also approved a provision to require natural gas companies to pay only the part of the increase in price which did not exceed the reasonable market price. Under this amendment, pipelines would not have to pay independent producers for price increases not approved by the FPC.

June 2 -- Priest said the Committee had rejected, "by a margin of several votes," an amendment it had accepted June 1 which would have directed the Federal Power Commission to "consider" the effect on other fuel industries of proposed lighter regulation of natural gas prices.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) June 22 called for legislation to overturn the Supreme Court decision on regulation of natural gas prices and added: "It is going to take the endorsement and the power of the Administration to get this bill passed, and, of course, that means the President of the United States also."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee June 28 reported an amended bill (HR 6645 -- H Rept 992) to amend the Natural Gas Act by exempting producers and gatherers of natural gas from federal regulation.

The bill was approved by the Committee by a 16-15 vote after the Committee first decided, 17-14, to reconsider a June 7 tie vote which would have shelved the measure. The Committee also rejected, 12-19, a motion to delay action on the issue for 10 days and refer it to a Subcommittee.

H Rept 992 said the regulation of gas producers as public utilities was in the best interests of neither the consumer nor the public. It added that Congress had not meant such regulation when it passed the Natural Gas Act of 1938. Except for additional power given the FPC to protect consumer prices, the report said HR 6645 would restore the law to what it had been generally believed to be prior to the 1954 Supreme Court ruling that the FPC had power to regulate gas producers.

The Committee majority said "the excise of federal jurisdiction for the purpose of regulating producers of natural gas as public utilities constitutes, it is believed, an extension of federal authority...without precedent under our American system of free enterprise. Producers of natural gas should be treated as what they are, namely, producers of a commodity like coal, oil, or copper, not as public utilities...."

DISSENTING REPORTS

Reps. John W. Heselton (R Mass.) and Torbert H. Macdonald (D Mass.) filed a dissenting report in which they said the Supreme Court decision was "a necessary complement in providing regulation of interstate gas from the time it first flows into the interstate pipeline until it reaches the ultimate consumer.... There has not been and cannot be effective regulation at the in-put end without regulation by the federal government."

Heselton and Macdonald, who sponsored identical bills (HR 4924, 5339) to exempt from federal regulation only those persons who produced less than two billion cubic feet of natural gas a year, said their proposals would free approximately 97 percent of the producers from regulation "and yet would leave subject to regulation more than 90 percent of the gas sold...." They said the major oil companies supplying 90 percent of the gas make up "a close-knit organization, monopolizing the industry and holding, if permitted, a dictatorship over the consumer."

In another dissent, Rep. Harley O. Staggers (D W. Va.), said HR 6645 should be rejected by the House unless it was "amended to include necessary provisions which will empower the Federal Power Commission to conserve the available reserves of natural gas, prevent rate discrimination favoring industrial consumers over domestic consumers, and establish a better balance in the conditions which fuels competing with natural gas must meet as a result of the construction and administration of the Natural Gas Act." Staggers was the sponsor of a bill (HR 4943) which would have carried out his recommendations.

Floor Action

The House July 28 passed HR 6645 by a 209-203 roll-call vote. A motion to recommit (kill) the bill, offered by Charles A. Wolverton (R N.J.), was rejected by a 203-210 roll call. An open rule (H Res 317 -- H Rept 1145) for consideration of HR 6645 was adopted by a 273-135 roll-call vote. (For voting see chart, p. 162.)

A motion by Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) to strike the enacting clause, thus killing HR 6645, was defeated by a 73-131 teller vote. Prior to the teller vote, the motion had been rejected by a 58-93 standing vote.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 6645:

Exempted producers of gas from federal public utility regulation.

Empowered the Federal Power Commission to determine what comprised a "reasonable market price."

Authorized the FPC to disregard field prices above the reasonable market price as grounds for gas companies to raise consumer rates.

Required producers to fulfill existing contracts with gas companies without resorting to price hikes authorized in contract escalator clauses. Excepted were clauses providing for specific increases on definite dates and increases caused by new taxes on producers.

Forbade producers to cancel contracts when their customers refused to pay more than the established reasonable market price.

Gave an industrial natural gas user the right to seek redress for an unfair price increase.

Empowered the FPC to determine the reasonable market price for new or renewed contracts between producers and natural gas companies.

FUELS NOT UTILITIES

DEBATE -- William M. Colmer (D Miss.) -- "Gas is no more a utility than is coal or any other fuel and as such there is no more reason for controlling its production than there is for the mining of coal...(or) any other product...."

James J. Delaney (D N.Y.) -- "The consuming public will know what the effect of...this bill is as they receive their gas bills.... There will be an increase in gas bills and...the head of the household will be constantly reminded of the increase...."

Leo E. Allen (R Ill.) -- "It is beyond my comprehension to understand why the government should fix the price of natural gas where it comes out of the ground any more than the government should fix the price of iron, coal, the fish of New England, or shoes that are manufactured."

Oren Harris (D Ark.) -- "There is nothing in the history of the (gas) legislation which even indicated that it was intended that the producers of natural gas were natural gas companies."

William A. Barrett (D Pa.) -- "We, as members of Congress, must protect the consumer and this can be accomplished by defeating this bill."

(See Congressional Record, July 28.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Lee Metcalf (D Mont.) -- Delete language making imported or exported gas subject to federal regulation. Voice.

Oren Harris (D Ark.) -- Prevent cancellation of any contract between natural gas companies and producers under a provision which would require the company to pay only that part of an automatic "escalation clause" price increase which did not exceed the reasonable market price. Voice.

John James Flynt, Jr. (D Ga.) -- Give an industrial user of natural gas the right to seek redress for an unfair price increase. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Torbert H. Macdonald (D Mass.) -- Exempt from federal regulation only those natural gas producers whose total sales in a calendar year did not exceed 2 billion cubic feet. Standing, 60-125.

John B. Bennett (R Mich.) -- Substitute "just and reasonable" price increases to be determined by the Federal Power Commission for "reasonable market price," and permit FPC to determine whether prices existing when HR 6645 became law were "just and reasonable." Standing, 65-89; teller, 85-152.

James J. Delaney (D N.Y.) -- Prohibit natural gas transmitters from owning gas wells. Standing, 58-97.

John Bell Williams (D Miss.) -- Amend the Harris amendment by striking from HR 6645 the provision requiring natural gas companies to pay only that part of an "escalation clause" price increase which did not exceed the reasonable market price. Voice.

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- Delete from HR 6645 a section directing FPC to allow as an operating expense of natural gas transmitting companies the price it paid for gas purchased from itself or an affiliate. Standing 41-101.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARINGS -- May 10 through June 9 on S 1853, a bill to exempt natural gas producers from federal public utility regulation.

TESTIMONY -- May 10 -- Sen. J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.), who introduced S 1853, said natural gas was a "luxury" fuel. Its consumers, he said, were not entitled to federal control of its price. He said consumers could turn to coal or oil if they did not like the price of natural gas.

Ernest O. Thompson of the Texas Railroad Commission and David T. Searls, Houston attorney, supported the Fulbright bill.

May 11 -- John W. Boatwright, an economist with Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, said natural gas would be a bargain at double existing producer rates. Opposing federal regulation of gas prices, he said "natural gas is one of the few items in the family budget for which the price has remained comparatively stable." He denied that gas was under the control of a monopoly, asserting that natural gas production was divided among 8,000 independent producers.

Harold B. Fell of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said federal regulation of natural gas prices would divert gas to intrastate uses, discourage exploration, and interfere with state conservation measures.

May 12 -- Russell B. Brown of the Independent Petroleum Association of America backed S 1853 and opposed any move for federal control over contract clauses calling for automatic price increases under certain circumstances.

John F. Merriam of the Independent Natural Gas Association said the result of continued federal price regulation would "be a slowing down of the volumes of gas available for consuming areas."

May 17 -- Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.) filed a statement for Gov. Robert F. Kennon (D La.) supporting S 1853.

CITY SPOKESMEN FEAR HIGH PRICES

Rep. Charles A. Vanik (D Ohio) and spokesmen for Philadelphia, Pa., Covington and Louisville, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, and Virginia said they opposed S 1853. Philadelphia Mayor Joseph S. Clark, Jr., head of a committee of 49 mayors opposed to the elimination of federal control over sale of natural gas in the field, said it "seems almost incredible" to say there should be federal regulation of natural gas prices in interstate commerce, but not at the point where the producer sells it to the interstate pipeline. Clark said S 1853, if enacted, would "drown the consumer in the flood of high prices."

May 18 -- Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) testified in favor of S 1853 and presented a statement from Gov. William G. Stratton (R Ill.) also favoring the bill.

May 19 -- Representatives of seven cities testified against S 1853.

May 24 -- Los Angeles Mayor Norris Poulson, supporting S 1853, said he was "convinced that the legislation...is essential if the gas consumers...are to be assured of a dependable supply at a price that will continue to be fair." Sen. Frank A. Barrett (R Wyo.) submitted a statement from Wyoming Gov. Milward L. Simpson supporting the bill.

Opposition witnesses represented the state of Minnesota; St. Paul, Minn.; Parma, Ohio; Chicago, and Nashville.

EX-FPC CHAIRMAN AGAINST BILL

May 25 -- Thomas C. Buchanan, former FPC chairman, said S 1853 would "create an unjust enrichment of the few at the expense of the public generally." Rather than enact the bill, he said "it would be far better for an honest governmental approach to repeal the Natural Gas Act entirely."

Spokesmen for the Consolidated Edison Co. and Commonwealth Service, Inc., both New York City utility companies, opposed the bill in its existing form and suggested amendments.

May 26 -- Opposing S 1853 were spokesmen for the Brooklyn (N.Y.) Union Gas Co., United Gas Improvement Co. of Philadelphia, Philadelphia Electric Co., state of Wisconsin, and consumer organizations in Boston and Minnesota.

May 31 -- Representatives of the CIO and Americans for Democratic Action opposed S 1853 which, they said, would cost consumers as much as $800 million a year in higher gas prices. Donald Montgomery of the CIO said the legislation would increase the cost of fuel and, in many areas, of electricity. James O. Watts, Jr., of the Commonwealth Natural Gas Corp., of Richmond, Va., opposed the bill because "distributors of the eastern seaboard would be squeezed out of business."

FPC MEMBERS, 4-1, FOR BILL

June 1 -- FPC Chairman Jerome K. Kuykendall and FPC members Seaborn L. Digby, Nelson Lee Smith, and Frederick Stueck favored S 1853, with certain amendments. Claude L. Draper of FPC and J. French Robinson, chairman of the board of the Consolidated Natural Gas Co., opposed the bill.

June 2 -- Indianapolis (Ind.) Mayor Alex M. Clark supported S 1853 and submitted a list of about 100 other mayors who backed his stand. Also supporting the bill were representatives of the Investors League, Inc., of New York City and the Citizens Gas & Coke Utility of Indianapolis.

Opposing S 1853 were spokesmen for the state of Tennessee and the United Cities Utility Co. of Chicago.

Sen. Dennis Chavez (D N.M.), a former opponent of the bill, wrote the Committee that he would support it because it was for the "best interests" of the people of New Mexico.

June 9 -- Sen. Harley M. Kilgore (D W. Va.) urged enactment of his bill (S 2001) which would give the FPC jurisdiction over direct industrial sales of natural gas and direct the agency to promote the conservation of natural gas.

Rolla D. Campbell of the Huntington, W. Va., Island Creek Coal Co., speaking for hard and soft coal producers, endorsed S 2001. He said the coal industry would support S 1853 only if it contained the provisions included in Kilgore's measure. He protested that "apparently the feeling is that the natural gas industry should be the sole beneficiary of legislation bearing on competition between it and other fuels."

Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) proposed exempting only those producers whose interstate sales totaled less than two billion cubic feet of gas a year. He said this would exempt 96 percent of the independent producers selling to pipelines, but would leave under controls approximately 175 large companies who sell more than 90 percent of the gas.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Commmittee July 28 reported S 1853 (S Rept 1219) by an 11-4 vote. Voting against it were Committee Chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), and Sens. John O. Pastore (D R.I.), William A. Purtell (R Conn.), and Charles E. Potter (R Mich.)

Before approving the bill, the Committee rejected, 3-11, a motion to postpone indefinitely consideration of the measure, and, 4-9, a motion to exempt only independent small producers while defining charges and reasonable rates.

PROVISIONS -- S 1853, as reported, included the text of the House bill (HR 6645). A section was added, stipulating that producers could not cancel contracts if the FPC ruled that automatic price increases were so unreasonable that they did not have to be paid by the gas companies.

The Senate took no action on the bill in 1955.

MINORITY REPORTS

The four dissenting Senators said in a minority opinion that the bill did not protect the consumer against unwarranted increases. "To be effective, consumer protection must start at the source of interstate travel. It cannot begin in the middle of the stream leaving the producer free to charge what he will."

They declared that the "great bulk" of natural gas reserves was controlled by a "small handful of powerful oil companies" who would reap great profits from price increases at the wells. Other charges:

S 1853 "provides a new and untried set of vague standards for the fixing of the price of natural gas at the sources."

"The bill legislatively sanctions the use of all types of escalation clauses.... The (Federal Power) Commission would have no direct authority over them. Its power is limited solely to an advisory finding that the escalated price does not exceed the reasonable market price.... The present bill does not offer the consumer even the minimum of protection the majority say he is entitled to."

In separate statements, Sens. James H. Duff (R Pa.) and Frederick G. Payne (R Maine) criticized the bill. Duff said it "does not provide an adequate yardstick whereby the Federal Power Commission can establish a reasonable market price, and this could result in unfairness to the producer or disaster to the consumer."

Payne recommended that the term "just and reasonable price" should have been substituted for "reasonable market price," which he called "a new and undefined regulatory standard."

Group Stands

These groups were among those that pressed for legislation to kill federal control over natural gas producers on grounds such regulation was an encroachment on private enterprise:

- General Gas Committee, headed by Maston Nixon, president of the Southern Minerals Corp. of Corpus Christi, Texas.
- Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee, an industry group headed by L.F. McCollum, president of the Continental Oil Co., and Paul Kayser, president of the El Paso Natural Gas Co.

- Independent Natural Gas Association of America, representing the pipeline firms.
- Independent Petroleum Association of America.
- American Petroleum Institute.

Pitted against organizations fighting for decontrol were these groups which claimed consumer prices would rise if federal regulation was discontinued:

- National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, representing legal departments of 900 cities.
- Mayors' Committee, which had representatives from Philadelphia, Pa., Pittsburgh, Pa., New York City, Akron, Ohio, Birmingham, Ala., Baltimore, Md., Boston, Mass., Bridgeport, Conn., Buffalo, N.Y., Cambridge, Mass., Camden, N.J., Chicago, Ill.
- National Farmers' Union.
- National Rural Electric Cooperative Association.
- AFL and CIO.
- Public Affairs Institute, a research organization.

PRESSURE TACTICS CRITICIZED

Sen. Pat McNamara (D Mich.) May 20 said oil and gas lobbies had made a "scurrilous and slanderous" attempt to influence Senators considering the natural gas bills. He criticized the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association for circulating, at a Senate committee hearing, a press release critical of a Detroit official who testified against the legislation.

Rep. Charles A. Vanik (D Ohio) said in the House April 19: "From these (House) hearings and from the record, it appears to me that the so-called independent producers of natural gas are ghost riders in the sky, created and dancing to the music of the oil companies of America and groups of investors in oil stocks and natural gas pipelines whose fundamental interest, whose basic desire is profit -- pure and selfish profit -- free from federal regulation, free from federal scrutiny and free from public calculation."

RECLAMATION PROJECTS

HR 5881 --	Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 481) May 4, 1955.
•	Passed by the House May 26, amended, by a standing vote of 166-48. (For roll-call vote on recommittal, see p. 150.)
S 2442 --	Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee July 21 (S Rept 1073) with amendments.
HR 5881 --	Passed by voice vote of the Senate July 28, amended.
•	Accepted for conference by the House July 29.

The House and Senate adopted during the 1955 session different versions of a bill that would supplement federal reclamation work in the 17 western reclamation states and permit its extension to the 31 other states and the territories of Alaska and Hawaii. The bill had not emerged from conference when Congress adjourned Aug. 2.

Both versions authorized federal grants and loans to local groups to build and operate their own, or improve existing, reclamation projects. Grants would be based on nonreimbursable costs as defined under the reclamation laws, such as allocations for flood control or navigation. Applicants for assistance would obtain land and water rights, and draw up and carry out all construction plans.

SIGNIFICANT DIFFERENCES

Following were significant differences between the two bills. The Senate:

Placed the 160 acre limitation (contained in a 1926 reclamation law) on projects in the 17 reclamation states, i.e., limited the land of any single owner benefiting from irrigation by the proposed projects to 160 acres.

Applied the public-power preference clause to the projects.

Allowed $200 million for the program (compared to the House's $100 million.)

Set a limit of $5 million on the cost of any project (the House allowed $5-$10 million projects to qualify, but limited federal participation).

Required Congressional approval for projects involving more than $500,000 in aid.

The House required an applicant for aid to put up $1,000 toward the cost of examining the project.

Both bills divided responsibility for administering the program between the Secretaries of Interior and Agriculture. The Senate gave responsibility for the 17 reclamation states to Interior, the others to Agriculture; the House divorced Texas from the other reclamation states and put it under Agriculture.

Background

Legislation to provide a small projects reclamation program in the 17 reclamation states had been introduced in the 83rd Congress. After extensive hearings, the bill was reported by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee and passed by the House, but failed to pass the Senate in the closing days of the session.

President Eisenhower, in his budget message for fiscal 1956, said: "To the greatest extent possible, the responsibility for resource development and its cost should be borne by those who receive the benefits. In many instances private interests or state and local governments can best carry on the needed programs."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 9-11 on similar bills (HR 104, 384, 3817).

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 9 -- Reps. John R. Phillips (R Calif.) and E. Keith Thomson (R Wyo.) testified in favor of the legislation. Supporting the legislation generally were Fred G. Aandahl, Assistant Secretary of Interior; Commissioner W. A. Dexheimer, Bureau of Reclamation; and other Bureau officials.

Feb. 10 -- Representatives of the National Reclamation Association supported the proposals. Witnesses included John Bliss of New Mexico, chairman of the small projects committee; Roy Whitacre of Nevada, manager of the Walker River Irrigation District, Thomas W. Jensen, secretary-manager of Utah Water Users Association; Doyle Boen and Floyd Bonge of the Eastern Municipal Water District, Hamet, Calif.; and W. C. Smith of Ainsworth, Neb., small projects committee member.

Feb. 11 -- Witnesses favoring the plan were Matt Triggs, assistant legislative director, American Farm Bureau Federation; Lloyd C. Halvorson, economist, the National Grange; and Charles H. Callison of the National Wildlife Federation.

ACTION -- On May 4 the Committee reported a clean bill (HR 5881 --H Rept 481) incorporating committee amendments and the provisions of a similar bill (HR 104). As reported, the bill would assign administrative responsibility for the 48-state program to the Secretary of Interior.

Floor Action

The House May 26 passed HR 5881, amended, by a standing vote of 166-48.

A recommittal motion by Charles B. Hoeven (R Iowa) was rejected by a roll-call vote of 62-229. (For voting, see chart, p. 150.) The motion would have returned the bill to the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee with instructions to report it back after limiting its application to the 17 western reclamation states.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, the bill:

Authorized federal grants and loans to local groups in the states and territories for small reclamation projects costing up to $5 million or between $5-$10 million if there was no increase in federal aid.

Required applicants for assistance to obtain required land and rights of way, draw up all necessary plans, and put up $1,000 toward the cost of examining the project.

Vested authority to administer the program in the Secretary of Interior for the western reclamation states, except Texas, and in the Secretary of Agriculture for the others.

Authorized appropriation of $100 million to carry out the act.

SMALL PROJECTS NEED NEW APPROACH

DEBATE -- Clair Engle (D Calif.) -- "The simple way to state the purposes ... of this legislation is to say that it is to permit local agencies to plan and construct small irrigation projects with the same money, but we believe less of it, as that which would be used for the same purpose by the Bureau of Reclamation... Our experience has shown that the Bureau is not geared to build small projects....".

H. Carl Andersen (R Minn.) -- Argued that the bill should be limited to the 17 western reclamation states, asked if Congress wanted the "Department of Interior opening up regional offices...throughout the U.S....simply because of the proposed legislation?"

Leroy Johnson (R Calif.) -- "This proposal will be a tremendous help to those who wish to develop small irrigation and conservation projects...When the Reclamation Bureau is in control...the administrative cost in many...projects runs over 25 per cent. With local control that would be greatly decreased."

Robert E. Jones, Jr. (D Ala.) -- His amendment to give responsibility for administering the program in the non-reclamation states to the Secretary of Agriculture was a "great economy measure since it provides that existing agencies will do the job."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Jones -- Have Agriculture Department administering the program in non-reclamation states and Texas. Standing, 85-23.

Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) -- Change bill's wording to conform to Jones amendment.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Make the provisions of the bill applicable only to the 17 western reclamation states. Standing, 27-57.

Saylor -- Make the bill apply also to "Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa." Voice.

Saylor -- Amend the Jones amendment to include Texas among the reclamation states. Standing, 33-54.

Saylor -- Delete the provision specifying free interest on irrigation loans on land of 160 acres or less. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 8 and March 31 on similar bills (S 164, 405).

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 8 -- Favoring the proposals were John Bliss, chairman, and Roy Whitacre, secretary of the small projects subcommittee of the National Reclamation Association, and Doyle Boen of the Eastern Municipal Water District, Riverside County, Calif.

March 31 -- Favoring the bills were Sens. George W. Malone (R Nev.), Alan Bible (D Nev.), and Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.); Elmer Bennett and Richard Witmer of the Bureau of Reclamation; William E. Welsh; Floyd Bonge, of Riverside County, Calif.; and Matt Triggs, American Farm Bureau Federation.

ACTION -- The Committee reported S 2442, with amendments, July 21 (S Rept 1073).

Floor Action

The Senate July 28 passed HR 5881 by voice vote, after substituting an amended text of S 2442 for the House provisions. The bill was then sent to conference.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, the bill:

Authorized federal grants and loans to local groups for small reclamation projects costing up to $5 million.

Required Congressional approval for any project involving aid of more than $500,000.

Authorized $100 million for projects in the 17 western reclamation states, to be administered by the Secretary of Interior.

Authorized $100 million for projects in the 31 other states and Alaska and Hawaii, to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Gave the Secretary discretionary authority to require additional pledges of assets and income from applicants in those areas.

Placed the 160 acre limitation (contained in a 1926 reclamation law) on the program in the 17 reclamation states.

Applied the public-power preference clause to all projects.

FARM AREAS ORIGINALLY EXCLUDED

DEBATE -- Clinton P. Anderson (D N. M.) -- "There was substantial opposition to the bill (as first submitted) because it excluded many of the farming areas of the country where drainage is a great necessity." Therefore, Title II of the bill, providing a program for the 31 non-reclamation states and the territories, had been worked out by Russell B. Long (D La.) with other southern Senators.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Explained that his amendment, for the traditional 160 acre limitation on irrigated holdings, would not apply in the non-reclamation states.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Morse -- Make excess - land requirements under the reclamation act of May 25, 1926, apply in the 17 reclamation states where a new project furnishes irrigation. Voice.

Morse -- Apply public-power preference to all projects. Voice.

LEFT IN CONFERENCE

The House July 29 agreed to a conference with the Senate on HR 5881. The conferees met but failed to agree on a compromise text, before the session adjourned.

AEC CONSTRUCTION

HR 6795 -- Reported by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy (H Rept 787) June 14, 1955. An identical bill (S 2220, with an identical report, S Rept 538) was reported to the Senate June 14.

- Passed by the House, by voice vote, June 27.
- Passed by the Senate, by voice vote, amended June 28. (For roll-call vote, see p. 130.)
- House agreed to Senate amendment, June 29.

P.L. 141 -- Signed into law July 11.

HR 6795 authorized appropriations of $269,159,000 for Atomic Energy Commission construction. Although President Eisenhower had requested $21 million for an atomic-powered merchant ship, no effort was made on the House floor to grant this request. The Senate rejected the atomic-ship plan by a 41-42 roll-call vote. The bill included $5 million for the President's atoms-for-peace plan.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law HR 6795 provided:
$130,712,000 for reactor development projects.
$65,198,000 for atomic weapons projects.
$24,634,000 for special nuclear material.
$6,215,000 for source and other raw materials.
$17,960,000 for general plant projects.
$11,590,000 for physical research.
$6,040,000 for biology and medicine.
$6,810,000 for community projects.

HR 6795 reduced AEC's leeway to exceed fund authorizations, limited its authority to substitute a different project for one previously authorized. AEC currently could proceed with projects costing as much as 35 per cent more than authorized. HR 6795 cut the "overrun" to 25 percent in the case of partly designed or novel "equipment not amenable to accurate cost forecasting" and to 10 percent for "normal construction activity" subject to "precise" cost estimation.

To substitute a new project for an authorized one, the AEC, except in emergencies, was required to certify the new project was "essential" for defense, "required by changes in weapon characteristics or weapon logistic operations," and could not be produced by private industry. The bill also authorized funds for advance project planning to increase AEC's ability to estimate construction costs.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Atomic Energy." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 534ff.)

The budget for fiscal 1956 included $2 billion for the Atomic Energy Commission. A new AEC spending high was provided for "projects to develop peaceful applications of atomic energy."

The President asked Congress to authorize new AEC construction and requested $1.3 billion in new obligational authority for the AEC. He said the AEC in 1956 "will expand substantially its program to develop industrial power reactors," and would begin construction of several experimental reactors in 1955 and 1956. "Of these," he said, "one of the most significant is a power breeder designed to produce more fissionable material than it consumes."

The budget, submitted Jan. 17, 1955, asked authorization for AEC to:

Build a new medical research center with a nuclear reactor designed for medical research and therapy.

Make plant improvements and construct other production facilities.

Construct certain new weapons research facilities.

Build new developmental atomic reactor projects.

Establish an international training school in reactor technology.

Mr. Eisenhower also requested that residents of Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Richland, Wash., be permitted to purchase their homes and establish self-government.

President Eisenhower April 25 said he would request funds to send an atomic-powered merchant ship around the world as an example of the "peace-time use of atomic energy, harnessed for the improvement of human living." (See pp. 463ff.)

After Congress cleared the AEC construction bill without authorizing the atomic merchant ship, the President June 29 sent a $294.7 million supplemental request to Congress for AEC projects. Included in the request was $21 million for an atomic merchant ship propulsion unit. The money was not appropriated. (See pp. 242ff.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Joint Atomic Energy.

HEARINGS -- May 2,9,10,31 in executive sessions. AEC members testified.

ACTION -- The Committee June 14 reported identical bills (HR 6795 - H Rept 787; S 2220 - S Rept 538) authorizing $267,709,000 for Atomic Energy Commission construction.

The Committee specifically prohibited use of AEC funds to start construction of electric transmission lines, thus preventing AEC from building power lines between the Tennessee Valley Authority system and the proposed Dixon-Yates generating plant at West Memphis, Ark. The Committee refused to authorize $21 million for a proposed $34 million nuclear-powered, good-will merchant ship. The Committee, however, authorized $25 million for a surface ship reactor that could be "used in both merchant and naval surface ships."

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, HR 6795 was in the same form as on final passage, except that it authorized $23,184,000 for special nuclear material (rather than $24,634,000).

Floor Action

The House June 27 passed HR 6795 by voice vote without amendment.

DEBATE -- Chet Holifield (D Calif.) -- The bill would authorize $5 million for the President's atoms-for-peace plan to provide medical and scientific reactors for other nations that "are willing to enter bilateral agreements" with the U.S. This sum "would provide a minimum of 10 'swimming pool' type reactors on an outright contribution basis or as many as 20" if the recipient nations met half the cost. The bill also would provide $25 million for building "a prototype nuclear propulsion system for large surface ships primarily for military purposes."

Senate

The Senate June 28 passed HR 6795 by voice vote after adding $1,450,000 for the Oak Ridge barrier plant (special nuclear material). The Senate rejected an amendment by Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) to provide $21 million for the atomic merchant ship. The 41-42 roll-call vote on the Hickenlooper amendment was almost strictly on party lines. Only Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) voted with Republicans for the amendment. (For voting, see chart, p. 130.)

ATOM SHIP OPPOSED

DEBATE -- Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) -- "Testimony received from the best technical authorities" convinced the Joint Atomic Energy Committee "that the proposed propulsion system for the (good-will) cargo ship is not...efficient or desirable." Constructing the merchant ship would "not advance the art of reactor development one iota" and would "divert technicians and production facilities from more urgent and worthwhile work."

Hickenlooper -- "Granted that $21 million for the (merchant ship) powerplant is much more than the cost of a conventional powerplant in a ship...but it will be designed to show the people of the world that the United States is pre-eminent in the peaceful use of atomic energy... When the ship enters a foreign port" its powerplant could be hooked up with the port's powerplant and used to light "certain portions of the city."

Anderson -- "This is a poor way to spend $21 million.... (The ship's) capital cost would be five times that of a comparable conventional-type ship. The estimate of operating costs runs as high as 10 times the cost of an equivalent conventional ship...." He called the atomic ship "a smokestackless wonder" and a "floating museum."

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- The atomic ship would cost "a few million dollars for the greatest demonstration project" that probably could be provided.

John O. Pastore (D R.I.) -- The powerplant for the proposed ship would burn U-235, "the most expensive fuel that can be used in a reactor... Someone sold him (President Eisenhower) a wrong bill of goods.... Let us (instead) build medical reactors and prove that we are willing to eradicate pestilence and starvation from the deprived nations of the world."

William F. Knowland (R Calif.) -- "It would have been better if the President had made this suggestion to the Committee" before announcing it publicly. "But the fact is that the President...has made this recommendation and has submitted this request; and I hope the Senate will not repudiate it."

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Anderson -- Increase the authorization for a barrier plant addition at Oak Ridge, Tenn., from $750,000 to $2.2 million. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Hickenlooper -- Authorize $21 million for "design construction, and installation" of an atomic reactor in a merchant ship. Roll call, 41-42.

HOUSE CONCURRENCE

The House June 29 agreed to the Senate amendment, clearing the bill for the President.

HR 6243 --	Reported by House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee (H Rept 1130) July 12.
•	Passed by the House by voice vote July 18.
S 2522 --	Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 1034) July 20.
S 2523 --	Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 1035) July 20.
•	Reported amended, by Joint Atomic Energy Committee (S Rept 1269) July 30. An identically amended bill (HR 7038 -- H Rept 1604) was reported to the House.

A dramatic proposal by President Eisenhower for an atomic-powered "peace ship" to tour the ports of the world received a mixed reception in the 1955 Congress. Objection to the proposal on practical grounds led to its being linked with a plan for long-range development of an economically competitive nuclear-powered merchant ship. Combined in one measure, the proposals were reported July 30 by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy (S 2523 and HR 7038, amended.).

Also reported by the House Merchant Marine Committee were a similar combined proposal (HR 6679) and a measure proposing only long-range development of a commercial ship (HR 6243). The latter was passed by the House July 12. A bill for the peace ship alone (S 2522) was reported by the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and referred to the Atomic Energy Committee.

Background

In his speech April 25, 1955, President Eisenhower announced: "We have added to the U.S. program for peaceful uses of atomic energy an atomic-powered merchant ship. The Atomic Energy Commission and the Maritime Administration are now developing specifications....The new ship, powered with an atomic reactor.... will demonstrate to people everywhere this peacetime use of atomic energy, harnessed for the improvement of human living....Also the ship will be an atomic exhibit carrying to all people practical knowledge of the usefulness of this new science in such fields as medicine, agriculture and power production."

A month later, the President requested a supplemental appropriation of $12,650,000 for the Maritime Administration to design, construct, outfit and prepare the ship for operation, and $21,000,000 for the Atomic Energy Commission for construction and installation of the atomic reactor and propulsion machinery.

The main outlines of the President's proposal were followed in S 2522, HR 7360 (an appropriation bill) and HR 7038, introduced, respectively, by Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa), Reps. W. Sterling Cole (R N.Y.) and James T. Patterson (R Conn.).

The President's plan as spelled out by the Budget Bureau called for installing the same type of atomic reactor used in the atomic submarine "Nautilus" in an "essentially conventional" merchant-ship hull, which would have permitted completion of the vessel "by the summer of 1957."

Opposition to the President's idea was expressed on two main grounds: the ship's construction would not aid the competitive position of the American merchant marine because it would add nothing to technological development of a "prototype nuclear-powered ship;" construction would delay Navy plans for developing nuclear ships. It was argued that other countries (chiefly Norway) already were moving into the nuclear ship field and that it would be an error, from both a "military standpoint as well as a propaganda standpoint," for the U.S. to take second or third place.

The peace ship was described by critics as an "international side show," a "show boat," and a "museum ship."

LONG-RANGE PLANS

Criticism of the idea led to submission of alternative proposals for long-range development of a competitive nuclear-powered merchant ship.

One proposal (HR 6243) by Rep. Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C.) empowered the Maritime Administration to proceed with such development. A technical expert testifying before the Merchant Marine Committee, which reported the bill, estimated that "at least five years would be required for the development of a commercially feasible powerplant for maritime use."

The Atomic Energy Commission, opposing HR 6243 and favoring the President's proposal, said: "At the present state of the art (of the development of practical and economical nuclear power for merchant ships), the construction of another nuclear-propelled merchant ship should be preceded by a thorough feasibility study, followed by a considerable research and development effort."

Another bill (S 2523) envisaging "a radically new propulsion facility" was introduced by Sens. Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) and Earle C. Clements (D Ky.). In its favorable report on the bill (S Rept 1035) July 20, the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce said development of such a vessel would greatly improve the competitive position of American shipping with "foreign low-wage shipping."

Bills incorporating the President's peace ship proposal met several rebuffs. The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy failed to report the Hickenlooper measure (S 2522) and refused to include in an AEC construction bill (HR 6795) authorization of $21 million for the AEC's part in the plan. (See story, above.) On the Senate floor June 28, an amendment by Hickenlooper to include the $21 million was defeated on a 41-42 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 130.)

In the first Supplemental Appropriation bill for fiscal 1956 (HR 7278 -- PL 219) Congress refused to appropriate the required $12,650,000 for the hull and $21 million for the power plant. (See pp. 242ff.)

TWO-PRONG APPROACH

After a telephone call from President Eisenhower to Sen. Anderson, chairman of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, the Committee acted. It in effect combined the President's proposal, as contained in S 2522 and HR 7038, with the proposal for long-range development contained in S 2523 and reported amended bills (S 2523 and HR 7038) with identical texts July 30 (S Rept 1269 and H Rept 1604). Neither was passed.

After a White House meeting, Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R Calif.) Aug. 2 -- the last day of the session -- said the President again had pressed for passage of the atomic ship bill so Russia would not get a head start on a similar project.

Congress took no further action, however.

House

COMMITTEE -- Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

HEARINGS -- In May on the U.S. merchant marine replacement program, and June 7 on HR 6679, to authorize construction of two nuclear-powered merchant ships -- one the exhibit ship proposed by the President and the other a prototype commercial vessel.

TESTIMONY -- May 13 -- Maritime Administrator Clarence G. Morse and Cmdr. John J. McMullen of the Maritime Administration said they favored President Eisenhower's proposal for the immediate construction of an atom-powered merchant ship. Morse said, however, the "Maritime Administration considers that the possibilities of atomic propulsion of merchant vessels will have little effect on over-all program planning." He explained that nuclear propulsion posed technical and economic problems that would make it impractical for most ships at present.

May 16 -- Chairman Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C.) called the President's planned ship "an international side-show or a Mississippi River showboat" and proposed that a second "practical and experimental" vessel be built.

Dr. W. Kenneth Davis, chief of the reactor division of the Atomic Energy Commission, said the ship ordered by the President would take 24 to 30 months to complete and would cost about $21 million for its atomic power plant and propulsion machinery alone. He compared this with a cost of about $3 million for conventional power and propulsion gear.

Admiral H. G. Rickover, who helped develop the atomic-powered submarine Nautilus for the Navy, said he expected it would take 10 to 15 years to develop an economically profitable atomic power plant on land. "That is easier than developing one for a merchant ship," Rickover added. But he said he thought the possibilities for atomic-powered merchant ships should be explored immediately.

Mark L. Ireland, Jr., atomic power engineer for a shipbuilding firm, said plans should not be halted for conventional ships because of prospects for atomic propulsion. He said he didn't believe conventional ships built in the next 10 years would be made obsolete by atomic developments.

June 7 -- Under Secretary of Commerce Louis S. Rothschild said the Maritime Administration had authority to go ahead with President Eisenhower's peace ship without clearing with the Committee or Congress. Rothschild told the Committee he was "not in favor...today" of going ahead with a second ship because the "application of nuclear power to merchant ships...deserves to have a little more consideration than it presently has." Bonner disagreed with Rothschild, said he wanted "the prerogatives of the Committee recognized."

TWO SHIP BILLS REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee June 16 reported HR 6679 (H Rept 852). There was no House floor action on the measure. The Committee July 12 reported HR 6243 (H Rept 1130).

PROVISIONS -- HR 6243 authorized a Department of Commerce Maritime Administration appropriation of "such sums as may be necessary" to construct, equip, and train personnel for a nuclear-powered merchant ship. The ship would not be of the type the President requested.

Floor Action

The House July 18 suspended the rules and passed HR 6243 by voice vote.

DEBATE -- Bonner -- Research, development, and construction of the ship would take "five years at the most....On one or more of (its trial) voyages let the ship be loaded with five-pound or larger packages of food and sent to needy individuals of the world. There, distribute the packages plainly marked, 'Not atomic energy for destruction but friendly gifts delivered by atomic energy for peace from the United States of America.' The ship should be named 'Tidings of Peace.' "

Thor C. Tollefson (R Wash.) -- "The hull would cost about $12 million. The atomic reactor would cost $20 million or $21 million."

James E. Van Zandt (R Pa.) -- In building the ship, the Maritime Administration would "cannibalize" military and AEC research staffs and "slow down the development of reactors for military ships."

Bonner -- "The Maritime Administration will not pilferage or rob any other agency (of personnel)."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- July 20 reported two bills: S 2522 -- S Rept 1034, to authorize construction of a Nautilus-type atomic power plant for merchant ship installation, and S 2523 -- S Rept 1269, to authorize a prototype atomic-powered merchant ship.

S 2522, GOP-backed, was reported by an 8-7 vote; S 2523, introduced by Democrats, was reported unanimously. Both bills were referred to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee.

BILLS COMBINED

COMMITTEE -- Joint Atomic Energy.

HEARINGS -- May 5 on the President's proposal for an atomic-powered peace ship.

TESTIMONY -- Atomic Energy Commissioner Willard F. Libby and Maritime Commissioner Clarence G. Morse backed the proposal. AEC Commissioner Thomas Murray said he would support it if it did not put too much of a drain on other atomic programs.

Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R N.Y.) opposed the plan as a "phantom ship" and a "waste of money."

ACTION -- The Joint Committee July 30 reported identical amended bills (HR 7038 -- H Rept 1604, S 2523 -- S Rept 1269) authorizing appropriations for two nuclear-powered merchant ships. One would be the President's proposed "peace ship," the other a commercial prototype vessel. The Committee added to S 2523 major provisions of S 2522, which had been approved by the Commerce Committee.

The bills were reported by the Committee by a 9-3 vote after a personal call from President Eisenhower to Chairman Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) requesting action. Voting against approval were Sens. Albert Gore (D Tenn.), Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.), and Anderson. Congress however, took no action.

PROVISIONS -- As reported by the Committee HR 7038 and S 2523 would:

Authorize the Atomic Energy Commission to construct a nuclear-propulsion unit for a ship built by the Commerce Department "for the display of goods and wares of United States manufacture or origin."

Direct that the "peace ship" be named "U.S.S. Atomic Enterprise."

Authorize the AEC and the Maritime Administration to construct a nuclear-propelled ship "of such characteristics and design as will make it usable in the American merchant marine fleet."

Authorize the Maritime Administration, Commerce Department, and AEC to use "such sums as may be necessary" to carry out the bill.

AIRPORT GRANTS

S 1855 -- Reported by Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (S Rept 636) June 23, 1955.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, June 24, by voice vote.
- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 1190) July 15.
- Passed by the House, amended, July 18, by 145-32 standing vote.
- Senate agreed to House amendments by voice vote July 20.

P.L. 211 -- Signed into law Aug. 3.

In enacting S 1855, Congress provided federal funds for the development of public airports over a four-year period starting with fiscal 1956. The federal grants were made available to states and localities on a 50-50 matching basis.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, the bill:

Authorized for allocation to the states and territories, for development of local airports, federal grants totalling $42.5 million in fiscal 1956 and $63 million in each of the subsequent three fiscal years, on a matching basis.

Directed the Secretary of Commerce to prepare an annual plan of development for public airports.

Apportioned funds to states in proportion to their population and area.

Set up a discretionary fund of 25 percent of all monies appropriated to be used by the Secretary of Commerce for projects he deemed necessary but which could not be constructed with funds apportioned to the states.

Provided that all funds granted in the bill would be in addition to any other federal funds already approved for the airports.

BACKGROUND -- S 1855 amended the Federal Airport Act of 1946. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. II, 1946, pp. 355ff.)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
HEARINGS -- June 6, 7, 1955.
ACTION -- June 23 reported an amended bill (S 1855) to authorize $252 million in federal aid to airports over the next four fiscal years (S Rept 636).

Floor Action

The Senate June 24 passed S 1855, with Committee amendments, by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House, S 1855 would amend the Federal Airport Act to:

Authorize the expenditure of $63 million annually in fiscal years 1956-59 for the development of airports in the states and territories.

Direct the Secretary of Commerce to prepare an annual plan of development for public airports.

Apportion funds to states in proportion to their population and area.

Set up a discretionary fund of 25 percent of all monies appropriated to be used by the Secretary of Commerce for projects he deemed necessary but which could not be constructed with funds apportioned to the states.

Provide that all funds granted by S 1855 would be in addition to any other federal funds already approved for the airports.

1946 PROMISE FULFILLED

DEBATE -- A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) -- S 1855 "carries out the promise the Congress made in 1946, but which Congress failed to keep.... It will throw the federal airport construction program into high gear.... The steady allocation of these funds is provided for by granting contract authorization in the amount of $63 million for the (fiscal) years 1956, 1957, 1958, and 1959. The Secretary of Commerce would have authority to use these contract authorizations to make grants in aid to local authorities on a 50-50 matching basis."

George A. Smathers (D Fla.) -- "Our present civil airport facilities are deficient and inadequate in many respects and, unless something is done about the situation ...they will become less and less adequate during the next few years." S 1855 would "insure the inclusion in the program of all classes of airports and all types of airport construction...needed to provide an adequate system of public airports."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
HEARINGS -- July 6, 8, 14.
ACTION -- July 15 reported S 1855 with amendments (H Rept 1190).

The Committee cut $20.5 million from the proposed $63 million authorization for fiscal 1956 on the ground that the sum already had been authorized.

Floor Action

The House July 18 suspended the rules and passed S 1855 by a 145-32 standing vote. Committee amendments were agreed to by voice vote.

DEBATE -- George Meader (R Mich.) -- "Over a quarter of a billion dollars...is authorized to be appropriated and committed, vast authority is being vested in the Secretary of Commerce, and the bill fails to contain some safeguards which many Members of the Committee thought should be incorporated in this bill, and the Appropriation Committees of the Congress are being bypassed."

John B. Bennett (R Mich.) -- "Some standards and some criteria (should) be written into this law which will give the states and the localities the right, if they have met those criteria, to require the Secretary of Commerce to go along with them.... I would like to see...the smaller airports get a break."

J. Percy Priest (D Tenn.) -- The aviation industry has "greatly outgrown...our airport system.... Increasing speeds of planes daily are making obsolete runways that were good a few years ago." Because of advances in jet aviation, "unless we...develop a national airport program, as is intended by this legislation, we will find ourselves facing very serious situations...."

SENATE CONCURRENCE

The Senate July 20 agreed, without debate, to House amendments to S 1855 clearing the bill for the President's signature.

ANTITRUST MEASURES

HR 3659 -- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 70), Feb. 23, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the House March 29.
- Reported June 21 (S Rept 618) by Senate Judiciary Committee
- Passed by the Senate June 24, by voice vote.

P.L. 135 -- Signed into law July 7.

HR 4954 -- Reported by House Judiciary Committee, amended, (H Rept 422) April 18.
- Passed by the House April 26, by voice vote.
- Reported June 21 (S Rept 619) by Senate Judiciary Committee.
- Passed by the Senate June 24, by voice vote.

P.L. 137 -- Signed into law July 7.

Two bills amending the antitrust laws, as requested by the Eisenhower Administration, were passed in 1955. Hearings were held on two other antitrust measures. Extensive testimony during Senate and House investigations of mergers and monopoly also was taken in 1955, (See p. 545ff.)

One enacted bill (HR 3659) raised the antitrust penalties, unchanged since 1890, from $5,000 to $50,000; the other gave the government the right to sue for actual damages sustained by it as a result of antitrust law violations and set a uniform statute of limitations on damage suits. The pending bills (HR 6875, 5948) would permit the courts to use discretion in awarding less than treble damages where antitrust violation was not "wilful". and extend the existing prohibitions against mergers to cover banks.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President:

HR 3659 -- Increased the maximum penalty for violation of the Sherman Act of 1890 from $5,000 to $50,000.

HR 4954 -- Amended the Clayton Act of 1914 to allow the United States, "when it has been injured in its business or property by reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws," to recover actual damages and the cost of the suit in a district court, established a uniform federal statute of limitations of four years for antitrust damage suits; and provided that the effective date of the measure would be six months after enactment.

Background

In his Economic Report, Jan. 20, 1955, President Eisenhower asked Congress to raise "substantially" the maximum fine that might be imposed for violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr. asked Jan. 21 that the fine be increased to $50,000 and legislation be enacted to enable the government to recover actual damages sustained as the result of price collusion or other antitrust violations.

The substance of these measures and also one similar to pending legislation giving discretionary power to the courts to reduce damages when violations were not "wilful," had been contained in recommendations of The National Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws, a 60-man committee set up by Brownell in 1953, which reported March 31, 1955. (See p. 545.)

House

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

ACTION -- Reported Feb. 23 a bill (HR 3659) to raise maximum antitrust penalties under the Sherman Act to $50,000 (H Rept 70).

Floor Action

The House March 29 passed the bill by voice vote.

House consideration of the bill had been blocked March 15 when Rep. Wright Patman (D Texas) objected to taking up the bill on the Consent Calendar. He said he wanted it considered under regular rules so that it might be amended to provide mandatory jail sentences under certain conditions.

Three amendments offered by Patman March 29 to raise penalties above $50,000 were rejected, one by a standing vote and two by voice votes. A motion to recommit HR 3659, offered by Clarence E. Kilburn (R N.Y.), was defeated by voice vote.

DEBATE --- Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- "If you make the penalty too severe (by agreeing to Patman's amendments) you reach the point...where petty juries would refuse to find guilty, where judges would so dilute their charges as to preclude a finding of guilty."

Patman -- "The penalty should be made to deter the big man as well as the little man" by raising it above $50,000.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Patman -- Increase the maximum fine to 5 percent of a corporation's total assets; fine an individual a maximum of $50,000 for a first or second offense and fine him $50,000 and imprison him from 30 days to one year for a third or fourth offense. Standing, 14-86.

Patman -- Increase the maximum fine to 5 percent of a corporation's assets; fine an individual a maximum of $50,000. Voice.

Patman -- Increase the maximum fine of a corporation to $500,000; fine an individual $50,000. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

ACTION -- June 21 reported HR 3659 as passed by the House (S Rept 618).

Floor Action

The Senate June 24 passed, by voice vote, and sent to the President the bill raising from $5,000 to $50,000 the maximum fine for violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

House

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary Subcommittee No. 5.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 16 on a bill (HR 3658) to grant the government the right to recover actual damages for injury sustained through a violation of the antitrust laws.

TESTIMONY -- Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes, head of the Justice Department's Antitrust division, endorsed the measure. He said that in one automobile tire transaction, the government was overcharged $351,158 through collusive, non-competitive bidding by tire manufacturers, but was denied a suit to recover damages when the courts ruled the United States was not an "individual" in the legal sense of the word.

ACTION -- The Subcommittee March 9 recommended HR 3658 favorably to the full Committee with an amendment to provide a four-year statute of limitations. On April 18 the Committee reported a clean bill (HR 4954) incorporating the amendment (H Rept 422).

Floor Action

The House April 26 passed, by voice vote and without amendment, HR 4954.

DEBATE -- Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) -- "We find a rather absurd situation in the law today...the government of the United States, which is by far the largest single purchaser of goods and services, cannot sue for damages it may have suffered from antitrust violations."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary.

ACTION -- June 21 reported HR 4954 as passed by the House (S Rept 619).

The Committee report said enactment of the legislation was "imperative," especially "in a period of mobilization when the government is greatly accelerating its rate of procurement and spending vast sums for defense."

Floor Action

The Senate June 24 passed, by voice vote without debate, and sent to the President the bill (HR 4954) amending the Clayton Antitrust Act to allow the government to sue for damages resulting from antitrust violations and establishing a four-year statute of limitations.

House

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Antitrust Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- July 5-6 on a bill (HR 5948) introduced by Chairman Celler to extend the provisions of the Clayton Act to bank mergers.

TESTIMONY -- July 5 -- John J. McCloy of the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, opposing the bill, said existing bank regulating agencies did not need the aid of Justice Department enforcement. He said competition between banks was "sharp and continuous."

Assistant Attorney General Barnes endorsed HR 5948. He said it would "plug a loophole" which had handicapped anti-merger efforts. A Federal Trade Commission spokesman also supported the bill.

July 6 -- Chairman H. Earl Cook of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation opposed HR 5948. He said it would "interject an additional supervisory authority on the state banking system." Ray M. Gidney, Comptroller of the Currency, opposed the bill on the ground it would "unbalance the division of authority" maintained by supervisory banking agencies.

J. L. Robertson of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System said his group wanted the enforcement of bank antitrust provisions in the hands of the Attorney General.

ACTION -- After Subcommittee approval July 12, the full Committee July 26 reported HR 5948, amended (H Rept 1417).

PENALTIES FOR NON-WILFUL ACTS

HEARINGS -- June 29, July 11 and 13 on a bill (HR 6875) to permit federal judges to assess less than treble damages in antitrust suits where violation was not "wilful."

TESTIMONY -- June 29 -- A spokesman for the Justice Department backed HR 6875. Also supporting the bill was its sponsor, Rep. Francis E. Walter (D Pa.).

In a statement, the Federal Trade Commission said it had not yet taken a stand on the proposal, but suggested it might weaken antitrust laws. FTC general counsel Earl W. Kintner said FTC Chairman Edward F. Howrey had opposed a similar bill in 1953 on the ground there was an absence of "compelling public need."

July 11 -- Assistant Attorney General Barnes said the proposal might be worth trying. Kintner said one FTC Commissioner favored the bill, one opposed it, and another favored the bill only if the courts were given discretionary powers when damages amounted to more than $100,000.

July 13 -- Adolph Schimmel, Motion Picture Association, favored the bill. He said many antitrust suits were brought against the industry by private theater operators because the existing mandatory triple damages clause made such suits attractive.

Henry Bison of the National Association of Retail Grocers opposed any change in existing law.

The bill was not reported in 1955.

SMALL BUSINESS AGENCY

S 2127 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 405) June 1, 1955.
- Passed by the Senate on a voice vote June 6.
- Reported, amended, by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 1350) July 22.
- Passed, with amendment, by voice of the House Aug. 2.
- Senate agreed to House amendments Aug. 2, by voice vote.

P.L. 268 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

Congress on the final day of the 1955 session extended for two years the Small Business Administration and increased its lending authority.

Lawmakers had a choice of letting SBA die, transferring its functions to other government agencies, or extending it as an independent agency. Some commercial and banking groups argued that SBA duplicated other federal business services and should be abolished or "integrated" into the Commerce or Treasury Departments. Small business organizations fought integration. They said SBA had proved its value to independent operators and in the general economy.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, S 2127:

Extended the life of the Small Business Administration through June 30, 1957.

Increased the total revolving fund authorized for the SBA from $275 million to $550 million.

Authorized $300 million for small business loans and $50 million for disaster loans.

Increased the maximum limit on a small business loan from $150,000 to $250,000.

Authorized loans to small businesses in drought areas.

Required special monthly reports on the proportion of Defense Department contracts with small business concerns.

Required all advertising for bids by government agencies to be specific so as to ensure free competition.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Small Business Administration." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 428ff.)

The Small Business Administration was created by the Small Business Act of 1953 as successor to the Small Defense Plants Administration. Under terms of the Act, SBA was to expire June 30, 1955, unless extended by Congress.

President Eisenhower, in his 1955 State of the Union message, recommended that the Act be extended. This stand was echoed by Wendell B. Barnes, SBA Administrator. Barnes March 21 appeared before the Senate Select Small Business Committee to describe functions of SBA and report on the agency's activities. Highlights of his testimony:

FUNCTIONS

- "To counsel with small firms on their financial problems...assist them in obtaining needed credit... participate in loans by private lending institutions, or... make direct government loans..."

- "To make loans for rehabilitation of small businesses and homes damaged or destroyed by natural disasters..."
- "To help small businesses obtain a fair share of government contracts..."
- "To assist small firms in solving their management and production problems."

ACTIVITIES

- As of Feb. 28, SBA "had received 4,536 applications for business loans, totaling approximately $260 million. Of this amount, 1,235 applications for business loans, totaling approximately $64,870,000,000, had been approved, and 2,195 applications for $125,415,000 had been declined."
- "Of the total business loans approved, 66 percent are in participation with private financial institutions."
- As of Feb. 28 SBA "had received 1,411 disaster loan applications, totaling approximately $12,207,000, and had approved 1,092 applications, amounting to about $7,124,670."
- "Approximately 50 percent of all loan applications -- business and disaster -- are approved by the Administration."
- Through the "joint determination" program between SBA and the Department of Defense "more than $470 million in proposed military purchases has been reserved for small business."
- "SBA, in cooperation with leading educational institutions, is providing short evening courses in administrative management...The program has been expanded to include 54 courses in 40 educational institutions during the 1954-55 school year. About 2,000 small business owners and managers will attend these courses."

COMMITTEE COMMENTS

Select Small Business Committees in both Senate and House filed reports in 1955 reviewing their activities during the 83rd Congress and commented on SBA. Highlights of these reports:

The Senate unit, in a unanimous report (S Rept 129) released March 30, offered some criticism of SBA but generally concluded that the agency "took many forward steps (during 1954) in realizing the vital role marked out for it by the Congress and the Administration. It is hoped that further advances in policies and techniques will enhance the agency's record for 1955."

The House committee, in a report (H Rept 2683) dated Dec. 28, 1954, said "although some changes may be in order, the agency should be continued as an independent entity and should be given a permanent status within the government."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency, Small Business Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 9, 11 on bills affecting the Small Business Administration.

TESTIMONY -- May 9 -- Sen. John J. Sparkman Ala.) urged support for his bills (S 381, 382, 383) to make credit more easily available for financing small business and provide for loans by SBA. Sen. Edward J. Thye (R Minn.) favored his bill (S 1500) to make the Small Business Administration a permanent agency.

Wendell B. Barnes, SBA Administrator, favored a two-year extension of the SBA and urged that its loan maximum be retained at $150,000.

May 11 -- C. Canby Balderston, a member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, opposed S 383 and a section of S 381 which would require the Federal Reserve System to administer the proposed National Investment Company program.

ACTION -- The full Committee June 1 reported a clean bill (S 2127 -- S Rept 405) to extend the life of the SBA for two years and increase its lending authority.

Floor Action

The Senate June 6 passed S 2127 by voice vote and without amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the House S 2127 would:

Extend SBA through June 30, 1957.

Combine the small business and disaster loan funds and authorize a combined fund of $175 million.

Increase the maximum limit on a small business loan to $250,000.

Authorize the SBA to make disaster loans to small businesses in drought areas.

DEBATE -- There was little debate on the bill, but Wayne Morse (D Ore.), who described its provisions, said "the need of helping the young businessman really to get started is part of the very soul of this bill."

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- May 18, June 28-29 on bills to extend the Small Business Administration.

TESTIMONY -- May 18 -- SBA Administrator Barnes supported a two-year extension of the agency, said there was no need to raise the $150,000 loan limit since SBA's average loan was $52,152. He also recommended certain provisions to combine the disaster and business loan funds.

June 28 -- Reps. William S. Hill (R Colo.), Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.), and James E. Van Zandt (R Pa.) supported a permanent extension of SBA.

June 29 -- Rep. Wright Patman (D Texas) asked the Committee to call Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks to explain why, as Patman termed it, small business "has been discriminated against" in research and development programs. Small businessmen, he said, could not benefit from the results of successful research unless they paid royalties to organizations that conducted the research and obtained patents.

ACTION -- The Committee July 22 reported S 2127 (H Rept 1350) with amendments incorporating the text of HR 7256, amended.

Floor Action

The House Aug. 2 suspended its rules and passed S 2127 by voice vote. The chamber agreed to a committee amendment which increased the revolving fund of the SBA to $550 million, increased its lending powers, and required special reports on Defense Department compliance with SBA objectives.

DEBATE -- William S. Hill (R Colo.) -- "There is no question that the assistance rendered has been invaluable. Small-businessmen and small-business associations

...have testified many times to the assistance rendered and to the necessity for continuing this agency."

James Roosevelt (D Calif.) -- "But this law is not going to be useful unless the SBA changes its attitude of rigid disapproval of all applications unless they are so gilt-edged that any bank would, and usually does, share in the loan."

SENATE CONCURRENCE

The Senate Aug. 2 agreed, by voice vote, to House amendments to S 2127. This action cleared the bill for the White House.

Group Stands

Much of the opposition to extending SBA was led by the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. Chamber officials contended that small business received sufficient aid from the Commerce Department. The American Bankers Association took a similar stand. Its officials opposed what they termed "political lending."

An articulate group in the bloc favoring extension of SBA was the National Federation of Independent Business. The federation polled its members on the issue, and most of them voted for continuation of SBA and against control of the agency by the Treasury or Commerce Departments. Other groups favoring extension of SBA were the Smaller Business Association of New England Inc., and Smaller Business of America.

SMALL BUSINESS PROBES

H Res 299 -- Reported by House Administration Committee Aug. 1, 1955 (H Rept 1614).
- Adopted by the House on a 231-134 roll-call vote Aug. 1. (See p. 164.)

In the closing hours of the 1955 session the House authorized expenditure of an additional $35,000 by the Select Small Business Committee for the conduct of its investigations.

BACKGROUND -- The House Select Small Business Committee was created in 1941 to study and investigate the problems of small business. It reports findings and makes recommendations to the House, but cannot report legislation.

The House on Feb. 2, 1955 adopted a resolution (H Res 70) to provide $135,000 for the Select Committee's investigations. The Committee whose chairman was Wright Patman (D Texas), had requested $150,000.

Committee activities in 1955 included:

A study of shortages in the aluminum industry.

Investigations of alleged discrimination by major oil companies against retail gasoline station operators.

A study of organizational procedures of federal regulatory commissions and agencies.

Studies on the administration of anti-price discrimination laws. (See p. 554.)

House

COMMITTEE -- House Administration.

ACTION -- Aug. 1 reported H Res 299 (H Rept 1614).

Floor Action

The House Aug. 1 adopted H Res 299 by a roll-call vote of 231-134. (For voting, see chart, p. 164.)

DEBATE -- John Taber (R N.Y.) -- "Is it not about time that we put the brakes on this investigation business? There are so many of them that it is getting to be more investigation than attending to the business of the House."

Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) -- "...out of 17 investigators and employees (of the Committee) there is just one Republican employed. Is that nonpartisan?"

Wright Patman (D Texas) -- "The administration in power appoints the staff members, just like last year (when Congress was GOP-controlled) we did not have a Democrat, either.... We have projected our work very carefully.... The sum requested is a modest sum.... Also, it is so small in comparison with other committees, ...that I did not think there would be any objection at all."

MINERAL STOCKPILE

HR 6373 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 1070) July 6, 1955. Supplemental report (Part II) issued July 19.
- Passed by voice vote of the House, amended, July 21.
- Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 1161) July 27.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, on a 54-34 roll-call vote July 29. (See p. 134.)
- Conference report (H Rept 1611) agreed to by House and Senate Aug. 1 by voice votes.
- Pocket vetoed Aug. 17.

HR 6373, providing amendments to the Domestic Minerals Program Extension Act, would have doubled the amount of government purchases of seven minerals, limited to $150 million the amount of Office of Defense Mobilization funds to be spent on increased purchases above quantities set in 1953, and called for reopening of an ore-buying depot and the opening up of two new depots. President Eisenhower withheld his approval of the measure, said Aug. 14 the bill "would make solution of the over-all problems of the industry more difficult."

Background

The Defense Production Act of 1950, enacted to provide for defense mobilization in the Korean conflict, gave the government authority to buy or "commit to buy" raw materials for defense use or resale. It also provided that "exploration, development and mining of critical minerals shall be encouraged." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VI, 1950, p. 624).

The Office of Defense Mobilization in 1951 began a program of strategic minerals stockpiling. In 1953, the Domestic Minerals Program Extension Act (PL 206) extended for two years the termination dates of all purchase programs designed to stimulate production of specified strategic and critical minerals and metals. The original quotas were not raised by statute. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 415.)

In reporting HR 6373 July 6, 1955, the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee criticized the ODM for "indifference to the intent of Congress" in permitting the program to lapse when the original quotas were met, instead of using its authority to increase quotas until the termination date was reached.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- July 6 reported HR 6373 (H Rept 1070) with amendments. As the bill was introduced, it would have permitted purchase of up to three times the amount of manganese authorized under each manganese depot program as of July 1, 1953, and twice the amounts authorized for other minerals on that date.

As amended, the bill doubled the quantities of each mineral or metal subject to purchase by the Office of Defense Mobilization.

Purchase programs scheduled for the seven minerals covered by HR 6373, including termination date of the program and proposed new quotas, were:

Tungsten, July 1, 1958, 6 million short-ton units.
Chromite, June 30, 1957, 400,000 long-ton units.
Manganese, June 30, 1958, 74 million long-ton units.
Mica, June 30, 1957, 50,000 short tons.
Asbestos, Oct. 1, 1957, 3,000 short tons.
Beryl, June 30, 1957, 3,000 short tons.
Columbium-tantalum, Dec. 31, 1958, 30 million pounds.

The Committee's report said the legislation "would not have been necessary had the ODM adjusted program production quotas to the extent necessary...."

Floor Action

The House July 21 passed HR 6373, with the Committee amendment, by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 6373:

Doubled the amounts of tungsten, manganese, chromite, mica, asbestos, beryl, and columbium-tantalum-bearing ores and concentrates authorized for purchase under the strategic stockpile program.

Limited to $150 million the amount of ODM funds to be spent on increased purchases above the quantities set in 1953.

Directed reopening of a manganese ore-buying depot in Wenden, Ariz., and setting up of two new depots in the Ozark-Cushman and southern Appalachian areas.

DEBATE -- Clair Engle (D Calif.) -- ODM Director Arthur S. Flemming "is against this bill, and was against its predecessor. He filed adverse reports on this and on the preceding legislation. However,...that gentleman... is subject to the position taken by the policymaking group in this Administration, which, in this instance, is the Bureau of the Budget.... The Bureau of the Budget agreed with the views of the Department of the Interior and specifically recommended and endorsed this proposed legislation."

A.L. Miller (R Neb.) -- "I am convinced that a long-range program with a price incentive will send many of the miners who have the knowledge into the hills to locate, develop and produce and get onto the market many of the strategic minerals that...we do not have today...."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs.

HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- July 27 reported (S Rept 1161) HR 6373, with an amendment requested by Henry C. Dworshak (R Idaho) to authorize government purchase of 12,000 short tons of antimony for the national stockpile.

Floor Action

The Senate July 29 passed HR 6373, amended, by a 54-34 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 134).

DEBATE -- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Neither House nor Senate hearings were held on HR 6373, which would pay "double the prevailing market price" for the minerals, and cost "between $283 million and $502 million." If the mining industry needs protection, "then let us call this bill a subsidy bill and not try to jam it through... under the guise of national defense." Defense Mobilizer Arthur S. Flemming wrote that there was "no justification in the name of national defense for enlarging" the mineral purchase program as proposed in the bill.

Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) -- "I do not think Dr. Flemming knows either the condition of the stockpiling program or the urgency to continue it." If mines are closed, "the reopening process will take two or three years.... It is just as important to keep them open as it is to keep the aircraft factories open."

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.), Stuart Symington (D Mo.) -- If Congress wishes to subsidize the mining industry, "the subsidy should stand on its own feet" and should not be presented as a national defense measure.

Francis Case (R S.D.) -- "This is not a program under which the government will fail to get something for its money." Stockpiled minerals "will represent a good investment."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Establish a new manganese ore-buying depot in the Cuyana Range area, Minn. Voice vote.

Humphrey -- Direct the Secretary of Interior to establish and operate a mining and metallurgical research center in Minnesota. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- House and Senate conferees July 30 recommended (H Rept 1611) that the Senate recede from its amendments to the bill. The report said $150 million limit provided in the bill would be "inadequate" if the Senate's amendments were included in the final version.

ACTION -- The House, without debate, and the Senate after brief debate, agreed Aug. 1 to the conference report by voice votes.

DEBATE -- Sen. James E. Murray (D Mont.) -- The Interior Committee will "actively" consider the amendments proposed by Humphrey and Dworshak, but stricken from the final version of the bill, early in the next session of Congress.

Humphrey -- The conferees' action amounted to "false economy and a delay in what needs to be done." But conferees were told "that if any more amendments were added to the bill it would be subject to at least a recommendation from the Department of Interior for a veto."

Presidential Veto

President Eisenhower Aug. 14 announced that he would withhold his approval of HR 6373. He said the bill would have directed expansion of mineral purchase programs to an extent that would "require the government to buy far greater quantities of these minerals than are necessary for defense purposes. As a result, government assistance to the producers of several minerals would be continued under the guise of defense needs when such needs do not exist."

He said also that the fiscal arrangements in the measure "are unsound" because "the bill would bypass the usual budgetary processes and the customary review by Congressional committees." Because it would apply to only a small segment of the domestic minerals industry, the President said "this bill would make solution of the overall problems of the industry more difficult."

He concluded that "the interests of the domestic minerals industry will be better served by proceeding with the careful development of a long-range minerals program than by approving a stopgap measure extending substantial government aid to only a segment of the industry..."

The pocket veto took effect Aug. 17.

DEFENSE PRODUCTION

S 2391 -- Reported (S Rept 696) by Senate Banking and Currency Committee June 30, 1955.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, July 19 by voice vote. (For roll-call vote, see p. 131.)

HR 7470 -- Reported (H Rept 1343) by House Banking and Currency Committee July 21.

S 2391 -- Passed by voice vote of the House, amended, July 30.

- First conference report recommitted by a 36-34 roll-call vote of the Senate Aug. 1. (See p. 135.)
- Second conference report (H Rept 1630) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate Aug. 2.

P.L. 295 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

Congress in 1955 extended the Defense Production Act for one year after lengthy controversy over limitations to be placed on government employment of so-called WOC personnel--employees without compensation.

Hearings by the House Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee on the employment of WOCs continued after Congress adjourned.

PROVISIONS -- As enacted, the Defense Production Act Amendments of 1955:

Extended the DPA through June 30, 1956.

Provided for continued stockpiling of vital war materials and for rationing them to industry in national emergencies.

Authorized creation of a trained reserve of executives to work without compensation (but with travel and subsistence expenses paid) for the government during an emergency.

Authorized the President to employ WOCs, if necessary to carry out the provisions of the Act, and to exempt them from conflict-of-interest laws under limited conditions.

Limited WOC personnel to advisory capacities in policy matters.

Forbade them from handling any government business affecting their private interests.

Required them to file, for publication in the Federal Register, a statement listing their business connections and financial interests in the 60 days preceding their government appointment, plus follow-up reports every six months they are in government service.

Required the appointing agency to file the name of a WOC's private employer and certify that it was unable to hire a qualified, full-time employee for the government position filled by the WOC.

Authorized the President to grant immunity from antitrust laws to companies engaged in purely military contracts and permitted existing waivers on non-military contracts to remain in effect.

Directed the Attorney General to review both kinds of waivers and rescind them if he found that their detrimental effects on competitive free enterprise outweighed their benefit to national defense.

Directed the Office of Defense Mobilization to report on prospects for giving small business an increased share of defense contracts.

Required the government, when allocating scarce materials to industry, to consider the needs of small and new businesses.

Authorized the President to set up a program to develop substitutes for strategic materials.

The Defense Production Act of 1950 (PL 774, 81st Congress), an outgrowth of the Korean conflict:

Provided for a system of priorities and allocation of scarce defense materials and facilities.

Authorized the President to requisition property and make loans to expand defense plants.

Provided for controls on real estate credit.

Set up special machinery to settle labor disputes growing out of the law.

Authorized a standby program of price and wage controls and consumer rationing.

The authority to appoint WOC personnel was included in the Act (Sec. 710). The President was authorized, to the extent he deemed necessary and appropriate to carry out the Act, to employ persons on loan from industry, without compensation and under waiver of the conflict-of-interest statutes which would otherwise have prohibited such a situation. (The statutes are permanent criminal statutes designed to insure that a federal employee will not take any action to the detriment of the government and to the benefit of private interests.)

The Act was amended in 1951 (PL 96, 82nd Congress), and amended and extended in 1952 and 1953 (PL 429, 82nd Congress, and PL 94 and 195, 83rd Congress).

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union speech Jan. 6, 1955, urged a two-year extension of the DPA. He said "an industry capable of rapid expansion, and essential materials and facilities swiftly available in time of emergency are indispensable to our defense."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency, Production and Stabilization Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 20-21 on bills (S 2163, 2165) to extend and amend the Defense Production Act.

TESTIMONY -- June 20 -- Director Arthur S. Flemming of the Office of Defense Mobilization and Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes supported an extension of the Act for two years, until July 1, 1957. Flemming also supported provisions in S 2165 to allow the President to grant a 20-year exemption from antitrust suits to combinations of firms working on vital defense projects. He also requested Congressional sanction of a project to "stockpile" WOC personnel as a reserve of expert advisers on mobilization problems.

June 21 -- The Defense and Commerce Departments filed statements supporting a two-year extension of the Act and the additional powers included in S 2165.

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) assailed the 20-year antitrust immunity proposal and urged deletion from existing law of a section authorizing some immunity from antitrust action in defense work. "We are presently in a position to accomplish virtually all of our defense requirements within the traditional framework of the antitrust laws," Celler said.

ACTION -- June 30 -- The Committee reported a bill (S 2391 -- S Rept 696) to extend the Defense Production Act two years.

July 8 -- The Committee voted to amend the bill by inserting a provision outlining curbs on WOC personnel. The Committee report already had recommended dropping the existing waiver on conflict-of-interest statutes because, with neither war nor full mobilization, "there is much greater danger now that the pressures of private interests may outweigh the public responsibilities of these persons."

Committee Chairman J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) said the added provision would force out of policy-making and administrative posts any "dollar-a-year" men currently working for the government.

The Committee had met in executive session with Comptroller General Joseph Campbell July 8, at Fulbright's request, so Campbell could explain a letter he had written July 6 to the chairman. The letter was accompanied by a report issued in June by the General Accounting Office reviewing the zinc program. Campbell's letter called attention to the report's reference to a former non-salaried deputy administrator of the defunct Defense Materials Procurement Agency who "was beneficially interested" in three zinc contracts on which the government lost money. The man was identified as Howard I. Young, American Zinc Co. president, who served DMPA from September, 1951 to May, 1953.

HOWARD YOUNG HEARINGS

A second committee then took up the question of Young's government activities.

COMMITTEE -- Joint Committee on Defense Production.

HEARINGS -- July 14 and 27.

TESTIMONY -- July 14 -- Jess Larson, Washington attorney and former administrator of DMPA, told a closed session the responsibility for any exercise of "bad judgment" in connection with the zinc contracts "was mine, but they can't question our integrity."

Larson said after the hearings that while Young was his deputy they agreed Larson "would handle the matters that might be connected with any companies with which he (Young) was connected."

For purposes of economy, Larson added, it was the custom to send zinc concentrates to the nearest mill for processing and in the case of the three contracts under question, "Young's mill was the nearest and it was my decision."

Young denied the charges against him. Rep. Paul Brown (D Ga.), Committee Chairman, said he believed there was a misunderstanding "all the way through" and "if they got together they could iron out the differences." The Committee proposed that Young and the General Accounting office discuss the matter.

July 27 -- Assistant Comptroller General Frank H. Weitzel said an allegation in the GAO June report that Young's firm sold $60,000 worth of machinery to a company after Young had helped promote a government loan for the company was false and an allegation Young's firm had sold 1,167 tons of zinc to the government stock pile at above market price had been abandoned.

John F. Lane, counsel for Young, accused the General Accounting Office of prejudice. He said two GAO officials admitted to him Young had been selected as a case example for drafting legislation on businessmen in government. GAO officials denied Lane's accusation.

The General Accounting Office July 30 said it had reworded -- not withdrawn -- its charges against Young. Sen. Stuart Symington (D Mo.) said GAO "besmirched" Young's reputation without giving him a chance to defend himself. Symington Aug. 1 called for an investigation of GAO's handling of the charges against Young. Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) accused GAO of "gross errors" in its handling of the Young case. Sen. John J. Williams (R Del.) said a question of ethics was involved.

Floor Action

The Senate July 19 passed, by voice vote, an amended bill (S 2391) to extend the Defense Production Act for two years.

The Senate adopted an amendment by J. Allen Frear, Jr. (D Del.) that would have barred personnel serving without compensation from holding peacetime administrative posts in the government after Oct. 31, 1955. Frear's amendment, however, was eliminated when the Senate agreed to an amendment by Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) which would limit WOC personnel to advisory capacities in policy matters. The Capehart amendment was agreed to by a 46-45 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 131.)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 2391 would:

Extend the Defense Production Act until June 30, 1957.

Provide for continued stockpiling of vital war materials and for rationing them to industry in emergencies.

Authorize creation of a trained reserve of executives to work without compensation in defense mobilization jobs in wartime. (They could, however, receive up to $15 daily for subsistence.)

Limit WOC personnel to advisory capacities in policy matters.

Forbid them from handling any government business affecting their private interests.

Require a government agency to certify it was unable to hire a qualified, full-time employee before taking on a WOC man.

Authorize the government, for two years, to grant immunity from antitrust laws to companies engaged in purely military contracts.

Let existing antitrust waivers on non-military contracts expire unless the Attorney General found within 90 days that the waivers were essential.

Direct the Office of Defense Mobilization to report on prospects for giving small business an increased share of defense contracts.

Require the government, when allocating scarce materials to industry, to consider the needs of small and new businesses.

Authorize the President to set up a program to develop substitutes for strategic materials.

DEBATE -- Frear -- The Banking and Currency Committee had "grave concern" for the "declining" amount of government business going to small firms.

Capehart -- "My amendment applies...to...businessmen, professional men, heads of universities, and others, who may come to Washington to help devise policies, plans, and procedures if and when we have a war."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "I think it would be a mistake," to give WOCs authority over fulltime government employees.

Ralph E. Flanders (R Vt.) -- "The Capehart amendment...does not...permit the appointment of a WOC as an administrative officer."

J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- A WOC could head a "division, but when it came to a policy matter he would step aside and let his assistant...make the policy decision."

Morse -- "Under the (Capehart) amendment, WOCs would be placed in administrative positions over a staff of career employees."

Capehart -- "They would not be placed over the employees."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Frear -- Bar without compensation personnel from holding government administrative posts after Oct. 31, 1955, except in wartime. (This amendment was eliminated by the Capehart amendment.) Voice vote.

Frear -- Prevent a WOC employee from taking part in government matters in which he "or his private employer" has a private interest. (The amendment added the phrase "or his private employer" to two subsections of the bill.) Voice.

Harley M. Kilgore (D W.Va.) -- Permit the government to reoffer for sale a synthetic rubber plant at Institute, W. Va., known as "Plancor No. 980." Voice.

Fulbright -- Require certification by the Secretary of Agriculture or the Secretary of Interior "that a particular strategic and critical material is likely to be in short supply in" wartime, before the President may provide for developing substitute materials. Voice.

Capehart -- Limit WOC personnel "to advising... full-time salaried government officials...responsible for making policy decisions." (This amendment eliminated the first Frear amendment.) Roll call, 46-45.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- July 6-7 on HR 7071, to extend the Defense Production Act.

TESTIMONY -- July 6 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks and Director Arthur S. Flemming of the Office of Defense Mobilization supported HR 7071. They argued against a provision in the Senate committee's version of the bill that would prohibit WOC personnel from holding policy-making positions.

Weeks said this restriction "would prevent the President...from using the best men available in these important jobs" and would limit the choice "in certain cases to persons with second-rate ability, experience, and information."

Rep. Abraham Multer (D N.Y.), a Committee member, said that without a direct effort at favoritism, a non-paid government official might tend naturally to promote policies benefitting his industry. And, he complained, small businesses had not been getting as good treatment from the government as had big ones.

July 7 -- Officials of the Defense and Justice Departments supported HR 7071.

ACTION -- The Committee July 21 reported a clean bill (HR 7470 -- H Rept 1343) to extend the Defense Production Act.

On July 25 the House Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee began hearings on the use of persons without compensation by government agencies. The hearings continued after Congress adjourned. (See below.)

Floor Action

The House July 30 passed HR 7470 by voice vote after rejecting amendments to place more stringent limits on the appointment of WOCs. Then the chamber passed S 2391 after amending it to conform to HR 7470.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to conference S 2391:

Extended the Defense Production Act until June 30, 1956.

Required the government, when allocating scarce materials to industry, to consider the needs of new concerns, newly acquired operations and the needs of small business.

Let existing antitrust waivers continue only on new and existing voluntary agreements covering military items, and terminated the exemptions for existing non-military agreements.

Required the Attorney General to review existing military agreements within 90 days and determine whether the antitrust exemption should be terminated.

Authorized the President to employ WOCs, if necessary to carry out the provisions of the Act.

Required WOC personnel to file, with the head of the employing agency, a full report of outside connections, listing all "personal and financial relationships" within 12 months prior to appointment, and to file monthly reports thereafter on any changes in outside connections during government appointment.

Limited WOCs to advisory capacities in policy matters.

Limited the waiver on conflict-of-interest statutes so it did not apply to any action taken under the Act by the private employer of the appointee or any company in which he had an interest.

Required a government agency to certify it was unable to hire a qualified, full-time employee before taking on a WOC man.

Called for a review every three months of WOC personnel appointments by the Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, and a report of his findings to the President and the Joint Committee on Defense Production.

SUPERVISION OF WOCs URGED

DEBATE -- July 29 -- Brent Spence (D Ky.) -- WOCs "have not been under very close supervision.... A man certainly cannot serve two masters and we are told that where a man's treasure is, there his heart is also. So we have placed restrictions upon these gentlemen."

Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), Wright Patman (D Texas), Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- Urged further restrictions on the appointment of WOCs.

July 30 -- Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.) -- "I resent the implications that...all of these (WOC) people must be crooks."

Paul Brown (D Ga.) -- The country is in a national emergency, spending $40 billion for defense. "We have certain specialists in private enterprise that we do not have in government, and we need them." The bill includes "all the safeguards necessary to protect the government."

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

July 30 -- Patman -- Repeal provision permitting appointment of WOCs. Voice vote.

Charles A. Vanik (D Ohio) -- Require that a WOC pledge not to do anything to injure the government and benefit his private employer. Voice.

Multer -- Prohibit appointment of WOCs as heads of bureaus or to comparable policymaking or administrative positions. Standing vote, 27-89.

Multer -- Limit WOC appointments to defense activities authorized by the bill. Voice.

Multer -- Require certifications by the Civil Service Commission and the President as to the need to appoint a WOC. Voice.

First Conference

REPORT -- A House and Senate conference committee Aug. 1 agreed to accept the one-year extension of the Act as proposed by the House and to include a number of items from the Senate bill that were not in the House version. These included provisions for an "executive reserve," development of substitutes for strategic materials, and study of the small business share in defense production.

The House section requiring a WOC to file a report on his "personal and financial relationships" during the year before his government appointment was changed to:

Require a WOC to file with the head of his agency and the Joint Committee on Defense Production a sworn statement listing "the amount and sources of all income and gifts" above $100 received in the preceding year, plus all his assets and liabilities, and to report every three months on his income and "all changes in assets."

No Republican member of the conference committee signed the report.

Senate Action

The Senate Aug. 1 voted, by a 36-34 roll call, to recommit the report with instructions that the new WOC provision be deleted. (For voting, see chart, p. 135.)

DEBATE -- Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) -- Nothing could be "more ridiculous, more un-American, more suggestive of the police state," than the proposed WOC provision.

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- "It is simply an attempt to hamstring the present Administration.... If a person bought a dog, he would have to report that fact, under this provision."

Irving M. Ives (R N.Y.) -- "No man with any self-respect, with any independence, would want to work for the government under those conditions."

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- WOCs are "persons whose allegiance is primarily to private concerns, on whose payrolls they are." If the government wants to use them, "we ought to know something about their financial condition and their financial dealings."

Second Conference

REPORT -- The Senate-House conference committee Aug. 2 filed a report (H Rept 1630) recommending a revised WOC provision and the other compromises reached in the first conference. The new provision:

Required all WOCs to file, for publication in the Federal Register, a statement listing all financial interests, corporate positions, and partnerships held at that time or in the preceding 60 days before government appointment, and to file after each six months in government, a statement listing any changes in financial interests.

ACTION -- The revised conference report was agreed to Aug. 2 by voice votes in the House and Senate.

"WOC" Hearings

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary, Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- July 25-27, Aug. 4, 5, and 10, Oct. 25 - Nov. 4 on government use of WOCs.

TESTIMONY -- July 25 -- Charles F. Honeywell, a Commerce Department official, said his Business and Defense Services Administration had 29 workers without compensation (WOCs). Honeywell said he only used WOCs when suitable salaried employees could not be found.

July 26 -- Honeywell said two WOCs had been appointed at the urging of the aluminum industry. He said his agency had used an un-compensated representative of the iron and steel industry who was present during a study of an iron and coke company tax amortization case.

Subcommittee counsel said a BDSA division had "worked with" the Justice Department in 1954 on antitrust aspects of the leather and shoe industry to "protect the industry from embarrassment and unfavorable publicity." Honeywell said WOC-manned groups in his agency often contacted the Justice Department to find out its "point of view."

July 27 -- Leonard E. Pasek of the Kimberly Clark Corporation said he continued to work as a Washington representative for his company while a WOC with BDSA.

Aug. 4 -- Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes said more than 1,000 business advisory groups in government were headed by WOCs. Most were in the Commerce Department (576), and the Defense Department (183), Barnes said.

Barnes said it was government policy that no WOC should have a policy-determining post on a program exempted from the antitrust laws by the Defense Production Act.

Saying irregularities existed, Barnes cited the position of the director of the foreign petroleum supplies group who was "in the unseemly position of policing, directing, and reporting on the activities of the very companies on which his immediate livelihood depended."

Aug. 5 -- Peter Wojtul, vice president of Continental Can Co., outlined activities of the company's former Washington representative as a WOC. Wojtul said the late W. L. Rowlands, former deputy director of the container and packaging division of the Commerce Department's Business and Defense Services Administration, continued to perform duties for Continental Can while regarded by the Commerce Department as a full-time WOC.

REFUSAL TO SHOW FILES

General Counsel Philip A. Ray of the Commerce Department issued a statement refusing the demand of Subcommittee Chairman Celler for confidential files of the Business Advisory Council, a privately financed group attached to the Commerce Department. "We cannot permit any individual to conduct a fishing expedition among the private papers of the Department, exposing to possible misunderstanding, misrepresentation, and hit-and-run smears the confidential counsels of the executive branch," Ray said.

Aug. 10 -- BAC Executive Director Walter S. White, subpenaed to appear, denied investigators access to BAC files. He said he was acting on the orders of Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks. White produced a letter from Weeks which said the records were in possession of the Commerce Department. White, the letter added, had "no right or authority" to deliver any of them to "any person or...(to) the Committees of Congress."

White said he was prepared to submit the financial records of BAC as reflected by bank statements, but could go no further toward complying with the Subcommittee's request for the files.

Weeks' letter said the files demanded by Celler "contain individual business statistics and forecasts, the disclosure of which is made a crime by law. They contain the advices of advisors and subordinates solicited, given, and received in confidence. The publication of such materials would tend to dry up some of the sources of information which this department must consult in fulfilling its basic statutory responsibilities, and would be contrary to the public interest. I am bound to honor such confidences and my conclusions in this regard are supported by the established constitutional principle of the separation of powers in the government."

Celler accused Weeks of laying down a "sort of WOC curtain" in blocking inspection of the BAC records. "For 20 years," Celler said, "the Council has operated in an aura of secrecy. The press has been barred from its meetings. Its documents or reports are not publicly available. The public information relating to the functions and activities of the Council is virtually nil. While there may be substantial reasons justifying the existence of the Council, no good reason for hiding its operations from the public has ever been suggested."

BUSINESS ADVISORY COUNCIL

Answering questions, White admitted BAC did not follow regulations laid down for one-industry advisory groups by the Justice Department. He said BAC had been advised by counsel the one-industry group regulations did not apply to it because it was a multi-industry unit.

He said he and his group were not part of the government. A $25,000 annual salary was paid him from funds BAC received as contributions, White said.

Six meetings a year were held by BAC, White said. He explained that it undertook to finance detailed studies of such subjects as tax laws, antitrust legislation, labor policy, economic conditions, and defense production.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- The Civil Service Commission Aug. 8 listed 205 cases since Nov. 1, 1950, in which business or industry experts borrowed by the government served in operating jobs, rather than as consultants, in violation of regulations. The 205 cases, CSC reported, did not involve WOCs, but per diem employees. Of the 205 cases, only three were listed as having occured since President Eisenhower took office Jan. 20, 1953.

At a Business Advisory Council meeting Oct. 20 in Hot Springs, Va., Harold Boeschenstein, council chairman and president of Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp. of Toledo, Ohio, said he believed the council "has served the government well for 23 years. Any or all members would welcome the opportunity to testify" before the House Subcommittee.

TESTIMONY -- Oct. 25 -- Chairman Celler said John C. Clay of New York, assistant to the executive vice president of the National Starch Products, Inc. and a former WOC, "used his influence and position as a WOC to further the (tax) application of his own company. Anyone who believes to the contrary is naive and wistful."

Clay admitted that, as a WOC in 1952-53 with the National Production Authority of the Commerce Department, he checked his company's application for tax benefits. He denied trying to influence the decision of the application, but admitted entertaining government officials concerned with it.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS CHIEF QUIZZED

Oct. 26 -- Peter A. Strobel, commissioner of federal public buildings for the General Services Administration, denied that his 90 percent interest in the New York engineering firm of Strobel and Salzman conflicted with his official duties. He said neither he nor his firm profited from federal contracts awarded to two Strobel and Salzman clients. Strobel said he conferred during his lunch hour with Army engineers about his company's claim for $7,500 for extra work under an old contract.

Oct 28 -- The Subcommittee questioned Strobel about a $27,000 contract he awarded the architectural firm of L. W. Roberts, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee and a former client of Strobel's engineering firm. Strobel said the contract called for changes in plans originally drawn by the Roberts firm for a Public Health Service laboratory in Atlanta, and under the code of ethics of the American Institute of Architects, the man who drew the original plans was employed to make changes. He said he had told General Services Administrator Edmund F. Mansure about the contract, but had not told Mansure that the Strobel firm once had given the Roberts company a subcontract on a New York City incinerator project.

Strobel said his office recommended 11 firms to the Central Intelligence Agency, four of which had been clients of Strobel and Salzman, as fully qualified to plan a new headquarters building for CIA.

Oct 31 -- Mansure said he had approved the arrangement under which Strobel took his $14,800 government post while keeping an ownership interest in Strobel and Salzman. He said there might have been "an ethical or operational violation" of the conflict-of-interest law in Strobel's case, but added: "There is a big difference between a mistake of judgment and a matter of of intent." Mansure said he had made the final decision to award a contract to the Roberts firm.

Harry B. Zackrison, contract officer for the Army Engineers, was questioned about a $71,000 hangar contract with Strobel and Salzman. Strobel signed the contract for his firm after he entered the government. Zackrison said it was decided to go through with the contract to avoid delay in construction of helicopters, but said the Engineers decided they would do no more business with Strobel and Salzman while Strobel remained a government official.

STROBEL RESIGNS

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Nov. 8 -- Roger Robb, Strobel's attorney, submitted an affidavit signed by the three members of the Public Building Service's Evaluation Committee which said "the Commissioner definitely did not participate" in evaluating certain firms for a federal contract. Strobel had been charged by Subcommittee investigators with helping to list possible architects for a proposed CIA building, and also with having done business through his private firm with some of the same architects.

Nov. 9 -- Strobel resigned, said it had been understood when he came to Washington in 1954 that he would retain his interest in the engineering firm of Strobel and Salzman. "It now appears..that no matter how honorable my conduct and no matter how innocent my intentions, the mere existence of my private business connections will be seized upon by some people to create suspicion and to embarrass me and the Administration," he wrote Mansure.

Chairman Celler, commenting on the resignation, said "Mr. Strobel...was enthusiastically misguided and foolish."

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 3 -- Raymond S. Hoover, a former Commerce Department administrative officer, said political affiliation had played a major role in deciding which employees were to be fired in a 1953 reorganization of the National Production Authority. He said the NPA reorganization was conducted by a WOC committee headed by Lyall Tracy of the Rayonier Manufacturing Co., Seattle, Wash. He said the Republican National Committee had worked with the WOC committee and prepared a list of employees the GOP was "desirous of placing in the new organization," currently known as the Business and Defense Services Administration.

Nov. 4 -- Frederick F. Franklin, a former NPA section chief, said he remained with NPA in 1952 for five months as a non-salaried employee after rejoining the Vanadium Corporation of America. Franklin, currently Vanadium's district manager in Cleveland, said he had worked for the firm before he joined NPA in 1951 at a salary of $10,800 a year. Franklin said Vanadium rehired him at $12,800 a year and instructed him, as a WOC, not to report any NPA information to them that was not available to other firms as well. The firm paid him $300 a month for expenses while he was with NPA, he said.

WOC CODE TIGHTENED

President Eisenhower Nov. 28 issued Executive Order No. 10647 tightening "conflict of interest" regulations for part-time experts, consultants, and WOCs. The order: limited the experts to an advisory capacity in policy matters; barred them from making recommendations concerning any business in which they had an interest, direct or indirect; required the employing agency to specify in advance the need for the appointment, functions of the job, employee's previous experience, and reasons for not filling the job with a full-time employee. This information must be published in the Federal Register, and appointees must file with the Register their business connections.

BANK COMPANIES

HR 6227 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 609) May 20, 1955.
● Passed, with amendments, by the House on a 371-24 roll-call vote June 14. (See p. 152.)
S 2577 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 1095) July 25.

The House in 1955 passed a bill to control future expansion of bank holding companies and to require them to get rid of their non-banking interests. A similar measure was reported in the Senate, but no floor action was taken. Proponents of the legislation held that the unit banking system was an essential part of the American economy and that adequate safeguards must be provided against undue concentration of control of banking activities.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 6227, the Bank Holding Company Act of 1955:

Declared it the policy of Congress to control the creation and expansion of bank holding companies, to subject them to examination and regulation, and to eliminate the danger of undue concentration of economic power through centralized control of banks.

Defined bank holding companies as those that control 25 percent of the voting shares of two or more banks, or which the Federal Reserve Board determines have a "controlling interest" in two or more banks.

Exempted federal or state corporations, mutual savings banks, charitable organizations, or those controlling banks with deposits of no more than $15 million or controlling shares in a fiduciary capacity.

Required a bank holding company to divest itself, within five years, of its interests in non-banking enterprises.

Gave tax relief to stockholders in the distribution of non-banking assets owned on May 15, 1955.

Prohibited expansion of a holding company or subsidiary beyond its state.

Permitted expansion of a holding company or creation of a new one only if it had the approval of the comptroller of the currency or the state banking supervisor, as well as the approval of the Federal Reserve Board governors.

Required holding companies to register in detail with the Federal Reserve Board.

Authorized the Federal Reserve Board to issue regulations in connection with holding company registration and to examine the companies.

Required an annual report by the Board on the operations of the law and recommendations to improve it.

Set penalties for violation of the law.

Background

Legislation to control the operation of bank holding companies was introduced in nearly every Congress between 1938 and 1955, but none was enacted. Limited control was provided by the Banking Act of 1933, but only if one bank in the holding company group was a member of the Federal Reserve System and if the holding company wished to vote the stock it owned in that bank. In such a case the holding company was required to apply to the Federal Reserve Board for a voting permit and submit itself and its subsidiaries to examination.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 28-March 8, on a bill (HR 2674) to provide for control and regulation of bank holding companies.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 28 -- Generally in favor of the bill were William McChesney Martin, Jr., chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System; Ray M. Gidney, United States comptroller of currency; and J. L. Robinson of the Federal Reserve Board.

March 2 -- Supporting HR 2674 were D. Emmert Brumbaugh and W. L. Gregory of the Independent Bankers Association.

March 3 -- Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., chairman of the board of the Transamerica Corp., a bank holding company, and James S. Bush, vice president of the General Contract Co. of Missouri, opposed the bill.

March 4 -- Sen Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) and banking officials from Minnesota and Kentucky testified.

March 7 -- Opposition to certain provisions of HR 2674 was heard from George Boyles of the American Bankers Association and J. Cameron Thomson of the Northwest Bank Corp., Minneapolis. Supporting the bill was Henry D. Karandjeff of the Illinois Bankers Association.

March 8 -- Witnesses included R. M. Evans, former member of the Federal Reserve Board, and Ellery C. Huntington of the Morris Plan Corp.

ACTION -- The Committee reported a clean bill (HR 6227) May 20 (H Rept 609).

Floor Action

The House June 14 passed HR 6227 by a roll-call vote of 371-24. (For voting, see chart, p.152.)

DEBATE -- Consideration of the bill took two days, with most discussion centering on a substitute proposed by Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) which he said had the approval of the Federal Reserve Board and the comptroller of the currency.

June 13 -- Brent Spence (D Ky.) -- Bank holding companies should be regulated as are utility holding companies. Because "centralization of banking interests is a bad thing for the economy of the nation...small business people all over the country are for this bill."

Wolcott -- "Lobbyists for this bill (led by the Independent Bankers Association) have...set up a political situation which many Members of Congress have bit on, hook, line, and sinker." The issue they present "is purely political" -- small business vs. big business.

Albert Rains (D Ala.) -- Through bank holding companies, outside interests "are answerable to no one except their own consciences for what they do to our communities and to our local banks and to the supply of credit to our local businesses."

June 14 -- Gordon L. McDonough (R Calif.) -- Exemptions were put in the bill "for the special convenience" of certain holding corporations in Florida, Georgia, and Kentucky. The Wolcott substitute would treat all companies fairly.

Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio) -- Congress should "not grant special privileges to a few special interests."

Henry Aldous Dixon (R Utah) -- "HR 6227 would circumvent state banking laws and make the laws of many states applicable to holding companies.... In my opinion, Congress has not the right to define holding companies as branch banking." In addition, the section on judicial review would "create a field day for lawyers."

Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- The Wolcott substitute would "gut the bill." HR 6227 specifically preserves the states' jurisdiction over banks, but the substitute would "vest all of the jurisdictions in the Federal Reserve Board."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 14 -- Barratt O'Hara (D Ill.), as modified by L. H. Fountain (D N.C.) -- Reword declaration of policy to include eliminating "undue concentration of economic power through centralized control of banks." Voice.

Spence -- Exempt from the bill corporations whose stock is wholly owned by a federal agency. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 14 -- Wolcott -- Substitute a new bill that would, in part, define a holding company as one with a majority interest in a bank, and would include individuals in the definition of a company. Teller vote, 109-150.

James A. Haley (D Fla.) -- Exempt from the bill any company with 75 percent or more of its assets in the field of agriculture or forestry. Standing vote, 53-59.

McDonough -- Strike out requirements that holding companies get rid of their non-banking interests, but prohibit them from acquiring any additional businesses of that kind. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency, Banking Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- July 5-14, on bills (S 880, 2350, HR 6227) to regulate bank holding companies.

TESTIMONY -- July 5 -- Chairman Martin of the Federal Reserve System said HR 6227 was too broad in its coverage. He said he preferred legislation which would define bank holding companies, require them to rid themselves of non-banking interests, and oblige them to seek federal approval before buying 5 percent or more of a bank's notes.

U.S. comptroller Gidney supported S 2350, which contained provisions outlined by Martin as being desirable. Chairman H. Earl Cook of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation suggested minor amendments to each of the bills. Spokesmen for the Independent Bankers Association supported HR 6227 and S 880.

July 6 -- E. O. Jenkins, president of a Minneapolis holding company with interests in 76 banks, described HR 6227 as "entirely unreasonable." He said S 2350 was a "temperate, logical approach" to the question of control.

July 7 -- A spokesman for the General Contract Corp. opposed HR 6227. The president of the Michigan Mortgage Corp. opposed all the bills. A representative of the Shawmut Association of Boston opposed HR 6227, but generally favored S 2350.

July 11 -- George R. Boyles of the American Bankers Association said his group favored additional legislation regulating bank holding companies. Such legislation, he said, should be reasonable, not too stringent, and in no case should prohibit expansion.

George A. Newbury, Buffalo, N.Y., banker, said holding companies could be detrimental to the public good. But he said he believed they should be controlled by reasonable regulation and not destroyed.

Bayard F. Pope of the Marine Midland Corp., a New York banking firm, said any regulatory legislation should be flexible, with discretion left with the Federal Reserve Board.

INDEPENDENTS OPPOSE LEGISLATION

July 12 -- Two independent California bankers, Walter H. Field of Sunnyvale and Lester G. Allen of Alhambra, opposed the bills on the ground they would stifle industry competition.

Two bank holding company executives, J. Cameron Thomson of Minneapolis and William G. Brumder of Milwaukee, also opposed the legislation. Thomson accused some independent bankers of attempting to confuse the issue with claims that bank holding companies were branch banks. Brumder contended holding companies served their communities well, and defended them against charges which "are not well supported by specific cases and facts."

July 14 -- Belgrano of Transamerica Corp. said the proposed legislation would virtually destroy his firm. He said the bills under consideration constituted a "death-sentence-approach."

ACTION -- The full Committee July 25 reported a clean bill (S 2577 -- S Rept 1095) to restrict and regulate bank holding companies.

In comparison to HR 6227, S 2577 would:

Omit a House prohibition against expanding beyond state lines.

Omit other House features designed to give state authorities more direct control of bank holding companies.

GOVERNMENT SECURITIES

H Res 210 -- Reported, amended, by House Rules Committee (H Rept 622) May 24, 1955.
- Rejected by the House on a 178-214 roll-call vote June 15. (See p. 152.)

The House in 1955 rejected a resolution that would have authorized an investigation by its Banking and Currency Committee of the Federal Open Market Committee and trading in government securities. The Federal Open Market Committee, a 12-member group representing the Federal Reserve System, buys and sells government securities.

PROVISIONS -- As reported by the Rules Committee, H Res 210 would have authorized the Banking and Currency Committee to investigate:

The composition, operation, and activities of the Federal Open Market Committee.

The fluctuation in rates of interest and prices of securities issued by the United States and the effects of such fluctuations on the national economy.

The various types of government securities and amount of speculation in them.

House

COMMITTEE -- Rules.

ACTION -- May 24 reported the resolution (H Rept 622) with amendments. The Committee deleted a provision authorizing investigations of proposals for federal assistance in financing state and local highway and school programs.

Floor Action

The House June 15, by a roll-call vote of 178-214, rejected H Res 210. Usher L. Burdick (R N.D.) was the only Republican who voted for the resolution. (For voting, see chart, p. 152.)

DEBATE -- Wright Patman (D Texas) -- "The Federal Open Market Committee has the greatest financial power of any single group in all history. It has the largest existing securities portfolio under one control... about $23.5 billion dollars of U.S. Treasury securities." Commercial banks' profits on securities sales "rose from $39 million in 1953 to $416 million in 1954." The purpose of the investigation would be to find "why the economy should be disrupted by such a fluctuating bond market, which is crap shooting in the government bond market."

Leo E. Allen (R Ill.) -- During "the present abundant prosperity...now is not the time to meddle...with an agency of government which has so much to do with business expansion."

Jesse P. Wolcott (R Mich.) -- "On three occasions the Joint Committee on the Economic Report (with Patman as a member) has dealt exhaustively with the subject" of the proposed investigation.

Richard Bolling (D Mo.) -- The Joint Committee "is not a legislative committee and...cannot bring in specific recommendations as to legislation."

BANK STOCK VOTING

S 256 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 240) April 28, 1955.
- Passed by the Senate, on a roll-call vote of 53-21, June 23. (See p. 129.)

The Senate in 1955 passed a bill (S 256) to eliminate cumulative voting of shares of stock in the election of directors of national banking associations, unless such elections were provided for in the articles of association. The House took no action on the bill.

BACKGROUND -- The National Bank Act of 1864 contained no provision for cumulative voting. It was amended in 1933 to require that cumulative voting of shares of stock be permitted in the election of directors of national banking associations. Cumulative voting for directors allows a shareholder to cast as many votes as are represented by the total number of his voting shares multiplied by the number of directors to be elected. It was designed to permit minority representation on boards of directors.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HEARING -- April 7, on S 256.

TESTIMONY -- Joseph E. Healy of the Citizens National Bank of Hampton, Va., and four other banking officials supported the bill. Healy said cumulative voting allowed shareholders, for each share owned, to cast as many votes for directors as there were directors to be elected, or to cast all their votes for one candidate. He said under existing law "a minority group of shareholders could very well disturb the sound operation of a bank."

Healy said he was speaking for the American Bankers Association, which unqualifiedly endorsed S 256.

Opposing the bill was Fred Walker of the First National Bank of Arlington, Va., who said the proposed change would cause proxy fights.

Chairman William McChesney Martin, Jr., of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System said, in a letter to the Committee, that the Board thought the principle of cumulative voting was sound and opposed enactment of S 256 unless it was established "that results in actual operation have been so unfavorable that enactment of this bill is clearly advisable."

ACTION -- The bill was reported April 28 (S Rept 240) without amendment.

Floor Action

The Senate June 23 passed S 256 by a roll-call vote of 53-21. (For voting, see chart, p. 129.)

DEBATE -- A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- If S 256 becomes law, "any national banking assiciation which wants to continue to permit cumulative voting will be privileged to do so, but it will not be compulsory. By passage of this bill, we shall have removed a provision of the law which originally was inserted under conditions raising doubts as to its merit, and which an overwhelming majority of practical bankers now believe is harmful or, at best, serves no useful purpose."

Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.) -- "A bank board is, at best, more or less of a self-perpetuating body. If this bill were to be enacted, every bank, or almost every bank, would become completely self-perpetuating."

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- "I think the so-called permissive voting section in the bill is absolutely worthless... If we merely say that cumulative voting is permitted, we give no guaranty of protection to the minority. I happen to believe that the provision for cumulative voting adopted in 1933 was very sound. I think it is still sorely needed."

HOUSE REFERRAL

S 256 was referred to the House Banking and Currency Committee June 27. No further action was taken on the bill in 1955.

HURRICANE DAMAGE

S 414 -- Reported, with amendment, by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 388) May 27, 1955.
- Passed, amended by voice vote of the Senate May 31.
- Passed by voice vote of the House June 2.

P.L. 71 -- Signed into law June 15.

S 414 authorized the Army Corps of Engineers to survey the eastern and southeastern seaboard of the United States to determine possible means of preventing hurricane damage. At hearings on the bill, representatives of areas stricken by the 1954 hurricanes described their losses. A representative of the Weather Bureau said that additional funds were needed to further studies of hurricane movements.

There was little debate on the bill. Sen. Prescott Bush (R Conn.), one of its sponsors, said in explaining it:

"...certain areas have suffered devastating damage, loss of life, and great distress as a result of repeated hurricanes....The bill...is to enable the Engineers to study the situation and make recommendations as to what can be done to deal with the problem...both through giving improved warning service, and secondly, furnish the physical means to deal with the problem and stop the tidal damage."

The fiscal 1956 Public Works appropriation (HR 6766 -- PL 163) earmarked $1 million for the hurricane study. (See pp. 227ff.)

ILLINOIS WATERWAY

HR 3210 -- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 1029) June 29, 1955.
- Passed by voice vote of the House July 6. (For roll-call vote, see p. 158.)

The House in 1955 passed a bill, similar to one pocket vetoed by President Eisenhower in 1954, to increase the flow of Lake Michigan water through the Illinois River and channels connecting it to the Mississippi River. The bill had the support of all Chicago area Congressmen but was opposed by representatives of other Great Lakes states. Opponents objected to pollution from Chicago and to lowering the lake level.

The Senate did not act on the bill in 1955.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 3210:

Authorized Illinois and the Sanitary District of Chicago to withdraw, under the supervision of the Army, an annual average of 2,500 cubic feet of Lake Michigan water per second, for three years.

Set the maximum diversion at any time as 5,000 cubic feet per second.

Authorized $280,000 for a study of the effects of the increased diversion by the Army Engineers and the Public Health Service, $190,000 of the cost to be charged to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Directed the Secretary of Army to report to Congress by Jan. 31, 1959, the results of the study and to recommend whether the increased diversion should be continued.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Illinois Waterway." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p.519.)

Congress in 1954 passed a bill to increase the diversion of water from Lake Michigan into the Illinois Waterway, but it was pocket vetoed by the President. Mr. Eisenhower said existing diversions were adequate for navigation and that other states and Canada might be adversely affected by the measure.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HEARINGS -- June 17, 22.

ACTION -- June 29 reported HR 3210 without amendment (H Rept 1029). In its report the Committee noted that HR 3210 differed from bills offered in previous Congresses "in that it imposes certain limitations with respect to the maximum amount of diversion that could be effected at any one time." The Committee held that the experimental increases and the study authorized in the bill would "afford an opportunity to secure much valuable information on the exact effects of an increased flow through the Illinois Waterway."

Floor Action

HR 3210 was passed by voice vote of the House July 6. A motion to recommit the bill, offered by Glenn R. Davis (R Wis.), was rejected by a 74-316 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 158.)

DEBATE -- The legislation was supported mainly by a bipartisan group of Illinois Congressmen and opposed by Representatives from other Great Lakes districts.

Thomas J. O'Brien (D Ill.) -- Despite new sewage treatment plants, additional water is needed in the Illinois Waterway for sanitary reasons and to offset current corrosive effects on shipping. The bill includes "sufficient safeguards as to prevent damage to anyone's interests."

Frances P. Bolton (R Ohio) -- "If we lower the level of Lake Michigan, inevitably it will lower the level of all the Great Lakes. It would not only reduce shipping...but affect basic industry."

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- Army engineers testified that the level of Lake Michigan "will not be lowered by more than one inch."

Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) -- "A one-inch loss of draft for shipping means a loss of two million tons in carrying capacity on the Great Lakes in one year."

ALASKA WATER RESOURCES

HR 3990 -- Reported, amended, by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 419) April 13, 1955.
- Passed, with amendments, on voice vote of the House June 1. (For roll-call vote, see p. 150.)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 699) July 1.
- Passed, with amendment, by voice vote of the Senate July 6.
- Conference report (H Rept 1447) agreed to by the Senate July 25, by the House July 29, on voice votes.

P.L. 322 -- Signed into law Aug. 9.

Congress in 1955 enacted legislation authorizing the Secretary of Interior to investigate and report to Congress on projects for the conservation, development, and utilization of the water resources of Alaska. The measure did not establish a new activity in Alaska but permitted use of Bureau of Reclamation facilities already functioning in the territory.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 3990:

Authorized the Secretary of Interior to conduct studies and report to Congress on projects for the conservation, development, and utilization of Alaskan water resources.

Authorized up to $250,000 annually for the studies.

BACKGROUND -- The basic bill was prepared by the Department of Interior and forwarded to each chamber of Congress on Feb. 9, 1955, as a departmental measure. The Bureau of Reclamation for several years had been conducting a water-resources study program in Alaska using annual appropriations of $100,000 to $250,000 from general investigations funds. The Department felt that the program had "proved to be of such merit that it should be placed on a permanent basis."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Territories Subcommittee.

HEARING -- March 2.

TESTIMONY -- Assistant Secretary of Interior Fred G. Aandahl, R.W. Jennings of the Bureau of Reclamation, and P.H. Whitmer of the Interior Department spoke in favor of HR 3990.

ACTION -- The bill was reported by the full Committee April 13 (H Rept 419). As amended by the Committee, the bill authorized up to $250,000 annually for the program and specified that any unspent appropriations should be returned annually to the Treasury.

Floor Action

The House June 1 passed HR 3990 by voice vote. A recommittal motion offered by Hamer H. Budge (R Idaho) was rejected on a 79-278 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart, p. 150.)

Committee amendments to the bill were agreed to by voice votes. An amendment by Budge to have the Army Engineers conduct the studies was ruled out of order.

DEBATE -- Opponents of the bill contended that it would give blanket authority to the Bureau of Reclamation to extend its activities.

Clair Engle (D Calif.) -- For seven years "this program has been going forward" by legislation in annual appropriation bills. It "has proved to be of such merit that it should be placed on a permanent basis."

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- "The Army Engineers are now up (in Alaska) doing this work, the Interior Department already has the Geological Survey up there... This is...duplication."

Budge -- "The Bureau of Reclamation should not extend...into fields beyond its present area jurisdiction and...beyond its present activities."

E. L. Bartlett (D Alaska) -- The bill delegates authority to the Secretary of Interior because he "is the Cabinet officer chiefly responsible for Alaska." He "could delegate the work to the Office of Territories, if he desired," and not to the Reclamation Bureau.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

James G. Fulton (R Pa.) -- Reduce authorization to $100,000. Standing vote, 24-66.

Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) -- Authorize $250,000 only for fiscal 1956. Standing, 40-61.

Fulton -- Direct that the studies be made only by the Geological Survey. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interior and Insular Affairs, Territories Subcommittee.

HEARING -- June 9 on HR 3990.

TESTIMONY -- Delegate E. L. Bartlett (D Alaska) and representatives of the Interior Department supported the bill.

ACTION -- The bill was reported, with an amendment, by the full Committee July 1 (S Rept 699). The amendment deleted a House provision requiring that unspent appropriations be returned annually to the Treasury.

Floor Action

The Senate July 6 passed HR 3990 by voice vote after agreeing to the Committee amendment.

DEBATE -- Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.) -- By "customary practice," Bureau of Reclamation investigatory funds "are available until expended." Because of the "short season" for such work in Alaska, and the fact that a fiscal year ends June 30, the House provision on unspent annual appropriations "creates a grave danger of unnecessary interruptions each year in the middle of" the Bureau's work.

Conference

REPORT -- A House-Senate conference committee July 27 filed a report (H Rept 1447) in which House conferees agreed to the Senate amendment to the bill.

ACTION -- The Senate July 25 and the House July 29 agreed to the conference report by voice votes and without debate.

ALASKA HEARINGS

The House Interior and Insular Affairs Irrigation and Reclamation Subcommittee held hearings on Alaska's water resources in September and October in Alaska.

INVESTIGATIONS

Congressmen Inaugurated 116 Probes In First Session;

Lawmakers in Sight of Record for Costs, Numbers

The 84th Congress wound up its first session well on the way to setting a new record for the number and cost of Congressional investigations.

A Congressional Quarterly survey, up to Aug. 22, two weeks following first-session adjournment, showed:

- Congressional committees had launched 116 studies and investigations (57 by Senate, 50 by House, nine by joint committees), with another 21 definitely scheduled to begin before the second session convened in January, 1956.

- Committees were provided $6,114,133 in probe money: $5,591,489 in new money authorized by the 84th Congress, plus $522,644 in Senate "carryover" funds -- money authorized for probes but unspent by the 83rd Congress.

Senate committees were authorized to spend $3,124,422; the carryover funds pushed the Senate total to $3,647,066. House committees were authorized to spend $2,467,067; they receive no carryover money.

COMPARISONS

Comparative statistics compiled by CQ showed:

- The 83rd Congress began 90 probes during its first eight months, 228 over its two-year span.

- The 82nd Congress conducted the most investigations -- 236.

- The previous first-session high for new money for probes was $4,778,471, authorized by the 83rd Congress in 1953.

- The 83rd Congress set aside the most money for probes -- $7,606,973, also had $568,421 in carryover funds to bring the all-time high to $8,175,394.

In addition to funds specifically authorized for probes, five joint committees whose functions were essentially investigative were given $431,575 to cover all expenses. A sixth Senate-House unit, the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, was allotted $258,060 for all Committee expenses. This Committee, however, also handled legislation. No breakdown was available for the amount it spent on inquiries.

Figures for joint committees were excluded from probe fund totals, since they covered all committee expenses and were not specified as investigation funds.

SPENDING TOTALS

House and Senate committees reported spending $1,148,003.54 for investigations and studies during the first six months of the 84th Congress. Senate committees reported spending $736,397, House committees $411,606.54. Joint committees filed no spending reports.

Biggest spender was the Senate Judiciary Committee, which reported expenditures of $210,723.12, more than one-fourth the Senate total. The Judiciary Committee -- and its subcommittees -- also started the most probes (19) and was authorized to spend the most money ($979,672, plus $135,464 in carryover funds).

Other leaders in amount of funds authorized: House Appropriations, $500,000; House Government Operations, $495,000; Senate Appropriations, $400,000. Spending runners-up: House Government Operations, $107,909.17; House Un-American Activities, $102,702.95; Senate Government Operations, $93,289.02. Runners-up in number of probes undertaken: House Government Operations, 17; House Un-American Activities, eight, Senate Government Operations, seven.

Fact Sheet

84th CONGRESS SET FIRST-SESSION PROBE MARK

Committees of the 84th Congress inaugurated 116 investigations and studies up to Aug. 22, according to a tally by Congressional Quarterly. The breakdown: Senate committees, 57 probes; House committees, 50; joint committees, nine.

Number of investigations undertaken by Congressional committees and subcommittees since 1951:

82nd Congress (1951-52)		236
83rd Congress (1953-54)		228
1953 only	135
1954 only	93
84th Congress (1/5/55-8/22/55)		116

CQ counted only investigations and studies which reached the hearings stage. Staff studies on which there were no hearings were excluded. No investigations were listed for the House and Senate Appropriations Committees, whose staffs conduct continuing studies on appropriations, operations of executive departments, and disposition of government funds.

Hearings on bills and resolutions were excluded, except for several instances when hearings in connection with legislation expanded into investigations. For example, Senate Rules Subcommittee hearings on a bill to amend the federal election laws served as an inquiry into all phases of election campaigns.

The length in time of a hearing did not necessarily indicate the scope of a probe; one day of public hearings might have culminated weeks or months of staff work. Much of the money for probes, in fact, financed the thousands of staff studies which preceded public hearings.

Investigations were not confined to alleged corruption or irregularity in government programs. Many studies were designed to gather information. One such study was undertaken by the Joint Atomic Energy Committee on the development, growth, and state of the atomic energy industry.

Top Subjects

Military programs, communism and subversion, and business drew most Congressional investigative attention. The subject breakdown of probes undertaken as of Aug. 22:

Subject	Number
Military programs	24
Communism, subversion	16
Business, businessmen	13
Transportation, shipping	8
Juvenile delinquency	7
Atomic energy	6
Immigration, refugees, deportation	5
Power	5
Housing, health	5
Agriculture	4
Government employee security program	2
Labor, unemployment	2
Miscellaneous	19
TOTAL	116

All but two of the communism and subversion probes were handled by the Senate Judiciary Internal Security Subcommittee and the House Un-American Activities Committee. This marked a switch from the situation during the 83rd Congress, when most subversion probes were conducted by the Senate Government Operations Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, then headed by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.).

Three antitrust studies were counted, and at least two more were scheduled to start, indicating antitrust would continue to be a major probe subject.

Background

A comprehensive study of legal precedents and historical background on Congressional investigations may be found in CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 644ff.

The study gives a detailed breakdown on money authorized for probes during the 83rd Congress and breakdowns on probe spending in 1953-54 by House and Senate committees.

Of particular interest is a sample budget of an investigative committee, showing where a probe dollar goes.

Congressional investigations date back to Washington's time; the 1954 Almanac gives details. Another section outlines the legal precedents for Congressional inquiries and tells of the parliamentary procedure needed to launch an investigation.

Probes Undertaken

The following list includes investigations undertaken between Jan. 5, when the 84th Congress convened, and Aug. 22. Each inquiry is listed chronologically by starting date under the committee and subcommittee which conducted it. Committees are listed alphabetically. The breakdown shows when a hearing started or concluded. Some probes were still in progress on Aug. 22; they are labelled "continuing." The list includes the numbers of pertinent official committee reports. Also included: CQ 1955 Almanac page references, when applicable.

What's a Probe?

For purposes of this survey, Congressional Quarterly defined "investigation" as an inquiry by any Congressional committee or subcommittee which used investigative procedures (examining records, summoning and questioning witnesses) for one or more of the following reasons:

- Fact-finding for possible special and remedial legislation.
- Fulfillment of Congress' function as "watchdog" over operation of the government and its programs.
- Informing the public.
- Resolving questions concerning membership or procedure, such as conduct of elections or fitness of Members of Congress.

Among committee activities not included in the definition: Inquiries conducted by committee staff members without participation by Members of Congress in formal hearings; routine hearings, and action on bills and resolutions.

Authority for Probes

Routine, non-investigative functions of committees are authorized by rules and in legislation establishing the committees, and expenses are paid from lump-sum legislative appropriations without further authorization. Outlined below are procedures by which committees launch and pay for investigations.

House Committees -- House rules authorize the Government Operations, Un-American Activities, Appropriations, and Rules Committees to undertake investigations without additional specific authority.

Other House committees may launch investigations only if the House adopts an authorizing resolution.

To get funds for investigations, all House committees except Appropriations must win House approval of an additional resolution authorizing expenditure of specific sums from the contingent fund. The Appropriations Committee has funds earmarked in legislative appropriations acts.

Senate Committees -- Each of the 15 Senate standing committees, plus the Select Small Business Committee, automatically has available $10,000 to spend for investigation during each Congress, without additional specific authorization. Although the Appropriations Committee has this $10,000 authorization, members of the staff say it is used for non-investigative activities. Appropriations Committee investigations are paid for from funds earmarked in legislative appropriations acts.

Senate committees with automatic authorizations may undertake investigations without additional authorization unless they need more money. To get more money, they must win Senate approval of a resolution -- one, not two, as in the House -- combining authorization of the probe with authorization for expenditure of specific sums from the contingent fund.

Special Committees -- Investigations may be assigned to standing committees, or to special committees established by the authorizing resolutions.

Joint Committees -- Legislative appropriations acts allocate specific sums for expenses of joint committees. These appropriations are not classified by investigative and non-investigative functions.

Spending for Probes

Of the $8,175,394 authorized for investigations during the 83rd Congress, committees reported spending $5,354,681.71 -- 65 percent.

Committees are required by the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 to report their probe expenditures semi-annually. Spending figures for joint committees are not reported.

Analysis of the investigation budgets proposed for two Senate committees and seven subcommittees showed that they planned to spend $422,000 during the 12 months beginning Feb. 1, 1955. Of this total, $362,890.29 -- 86 percent -- was budgeted for staff and consultants' salaries. The remainder, $59,109.71, was budgeted for administrative expenses, including travel, hearings, witness fees and expenses, stationery, office supplies, telephone, telegraph, postage, newspapers, magazines, documents, and contingent funds.

The proposed budget of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, one of those analyzed, for investigating economic stabilization and mobilization:

First-Session Spending

House and Senate committees reported spending $1,148,003.54 for investigations and studies during the first six months of the 84th Congress.

CQ's spending figures were based on reports filed semi-annually with the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House in accordance with the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946. The totals cover the period Jan. 1-June 30; they do not represent complete first-session spending.

The CQ breakdown covers the 15 Senate standing committees and the Select Small Business Committee. The breakdown also covers 15 of the 21 House committees which were authorized to spend money for probes. The remaining six House committees either started no investigations during the first half of 1955 or used regular staff members, not paid out of probe funds, to conduct studies. Joint committees do not file reports of probe expenses.

Joint Committee Funds

Five Joint committees with essentially investigative functions were allotted $431,575 during the first session. This money was earmarked in the Legislative Appropriation Act of 1956 and the Defense Production Act amendments of 1955. The money was set aside, on a fiscal-year basis, to cover all committee expenses. It was not specified for investigations, and is not included in CQ's "Money for Probes" chart on next page. These Joint committees, with funds allotted during 1955 for fiscal 1956 and comparative figures covering two fiscal years for both the 82nd and 83rd Congresses:

Committee	84th Congress (1955)	83rd Congress (1953-54)	82nd Congress (1951-52)

* Committees are no longer in existence

In addition, the 84th Congress set aside $258,060 for all expenses during fiscal 1956 of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee. This committee handles legislation as well as investigative work, and no breakdown is available on what portion of its funds went for inquiries.

Probe Resolutions

Fifty-seven resolutions authorizing spending for investigations or studies by House and Senate committees were adopted during the first session of the 84th Congress. The 57 resolutions authorized expenditures of $4,541,489. The number of resolutions does not indicate the number of investigations actually undertaken. A resolution may grant money for investigations of "matters coming within the jurisdiction" of a committee, without pinpointing the specific subject. Thus one broadly worded resolution may provide money to launch many separate inquiries.

All money for House committees was set aside by special resolution. Funds listed for the Senate and House Appropriations Committees are earmarked, on a fiscal-year basis, in legislative appropriations bills. Joint committees receive their funds in a similar manner.

STOCK MARKET STUDY

In January, 1955, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee voted to investigate the past year's steadily rising stock market prices.

Hearings began March 3 and ended March 23. A majority report, issued on May 26, recommended tightening federal regulations and continuing investigation of "abuses."

Background

The Securities and Exchange Commission was established in July, 1934, to protect the interests of the public against malpractices in the securities and financial markets. Congress in 1954 amended the law concerning the registration of securities with the SEC. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 532-33.)

Prior to January 4, 1955, a purchaser of stocks was obliged to provide 50 percent of the stock price in cash. Rulings by the Federal Reserve System raised this margin required from buyers of stocks to 60 percent on January 4, and to 70 percent on April 23. This was done by amending Regulation U, which prescribes the amount of money which banks can lend to purchasers of stocks. The first action of the Federal Reserve System preceded the Committee hearings and the second adjustment was made before the Committee report was released.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

ACTION -- Jan. 14 unanimously voted to "study" stock market movements, with special attention to any "extreme" price fluctuations. Chairman J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) said, "I know of no specific frauds, manipulations or wrong-doings, nor am I even suspicious of any. However, the remarkable rises in market prices over the past 15 months...certainly warrant the Committee's concern and study."

Before hearings began, the Committee sent 5,500 questionnaires to stock exchange officials, brokers and economists. More than 1,200 replies were received and analyzed in a preliminary effort to determine whether a repetition of the 1929 stock market failure lay ahead.

HEARINGS -- March 3-23. Opening the hearings, Fulbright said: "The basic issue...is not whether stock prices are too high, whether they can safely go higher, or whether they should be driven down," but "whether the public interest is being safely and wisely served."

TESTIMONY -- March 3 -- G. Keith Funston, president of the New York stock exchange, testified that the boom in stock prices rested on firm foundations and that he did not foresee any 1929-type crash. He said existing exchange regulations "are adequate to protect the public." He added that if there were areas in which "constructive changes are desirable, we shall be happy to have them." Funston said that "myriad factors" had contributed to the boom market of the previous 18 months.

He listed one of the demand factors as "a growing confidence in the future growth and prosperity of our country," and one of the factors limiting supply as the capital gains tax, which he said caused many people to hold on to their stocks. He called for early government revision of this tax, and eventual elimination of double taxation of dividends "as soon as revenue considerations permit."

Following a statement by Funston that the expansion needs of American business and industry would require investment by millions of persons in the middle and lower income level groups, Fulbright said that such a development "may impose obligations on the Securities and Exchange Commission which they didn't think they had in the past."

Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) asked Funston if he was "100 percent satisfied there is no rigging of the market -- no pushing up of prices for purposes of unloading." "Yes, sir," Funston replied. He said the exchange kept a constant watch for any activity which would violate its own rules of SEC regulations.

March 4 -- President Edward T. McCormick of the American Stock Exchange, New York, said stock prices were "definitely not" too high. He said stock market tipsters tended to "unbalance the market" and that such devices as chain-letter stock promotion schemes were attempted from time to time in an "out-and-out" effort to rig the market.

(The Committee March 5 asked the Department of Defense for a list of the 100 companies that had the largest defense contracts in 1954. Fulbright said the Committee would try to determine the effect of defense spending on the advance in stock prices.)

March 7 -- James E. Day of Chicago, president of the Midwest Stock Exchange, said: "...I want to make it quite clear the stock market can go down -- and substantially." He called for equal reporting requirements for over-the-counter as well as exchange stock dealers in order to wipe out the "double standard in securities."

President Ronald E. Kaehler, of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, said he thought the stock market was healthy and that most people were buying stocks to earn a steady income. He said that dividends, rather than earnings constituted the primary factor behind stock prices.

DANGER SIGNS SEEN

March 8 -- Dr. John K. Galbraith, Harvard University economics professor, warned that the United States could be in the early stages of a boom-and-bust cycle similar to that which led to the 1929 financial crash. If the stock market continued to rise, he said, the Federal Reserve Board should be pressed to put trading on a cash basis. "If speculative tendencies persist," he continued, "more drastic measures invoking the tax power should be contemplated." Among the danger signs in the current boom, Galbraith said, were increased credit buying, newcomers in the market, and an increasing gap between the sale price and the book value of stocks. He said Wall Street demands for a cut in the capital gains tax should be received with "a measure of amiable skepticism."

Harold E. Wood of St. Paul, Minn., chairman of the National Association of Securities Dealers, said he knew of no manipulation or other devices affecting the prices of over-the-counter stocks. But he said the Association "has no specific power or authority to take any action which would restrain speculation, excessive or not, on the part of customers."

(Stock market prices fell sharply March 8 but Fulbright said he "couldn't imagine" that there was any connection between that day's drop and the study the Committee was making. Fulbright said the break in prices "is only demonstrating the wisdom" of Dr. Galbraith's words of caution.)

March 9 -- Winthrop H. Smith, managing partner of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, said he strongly opposed Dr. Galbraith's proposal that the government take steps to end credit buying of stocks as a means of curbing speculation. "I don't grant yet that there has been undue speculation," Smith said.

March 10 -- John J. McCloy, board chairman of the Chase National Bank, NYC, said industrial experience of 1953-54 cast doubt on a widely held belief that "even a minor recession in the United States would set in train a downward spiral in the economies of other nations which they could not avoid."

Marriner S. Eccles, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said there were "elements of real danger to the economy" in the stock market and housing booms. He called for tighter credit in both fields, and said he saw a paradox in the 1955 situation: "A booming stock market and an excessive construction activity, especially in the field of housing, and an automobile production at the rate of eight million cars a year, cannot be maintained."

SEARS ROEBUCK FUND

March 11 -- Gen. Robert E. Wood of Sears, Roebuck & Co., explained the Sears pension plan. He said stock buying by pension funds had "contributed greatly" to raising stock prices. Wood said the Sears fund had $90 million which it would not invest because of uncertainty over market conditions.

Benjamin Graham of the Graham-Newman Investment Corp. and Columbia University said normally Congress should not "meddle with the stock market," but in view of the boom's speculative aspect, Congress should authorize the President to change the rate of the capital gains tax. He favored "a fairly rapid advance" toward putting margin requirements at 100 percent. He said the current hearings probably helped cause a stock price break, but added it was only one of a number of causes.

March 14 -- William McChesney Martin, Jr., chairman of the Federal Reserve System board of governors and a former president of the New York Stock Exchange, opposed putting stock market trading on an all-cash basis, but declined to say whether the Board was considering any curbs on market activity. He also declined to say whether stock prices were too high, explaining that any expression from him as to price levels might cause adverse repercussions in the economy.

"CRITICISM" INCREASES UNCERTAINTY

March 15 -- Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey told the Committee its inquiry might be undermining public confidence in the American economy. He said that "criticism" of government agencies and speculation about what Congress might do in the way of "restrictive action" could "easily contribute to a questioning of confidence and uncertainty as to what the future may hold." Humphrey declined to give an opinion on whether stock prices went too high before the March 8 drop. He said he believed revenue might be as great, because of increased volume, if the capital gains tax were cut in half.

Committee Chairman J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.) said he did not want to harm the American economy, but the Committee's duty was to determine whether stock markets were serving the country's welfare.

Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) said Fulbright's purpose plainly was "to prove stock prices are too high" and that a crash was imminent. He said Fulbright had brought out "very little testimony showing that the economy is in a healthy condition."

March 16 -- J.A. Livingston, financial editor of the Philadelphia Bulletin, said he saw danger of a "boom to doom" cycle in a surge of Wall Street optimism not too different from the one "which led to the poorhouse in 1929."

Dorsey Richardson, chairman of the National Association of Investment Companies, New York, said much market activity stemmed from "the fact that investors with...surplus funds...have become more generally aware of the expansion of the economy...This can scarcely be regarded as undesirable or unhealthy."

(President Eisenhower, at his news conference March 16, said he was concerned about a decline in stock market prices, but he had no opinion as to whether the Senate Committee study of the market was contributing to the drop.)

March 17 -- Ferdinand Eberstadt, New York investment banker, said: "More disturbing than the present market level are security frauds...which, while not technically fraudulent, are so worthless as to have the same effect on the buyer." He said the Committee's investigation, which he called timely and useful, already had put a "distinctly perceptive" damper on such practices.

March 18 -- Sen. Capehart accused Chairman Fulbright of seeking to "harass the...Administration and the business of the United States" through the inquiry. Fulbright charged that "professional Republicans" were trying to wreck the inquiry. "The Administration apparently has made up its mind to treat these hearings as part of a low Democratic scheme to undermine the Republican prosperity," he asserted.

Harlow H. Curtice, president, General Motors Corp., said the automotive industry "is even more competitive today than at any time..." He said he did not think the U.S. economy was so fragile that it would be damaged seriously by the Committee study.

PROFESSOR ACCUSED BY CAPEHART

March 21 -- Capehart attacked Dr. John K. Galbraith, Harvard economist who testified March 8, as a spreader of "gloom and doom" economic philosophy and the author of a pamphlet which Capehart said praised communism. He demanded that Galbraith be recalled, but Fulbright ruled Capehart out of order and said his proposal would have to be taken up at a future executive meeting. Galbraith, meanwhile, requested an opportunity to reappear, and denied Capehart's assertions.

Benjamin F. Fairless, chairman of the U.S. Steel Corp., forecast "one of the greatest periods of prosperity" in U.S. history. He said he saw no "weak points" in the economy, and assured the Committee that there was real competition in the steel industry.

March 22 -- Chairman Ralph H. Demmler of the Securities and Exchange Commission denied the need for new stock market regulations. He said "there is not prevalent any serious wave of illegal practices by brokers and dealers."

To Fulbright's query of whether Demmler thought the inquiry was in the public interest, Demmler answered "yes," adding that it would be particularly useful if it brought attention to the fact that SEC did not pass on the value of stocks registered with it.

March 23 -- Bernard M. Baruch said the stock market price boom had been caused primarily by "the cumulative effects of the inflationary policies...followed over the past decade and a half." He opposed any tax cuts and urged a bigger defense buildup. "Much of our weakness in foreign policy has come...because some... believed that the economy could not stand what is necessary for defense. With this...I am in total disagreement," he said.

Baruch recommended a law permitting the President to freeze prices in time of crisis, a new renegotiation law, and a Congressional study of the problems raised by the market influence of pension funds and foundations.

Following Baruch's testimony, the hearings were recessed indefinitely. Chairman Fulbright said he thought they had been educational and "very healthy." He said he saw no need of any immediate legislation.

Committee Report

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee May 26 issued its report (S Rept 376) on the investigation into the stock market.

Eight Democrats and three Republicans joined to issue the majority report which recommended tightening existing federal regulations and further study of "abuses" and possible manipulation. The majority said "there has been an increase in unhealthy speculative developments."

Four Republicans -- Homer E. Capehart (Ind.), John W. Bricker (Ohio), Wallace F. Bennett (Utah), and J. Glenn Beall (Md.) -- filed a dissent which asserted that the inquiry was "not a study of the stock market but a studied attempt to disturb the economy." They said the majority report, "as well as the investigation, is political in nature and intended to weaken the confidence of the people in the Administration..."

Three other Committee Republicans -- Irving M. Ives (N.Y.), Prescott Bush (Conn.), and Frederick G. Payne (Maine) -- added to the majority report a statement that "it is our feeling that insufficient emphasis was placed on the confidence in the Eisenhower Administration as a factor which has strongly influenced the upward turn of stock prices."

Four Democrats -- John J. Sparkman (Ala.), Paul H. Douglas (Ill.), A.S. Mike Monroney (Okla.), and Wayne Morse (Ore.) -- protested that the majority report failed to criticize the Federal Reserve Board's delay in raising margin requirements for stock purchases.

MAJORITY PROPOSALS

The major recommendations of the majority report were to:

Compel companies whose stocks are traded "over-the-counter" to comply with the same regulations as do companies whose stocks are listed on the securities exchanges.

Obtain prompt and vigorous action by the Securities and Exchange Commission against "abuses" incident to the issue of "penny" stocks.

Urge the State Department and SEC to seek joint action with the Canadian government to stop the sale of worthless securities by "confidence men" operating across the Canadian border in violation of U.S. laws.

Further investigate other matters in relation to stock trading including --

Additional marginal buying curbs.

Proxy voting and the control of large corporations.

The separation of the functions of brokers and dealers.

Registration of investment advisers with the SEC.

The influence on the market of investments by large institutions and groups.

YALTA PAPERS

A subject that had for years been a bone of contention between Republicans and Democrats -- and later between elements in the Republican Party -- finally culminated March 16, 1955, in the release of the Yalta papers by the Department of State.

The papers comprised three parts: pre-conference documents included because of a gap in the published "foreign relations" series from 1939 to 1945; the Winston Churchill meeting with President Franklin D. Roosevelt at Malta, Feb. 2, 1945; and the meeting of Roosevelt, Churchill and Russian Premier Joseph Stalin at Yalta, Feb. 4-11, 1945. The Yalta section covered some 400 pages, the whole took 834 pages.

Immediate reactions showed that the release by no means settled the questions at issue. Both Republicans and Democrats charged the record was incomplete. Sens. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) and Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) complained of omissions. Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) said there were indications the papers had been "carefully culled" before release "for ammunition to be used not against the Communists but against" the Democratic Party.

(McCarthy on March 11 had introduced a resolution (S Res 75) urging the President to take steps to repudiate any secret agreements reached at Yalta. On March 16, in a Senate speech, McCarthy accused President Eisenhower of breaking a campaign promise to repudiate the agreements.)

Controversy centered on the decision of State Department officials to include side comments, in addition to minutes of the meetings, in the official publication. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles defended their inclusion because "they had previously been incorporated in authoritative memoirs and given wide publicity." He said a "very few casual or informal remarks" were omitted because they "might have done harm without adding anything of substance to the record."

CIRCUMSTANCES OF RELEASE

State Department release March 16 of the 400,000-word collation described as a "substantially correct" record of the 1945 Yalta Conference climaxed several days of sparring between the Department and Congress.

On March 14 the State Department announced that the record would not be made public "for reasons which involve our national security and our relations with other powers." At the same time the Department offered to send "confidential" galley proofs of the record to key committees and individuals on the Hill. Democratic committee chairmen, however, refused to accept the documents on that basis, protesting that they would be blamed for leaks which were bound to occur. News of the documents appeared in the "New York Times" before the official release.

CONGRESSIONAL COMMENT

Release of the Yalta papers provoked immediate comment from Congressmen and others:

March 17 -- Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) charged President Roosevelt with an "almost unpardonable error" in making concessions to the Russians. Capehart said the papers "will be very damaging to the Democrats."

Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) said the Administration was seeking ways to denounce sections of the agreement.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) said publication was "a very dangerous step...to satisfy the more vitriolic elements of the Republican Party."

Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said President Eisenhower had never studied the papers and was not consulted about their release.

March 18 -- Chairman James P. Richards (D S.C.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said if the Republicans should attempt to make political capital of the documents, "it is bound to hurt the efforts of Democrats to build up a cooperative (foreign) policy."

Secretary of State Dulles said the release should not be taken as any move toward the denunciation of the agreements.

March 19 -- Chairman Styles Bridges (R N.H.) of the GOP Policy Committee said he had instructed the Committee staff to prepare information from the Yalta documents for use by GOP speakers.

March 21 -- Paul Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, criticized the President for "permitting" release of the documents.

EISENHOWER'S VIEWS

President Eisenhower March 23 expressed his "earnest belief" that documents such as the Yalta papers ought to be published, but that released parts should deal with matters of political and military significance -- not "casual conversation." Referring to the Yalta documents, he said, "There is nothing...to be gained by going back 10 years (to show by hindsight) that someone may have been wrong, or someone may have been right."

COMMITTEE INQUIRY

On March 31 the Senate Foreign Relations Committee unanimously adopted a resolution by Wayne Morse (D Ore.) requesting Secretary of State Dulles to explain at a closed session the circumstances of the disclosure, steps taken to find the source of the "leak" that preceded official publication, steps taken to prevent a recurrence, and the wisdom of releasing as official papers "obviously unofficial notes, and even social conversations."

Committee action followed an exchange of letters between Sen. Humphrey and Assistant Secretary of State Thruston B. Morton, released by Humphrey March 30. Morton, replying to Humphrey's request for information, asserted that publication of the Yalta papers had helped win votes in France and Germany for the Paris agreements to arm West Germany. Concerning the British government's position on the release, Morton said British consent was "foreshadowed to the Secretary of State" on March 15 (the day the "New York Times" had received the release) and "confirmed on March 16".

Humphrey told the Senate April 1 that Morton's answer was "inadequate" and "a bit of effrontery."

Sens. Knowland and Bridges April 1 defended inclusion of informal remarks in the Yalta papers. Knowland also said he favored questioning Dulles about the manner in which the papers were released "because then we may be able to avoid this kind of snafu in the future."

DULLES TESTIMONY

COMMITTEE -- Senate Foreign Relations.

HEARING -- April 19 -- Secretary of State Dulles, in a statement presented during a closed Committee session, said Assistant Secretary of State Carl W. McCardle released the Yalta papers to the "New York Times" a day before they were released generally. "This involved an exercise by Mr. McCardle of a discretion that was his," Dulles said. "It involved no breach of security."

Dulles said he concluded by the time one copy was released that the British government had withdrawn its objections to publication and that publication would not hurt U.S. relations with its allies.

He defended inclusion of side comments in the official publication "which otherwise might have been omitted" because "they had previously been incorporated in authoritative memoirs and given wide publicity."

Morse said after the meeting that he concluded Dulles "acted in collusion with McCardle and James Reston (of the "New York Times") for the leak of these papers...The release...to the "New York Times" cannot be reconciled with fair play to the rest of the American press."

Humphrey said Dulles told the Committee that "in light of the times and circumstances of the Yalta Conference, he (Dulles) would not disagree with the decision" on Poland made at Yalta. Humphrey reported that "Dulles said he finds as Secretary of State that the agreements were advantageous to" the U.S.

Knowland, April 20 accused Humphrey of a "distorted and unfair interpretation" of Dulles' remarks, and said Humphrey was guilty of "a violation of the rules and precedents" of the Committee when he reported on Dulles' testimony.

REPUBLICAN SPEECHES

The Senate Republican Policy Committee March 30 provided Republican speakers with a memorandum on the Yalta documents. The memorandum attacked the Roosevelt Administration for its part at Yalta and emphasized the conference role of Alger Hiss, former State Department official convicted in 1950 of perjury in denying he gave secret documents to Communist agents.

According to the memorandum, the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt knew three months before Yalta that Russia would enter the Pacific war, yet he "gave in" to Russia on the Polish issue, "almost" helped Russia build a huge bomber force, gave the Kurile Islands to Russia over Navy protests, and "completely disregarded" information regarding the atomic bomb. The memorandum stated that Hiss was in charge of "all of the top secret papers" of the State Department prior to the conference.

Sen. John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) said March 31 that the GOP summary was an attempt to disgrace Roosevelt and the document was "replete with misrepresentations and distortions of facts." Sen. Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) said the memorandum was based on "myth."

ECONOMIC REPORT

A Congressional committee in 1955 held three weeks of hearings on President Eisenhower's Economic Report, which predicted high employment and production in the year. The joint Senate-House group, in a subsequent report, agreed that the economic picture had improved since 1954 but expressed regret that the President had not spelled out his view of the economic future more clearly.

President's Report

President Eisenhower Jan. 20 sent his Economic Report to Congress with the prediction of a "high and satisfactory level of employment and production" in 1955, and the promise of a "glorious economic future" that can be achieved by "wise management of our national household."

The President described 1954 as a year of "transition from contraction to recovery," and said it would "go down in history as one of our most prosperous years." He noted that the "vigor" of the recovery after the 1953 decline "holds out the promise" of continued economic expansion, and added that under a program of "fostering long-term economic growth," the nation could, within a decade, boost the current annual production level of $360 billion to $500 billion "or more."

But the President warned it was essential "to keep a close watch on financial developments" and said "continued economic recovery must not be jeopardized by overemphasis of speculative activity."

The President said speculative trends "usually become self-corrective before they become excessive," but pointed to the recent increase of stock margin requirements by the Federal Reserve Board as evidence that the government "was mindful of its great responsibility."

GOVERNMENT'S GOALS

"The core of economic expansion," the President declared, will continue to be "increases in productivity and in useful employment opportunities." He said the federal government would work toward these goals "by encouraging private initiative," and "curbing monopolistic tendencies."

The Economic Report included 33 recommendations to Congress and the States, many of which had been given in previous messages. (For listing of new proposals, see section on Legislative Requests.)

The President declared that his program to aid new and small business, spend more than ever before on research, free trade channels, encourage foreign investment, increase individual security, and expand public works, would go a long way toward "sustained economic progress." He said increased revenues and spending economies "should make possible next year another step in the reduction of taxes." He suggested that "Congress might then consider enacting a general, though modest" tax cut.

"While no changes in taxation are now recommended," the President declared, "there is a need for greater flexibility in the management of federal finances, and this requires an increase in the present statutory debt limit." He said the increase should be "large enough to provide the Treasury with the necessary latitude to do its job."

Referring to his request for an increase from 75 cents to 90 cents in the minimum hourly wage, the President noted that "a small and shrinking, but still significant, number of American families have cash incomes under $1,000 per family", and "must be considered poverty-stricken." These people, he said, lived mainly on small farms or in rural areas located in southern states.

The President declared that means of raising low incomes by "increasing the productivity of people" had been under study. He said a boost in the minimum wage would aid the "comparatively small number of workers who are at the fringes of competitive labor markets."

He added that 90 cents an hour was the "highest minimum wage that can be economically justified in present circumstances." Anything higher, he said, might cause lower production and substantial unemployment in several industries, and "would probably bring generally higher prices in its wake."

1954 DEVELOPMENTS

In a review of the economic state of the nation in 1954, the President cited these major developments:

The nation's output of goods and services dropped about 3 percent, but industrial production made a "strong recovery" in the latter part of the year, while construction activity was above the 1953 level.

"Crop production as a whole declined only three percent," and farm prices "fluctuated."

Personal income went up slightly.

Time lost as a result of industrial disputes was at a post-World War II low.

Unemployment reached a peak of 3,725,000 in March (5.8 percent of the civilian labor force), but average hourly earnings continued to rise. Employment increased and "unemployment declined much more than seasonally in the last three months of 1954."

Prices were generally stable during the year.

There was a "significant" $10.2 billion net increase in loans and investments of the commercial banking system.

Consumer installment credit was a contractive factor in the economy.

Legislative Requests

President Eisenhower asked Congress, in part, to:

Permit a regulated investment company, with the bulk of its assets in the form of tax-exempt securities, to "pass through" to its shareholders the tax-exempt status of income received from such securities.

Raise "substantially" the maximum fine that might be imposed for violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Consider the merits of share-account insurance and other measures to protect savings invested in credit unions.

Expand the Area Development Program of the Department of Commerce, which was designed to aid economically "depressed" communities.

Strengthen the Federal-State Employment Service.

Amend the District of Columbia Unemployment Insurance law to provide 26 weeks of benefits for qualified persons unemployed for that period, and review disqualification provisions.

Expand federal programs for research, fellowships, teacher training and related activities.

Increase the appropriation and establish a revolving fund for public works planning advances to states and municipalities.

Raise the insurance authorization of the Federal Housing Administration.

Permit national banks to make conventional real estate mortgage loans with maturities up to 20 years (in lieu of current 10-year limit), and to make construction loans with a maximum duration of about nine months (in lieu of current six-month limit).

Give the President "greater latitude" in the use of his power to vary, "in the light of economic conditions," the terms on which the federal government underwrites home mortgages.

REQUEST TO THE STATES

President Eisenhower asked the states to:

Review state and local tax-rate and debt limit laws, and, where advisable, to remove or relax barriers to local public investment.

Include under the unemployment insurance system state and local government workers, and employees of firms with fewer than four on the payroll, who were not then covered.

Revise unemployment insurance benefits to make the "great majority of covered workers" eligible for payments equal to at least half their regular earnings, and to lengthen the term of benefits to 26 weeks for qualified persons unemployed that long.

Take steps to relieve the classroom shortage.

Study metropolitan area problems, so that area-wide transit systems, sanitation systems, water supplies or educational facilities might be provided with maximum returns from public funds expended.

Expedite urban renewal plans to get federal aid.

Enact, where necessary, legislation to permit the writing of "open-end" mortgages.

ADVISERS' REPORT

The Council of Economic Advisers, in its annual report to the President, said that the federal government "is better prepared than previously to accelerate public construction, if the need for doing so should arise." The Council's report was included in the President's Economic Report to Congress.

The Council also cited "the need for improving our economic intelligence," and said it had "urged various statistical agencies of the federal government" to speed up and improve "the reporting of economic information."

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Joint (Senate-House) Committee on the Economic Report.

HEARINGS -- Jan. 24 - Feb. 16 on the President's Economic Report.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 24 -- In executive session, witnesses were Arthur F. Burns, chairman, and Neil H. Jacoby and Walter W. Stewart, members of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Jan. 26 -- A panel of 10 economists agreed that national output in 1955 would be better than in 1954 but only four thought it would exceed the 1953 peak. Six predicted heavier unemployment in 1955 than in 1954.

Martin Gainsbrugh, National Industrial Conference Board, said the President's Economic Report failed to point out that business recovery had not taken place in many non-speculative areas. Leon H. Keyserling, head of the Economic Advisers under President Truman, said "optimistic" forecasts of a three percent rise in output in 1955 "would not be nearly enough growth to reduce unemployment sufficiently, absorb new entries in the labor force, and keep up with advancing technology."

Jan. 27 -- During a panel discussion of the employment picture, Douglas Fraser, United Automobile Workers (CIO), said car manufacturers had started "another production race still more reckless than that of 1953" which, he said, made heavy unemployment later in 1955 inevitable. Fraser recommended enactment of measures to expand purchasing power, including higher income tax exemptions, social security and unemployment compensation; more construction of housing, schools and highways.

Solomon Barkin, Textile Workers (CIO), and Lester Thomas, United Mine Workers (Ind.), urged action to improve employment conditions in their industries.

BUDGET DIFFERENCES

Jan. 28. -- At another panel discussion, involving the government's fiscal policies, five economists said the projected budget deficit should be larger, one said the Administration's $2.4 billion deficit for fiscal 1956 was about right, and the last said the budget should be balanced. The witness expressing that view was Harley L. Lutz of the National Association of Manufacturers. He said the Administration's program "points toward the planned, and eventually the socialized, economy."

Those who expressed concern at the extent of unemployment and the need for more schools, civil defense and resource developments included Professors Walter W. Heller, University of Minnesota, John K. Galbraith, Harvard, William S. Vickrey, Columbia, and Harold M. Groves, University of Wisconsin.

Jan. 31 -- Winfield W. Riefler of the Federal Reserve, and Roy Reierson, Bankers Trust Company, New York, expressed concern lest the upturn in business conditions lead to "an unsound boom" and too much inflation.

But Professor Alvin Hansen of Harvard said "fear of inflation" was preventing full development of the economy. Herbert Stein of the Committee for Economic Development said credit controls should be eased rather than tightened.

Feb. 1 -- Discussing the threat of monopolies, A.D. Kaplan, Brookings Institution, said existing anti-trust laws were sufficient to curb unhealthy mergers. But Theodore K. Quinn, former General Electric Company vice president, called the current number of mergers "alarming" and proposed a drastic program to regulate "industrial giants."

Government regulation of certain industries, such as trucking, restricts competition and promotes monopoly,

Professor Walter Adams of Michigan State said. A member of the Attorney General's Committee to Study Antitrust Laws, Adams cited FCC allotment of TV channels and CAB assignment of air routes as other federal activities fostering monopoly.

Feb. 2 -- In a panel discussion of farm economics, John H. Davis of Harvard Business School and Murray D. Lincoln of the Cooperative League agreed that price support programs were not the answer for steady farm prosperity and urged expanding farm markets. Professor Murray R. Benedict said agriculture was in relatively good shape. Professor William H. Nicholls proposed a 17-point program to aid low-income farm families.

Feb. 3 -- With public works as the topic, witnesses discussed highways, school construction and conservation projects. Among panel members were Leland Olds, former FPC chairman currently with Energy Research Associates; Roland R. Renne, president, Montana State College; Joseph L. Fisher, Resources for the Future, Inc.; William G. Carr, National Education Association; William L.C. Wheaton, professor of city planning, University of Pennsylvania; and officials of Commerce, Interior and HEW Departments and the Army Engineers.

TRADE PROGRAM

Feb. 8 -- Willard L. Thorp, economist and former Assistant Secretary of State, said the President's trade and tariff program "faces in the right direction" but "falls far short of...statements of high purpose."

Jacob Viner, Princeton University economics professor, called the progran. "very insubstantial." O.R. Strackbein, chairman of the Nation-Wide Committee of Industry, Agriculture and Labor on Import-Export Policy, said the reciprocal trade program "has run out of magic."

Nathaniel Knowles, Jr., Commerce Department foreign trade expert, said the Administration contemplated that the "use of the peril point and the escape clause provisions will be fully utilized to assure adequate protection."

Feb. 9 -- Donald R. Belcher, assistant director, Bureau of the Budget, said the government planned to collect more complete statistical data on employment and unemployment. Robert J. Eggert, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., and Lazare Teper, research director for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (AFL), urged federal action to improve data on the labor force.

Feb. 10 -- CIO President Walter Reuther complained that the President's Economic Report did not mention "automation" -- the term describing electronics devices that replace people in jobs. Reuther said "automation" would "revolutionize production."

John A. Baker, of the National Farmers Union, also said the President's report ignored the unemployment problem created by "automation." Baker said evidence of "domestic distress" could be found in the fact that the monthly income of the average U.S. farm family dropped from $200 in 1952 to $150 in 1954. He said that under "the Eisenhower Administration's sliding scale (flexible price support) farm program a further drop to only $100 a month would be allowed."

BUSINESS VIEWS

Feb. 16 -- Henry G. Riter, III, National Association of Manufacturers president, agreed with the basic economic philosophy in the Economic Report. He said, however, there was a "pressing necessity" for corporate tax reduction and decried "the tendency toward continuous and indiscriminate expansion of government-sponsored retirement insurance." He said "signs are multiplying" that the economy was on the way upward.

Dr. Emerson P. Schmidt, economic research director of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., said the President's economic philosophy and policy "on the whole are admirable." But he criticized the public housing program as an inducement for "more and more people to look to the government for...their housing." He also opposed raising the minimum wage, expenditures for the Small Business Administration and the proposed International Finance Corporation, and other recommendations for the expenditure of federal funds.

Thomas Kennedy, United Mine Workers vice president, put much of the blame for the coal industry "being in bad shape" on residual oil imports. He said 165,000 men are idle in the coal fields.

Herschel D. Newsom, National Grange master, said agriculture also was below par economically. Farmers' income was about half that of "city and town people" in 1954, he said, adding that existing price supports should not be cut.

Don Mahon, National Brotherhood of Packinghouse Workers president, advocated social security benefits for the totally disabled, reduction from 65 to 60 of the age for retirement with full benefits, and federal legislation to raise unemployment insurance payments.

Frazar B. Wilde, research and policy committee chairman of the Committee for Economic Development and president of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co., generally agreed with the report, but said "it would be reckless" to assume that the U.S. no longer is subject to a recession.

COMMITTEE REPORT

The Joint Committee March 14 issued its report (S Rept 60) on the President's Economic Report. (The Senate Feb. 25 had granted the Committee an extension from March 1 for filing the document.)

In the report Republican and Democratic members unanimously agreed that the U.S. "economy has been improving since late in 1954," although they saw "elements of uncertainty" in the future. The unanimity held for 16 items before supplemental views were listed.

UNANIMOUS FINDINGS

There was agreement that:

"The nation has the economic capacity to meet our... security requirements...Every possible economic support" must be given to improvement of U.S. defense.

"...it is not enough just to maintain present levels of employment and production," since the "world situation makes it imperative that we have a strong and expanding economy under a system of free enterprise..."

The economic recession of 1954 "was partially caused" by "adjusting to lower levels of defense expenditures..."

"Employment and production have regained about one-half of the ground lost, and unemployment has receded about one-third" since late 1954. "There is, however, unevenness in this advance, and certain regions and industries continue to be in very serious economic straits."

"The President's Economic Report looks for a continued advance in general economic activity...witnesses... warned, however, that during the second half of the year, the advance may be less than during the first half."

"The elements of uncertainty...and the size of the adjustments which must be made...indicate the wisdom of seeking every means of strengthening our basic economic programs in the interests of long-run stability and growth...Federal government programs must be kept flexible."

"...our tax policy should...balance...the cash budget at maximum employment and production levels. We support...postponing the reduction in corporate and excise tax rates...We should improve the distribution of the tax burden...The majority support...adjustment in the tax structure at this time which, without reducing revenue, will increase consumer purchasing power. The minority...feel that it is premature to make adjustments now..."

"The President's recommendation for an increase in the federal debt limit" should be supported.

"...expanding consumption at home and abroad... offers the soundest approach to the farm problem" rather than "a policy of contraction of acreage...Expanding population...may...relieve our concern about surpluses..."

Public works should be increased "to meet the needs of a growing population, expanding economy, and national security...Financing should be direct from the Treasury, rather than from indirect authorities..."

"...an office of Coordinator of Public Works Planning...(should) be put into operation as soon as possible."

"The federal government should recognize its responsibility" to areas and industries "with distressed conditions which persist...even in an expanding economy... Much can be done through public works..., promoting research..., modifying the employment compensation programs..., loans, technical assistance, and...an expanded area development program..."

"...the nation's foreign trade program is particularly important" as part of the cold war. But in expanding trade, "it is necessary to move gradually and selectively because of the adjustment problems of both domestic workers and capital."

"...special attention should be given" to assure "the vigor and growth of small business..."

"...the government (should) improve its economic statistical programs."

"...the President (should) transmit (his) report...no later than Jan. 15...We regret the failure of the report to make a clear statement on the future needs of the economy...(and it) should have given a more complete appraisal of the agricultural situation and outlook" as well as "more extensive recommendations to meet the needs of distressed regions and industries."

MINORITY VIEWS

Seven Democratic Committeemen filed supplemental views which said the President's report was "less forthright and emphatic than the statistics in reporting the unevenness of the rise, and the numerous soft spots in the economy..." The view that "we are not out of the woods yet" was signed by Sens. Paul H. Douglas (Ill.), John J. Sparkman (Ala.), and Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Wyo.), and Reps. Wright Patman (Texas), Wilbur D. Mills (Ark.), Richard Bolling (Mo.), and Augustine B. Kelley (Pa.).

Patman, Bolling, Mills, and Kelley, in a separate view, criticized Administration fiscal policies as "being used to promote the interests of the lending and investing classes and a handful of giant corporations at the expense of the farmer, the small businessman, and employees."

Sen. Arthur V. Watkins (R Utah) was joined by Republican Sens. Ralph E. Flanders (Vt.), Barry Goldwater (Ariz.) and GOP Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott (Mich.) in disputing the Democratic claims. The Republicans asserted that the President's report presented "a balanced view of the condition of the economy...The facts do not justify the observations...that there exist certain overtones of the 1920's which are disturbing."

Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) said in his supplemental views that "the normal growth of our economy" was being restricted by existing tax rates. He called for "greater efforts" to keep government out of business.

TALBOTT INQUIRY

Communism and corruption continued to occupy the Senate Government Operations Committee's Permanent Investigations Subcommittee in 1955.

Under the Democratic leadership of John L. McClellan (Ark.), the Subcommittee that in 1953-54 under Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) made almost daily headlines started out in January, 1955 to re-investigate some 1954 cases: the discharge of Major Irving Peress (and the question of communism in the armed forces); and charges of Communist infiltration in defense plants.

But before the year was over, the issues which chiefly preoccupied the Subcommittee and which made the biggest headlines had to do with ethics, incompetence, and corruption. Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott and his business connections, too-costly grain elevators in Pakistan, corruption in the purchase of sailor hats: these were the issues of 1955.

Subcommittee members in 1955 were: McClellan, chairman; Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.); Stuart Symington (D Mo.); Sam J. Ervin, Jr. (D N.C.); McCarthy; Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.); and George H. Bender (R Ohio). Robert F. Kennedy was chief counsel.

The Government Operations Committee Jan. 18 unanimously adopted revised rules of procedure for its Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, designed to insure proper protection of witnesses. The new rules provided:

- Witnesses would be questioned only by Subcommittee members or "authorized staff personnel," would have legal counsel and access to official transcripts.
- Persons mentioned derogatorily could rebut the testimony or comment, and accusations against persons not present in closed session would be released only with consent of a committee majority.
- Committee members would receive 48-hour advance notice of meetings, public hearings could be blocked by unanimous objection of minority party members unless overruled by the full Committee, and the minority would have a voice in staff appointments.

On Jan. 25 the Committee voted an official ban on the holding of one-man hearings by the Permanent Investigations Subcommittee. Under the new rule, any two members of the Subcommittee would constitute a quorum for the purpose of taking testimony under oath. McClellan had promised the action when he became chairman.

BACKGROUND -- Rules had been an issue throughout 1953-54 under McCarthy. In July, 1953, the three Democrats on the Subcommittee left in protest when the majority voted to give McCarthy the sole right to hire and fire Subcommittee staff members.

The Democrats agreed to return the next January only after four changes had been voted in Subcommittee procedure. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp 344-5.)

REPORTS ON 1954 WORK

Three reports relating to the Subcommittee's work in 1954 under McCarthy's chairmanship were issued during 1955:

Jan. 10 -- A report covering investigations during the second session of the 83rd Congress which said "the Communist Party has successfully infiltrated national-defense industries and is in a position to acquire vital information concerning our military secrets and our military effectiveness." The report recommended that the Department of Defense prepare "adequate security regulations" to prevent employment of Communists in "establishments producing materials under the national-defense program regardless of whether the employment is in connection with classified work."

March 2 -- A report on investigations into alleged Communist activity at the Ft. Monmouth, N.J., radar laboratories. 1954's three Democratic Subcommittee members -- McClellan, Jackson and Symington--said they could accept neither the "credit or responsibility" for the report because they were absent from the Subcommittee from July 10, 1953, to Jan. 25, 1954, when the investigation took place.

March 3 -- A general report on activities in 1954.

Talbott Case

Investigations by the Subcommittee of Secretary of Air Force Harold E. Talbott's outside business connections led in August, 1955 to his resignation. Talbott had continued as partner in the New York industrial engineering firm of Paul B. Mulligan & Co. after taking the Air Force post in 1953 and received $132,032 in profits during his first two years in the Pentagon. The inquiry centered on his use of Air Force stationery to write letters from his office, and phone calls from his office relating to new business for Mulligan.

While the probe was pending, President Eisenhower told a news conference that Talbott's private business activities raised questions not of legality but of ethics. He said the actions of officials of his Administration must be "impeccable, both from the standpoint of law...and the standpoint of ethics."

Talbott submitted his resignation Aug. 1, reportedly on advice from the White House and Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson. Mr. Eisenhower accepted the resignation, calling the decision "the right one" and praising Talbott's performance of his official duties.

ORIGINS OF PROBE

Talbott was confirmed by the Senate Feb. 4, 1953, after discussion in the Armed Services Committee of disposition of his financial holdings and curtailment of his business activities. (See CQ Almanac, Vol, IX, 1953, p. 571.)

McClellan announced on July 15, 1955, that the Subcommittee was trying to discover what, if any, outside business interests Talbott had which might conflict with his official duties. McClellan said July 18 that Talbott had been questioned during a closed-door "informal conference."

Talbott July 18 said: "I have no apologies of any sort to offer for any of my business associations. They have been proper and ethical..." On July 21, he asked the Subcommittee to hold public hearings "immediately" so that "the public may have a complete understanding and the accurate information" about the propriety of his outside business interests.

Hearings

The Subcommittee held hearings July 21-27 into the business interests of Talbott.

TESTIMONY -- July 21 -- McCarthy -- "As I have looked over the material...very carefully, it doesn't impress me that the Secretary has done anything at all that anyone would not do."

Talbott presented a 1953 letter to Mulligan (which he had mentioned to the Armed Services Committee during hearings on his confirmation) in which he proposed that he "be considered in the nature of a special or limited partner in the firm...Should the firm secure clients whose business in your opinion is predominatly in the area of procurement responsibilities of the Secretary of the Air Force, they shall be handled as a special account and be segregated completely from the other business of the firm...With respect to such special accounts I shall receive no income or compensation whatever."

Talbott added, "We have never really put a special partnership into effect because none of the companies that Mulligan did business with during the years of 1953, 1954, and so far in 1955 are primarily defense contractors or defense builders....I gave up a great deal of income to come down here. Therefore, I was very anxious to retain my interest in Mulligan on account of the income which I felt I needed..."

Talbott offered to terminate his partnership with Mulligan as of Aug. 1 if "you believe it to the advantage of our United States Air Force." He agreed that he had received profits from work done by the Mulligan Co. with the Avco Manufacturing Co., a firm doing 50 percent of its business with the government. He would not have accepted his share of these profits had he known that Avco was doing even 25 percent of its business with the government, he said.

Talbott said there was "no question that I have tried to be helpful to Mulligan," but he denied using his position to influence or attempt to influence any company doing business with the government to make a contract with the Mulligan company.

Bender -- "It would be a desirable thing if he would divest himself of this interest, not because of any impropriety, but because of his willingness to do so."

MULLIGAN'S TESTIMONY

July 25 -- Paul B. Mulligan, Talbott's business partner, said a "special partnership" arrangement for Talbott had never been made effective. He said Talbott continued as full partner after taking the Air Force post and received $132,032 in profits during his first two years in the Pentagon.

Mulligan said he had not used Talbott's name or position to seek business, but McClellan produced a Mulligan-prepared form letter for prospective customers in which Talbott, as "Secretary of the Air Force," was named as connected with the company. Mulligan said "Secretary of the Air Force" was merely used to identify Talbott, not to influence prospective clients.

Mulligan said his company had 47 clients, three of whom did some work for the Defense Department. The Subcommittee counsel listed seven more Mulligan clients with Defense Department contracts. Mulligan said he made "no specific inquiry" as to the relation of clients with the Defense Department. Any "mistakes" which had been made were his responsibility as the active partner, he added.

PROPRIETY QUESTIONED BY RCA

Samuel Ewing, attorney for Radio Corporation of America, Camden, N.J. testified that Talbott had actively sought a contract between RCA and the Mulligan Co. after RCA doubted the propriety of such a contract.

Ewing said he had received a call on Jan. 4 from Mulligan asking him "how matters stood." Ewing replied he was still waiting for an opinion on the question of propriety from a lawyer in Dayton, Ohio to whom Mulligan had referred him. Later in the day, Ewing received a call from Washington "from a man who identified himself as the general counsel of the Air Force, Mr. John A. Johnson. He said that he had understood that RCA was troubled about this proposed contract with Mulligan & Co., and that he was prepared to write a letter opinion and give it to RCA stating that he saw no legal reason why the contract could not be entered into..." Then Secretary Talbott came on the wire, listing "12 or 15...companies that he said were doing work for the Air Force that had contracts with the Mulligan company."

Ewing said he told Talbott he was "very much surprised by this telephone call;" that he had reviewed the matter with the attorney he thought was representing Talbott in his Mulligan & Co. interest, Murray Smith, and that he had never heard from him.

Ewing said Talbott replied "something to this effect: ... (that) Murray Smith is just a lawyer out in Dayton; he doesn't know what is going on around here, and Mr. Johnson (Air Force counsel) is representing me in this matter."

RCA "HIGH AND MIGHTY"

Ewing also quoted Talbott as saying that "if all of these other companies could take contracts with Mulligan & Co., why was RCA acting so high and mighty?"

July 26 -- John A. Johnson describing his telephone conversation of Jan. 4 with Ewing, said he told the lawyer, "I was prepared to give Secretary Talbott an opinion to the effect that his retention of a partnership interest in the Paul B. Mulligan Co. as disclosed to the Senate Armed Services Committee did not violate any statute."

Johnson described a Jan. 5 meeting in his office with Loftus E. Becker, a Washington attorney representing RCA, who "indicated that RCA would only be satisfied with an opinion from the Attorney General or an opinion from the general counsel of the Air Force specifically concurred in by the Attorney General," Herbert Brownell, Jr.

At Talbott's request, Johnson discussed the matter with the Attorney General, who "expressed no disagreement with the legal conclusion stated in the memorandum. However (he) said that he would like to take the matter under consideration (and) that I would expect to hear from him in a day or two and that in the meantime I should take no further action in the matter. The Attorney General did not get in touch with me, and I have had no further discussion of the matter with him."

Johnson defended his action, saying he thought it proper to advise the Air Force Secretary whether any "violation of the conflict-of-interest statutes" was involved. When asked by McClellan whether Johnson's advice had been sought on "the propriety of taking this action, assuming that it was legal," Johnson said it had not; "the consultation was strictly a legal one."

George Gelly, a representative of Douglas Aircraft Co., said Talbott mentioned his Mulligan connection at a Pentagon conference. Donald Douglas, Sr., and Donald Douglas, Jr., were present and seemed surprised that Talbott had brought up the subject, Gelly added.

Talbott said his mention of the Mulligan partnership at the conference was prompted by his general interest in some recent aircraft industry management studies.

Reviewing his Jan. 4 telephone talk with Ewing, Talbott said he "could not have" described the firms he listed as defense contractors, as most of them were not.

He said Johnson was not acting as his personal attorney when he visited Brownell, but was representing "the Secretary of the Air Force in a matter of propriety."

July 27 -- Talbott answering a question from Sen. Jackson as to how he had disposed of certain stocks when he took the Air Force post, said that he gave his Chrysler stock to his four children, sold his Talbott Corporation stock (a family owned corporation) to his children, and disposed of the rest on the open market.

TALBOTT PARTNERSHIP TO END

Talbott announced he had taken steps to end his partnership with Mulligan. "When I came down here, I divested myself of securities which have since appreciated at about three quarters of a million dollars. These divestments meant giving up an income of $100,000 a year. I was glad to do it...I mention it only as a fact in passing.

"I have never used my position as Secretary to pressure a living soul to give the Mulligan Company any business...In retrospect, however, I now see that I was mistaken in permitting myself to make phone calls or write letters about the Mulligan company....I really doubt that I have given the Mulligan company and my other private affairs two and a half days out of the two and a half years that I have been in Washington. My interest in the company has never influenced me in the slightest degree in the execution of my duties as Secretary of the Air Force."

Chairman McClellan, after praising Talbott for his complete cooperation with the investigation, announced he had telephoned the Douglases, who said Talbott had never "directly or indirectly" solicited business from them for the Mulligan firm. They said Talbott had told them he was taking $10,000 a month out of the business.

TALBOTT RESIGNS

After Talbott's resignation was announced Aug. 1, Sen. Mundt said the resignation "dramatizes the new standard of ethics and propriety" of the Eisenhower Administration. Sen. Bender said it would "serve notice" that the GOP Administration never would have "a reputation for the scandals which marked" the prior Democratic Administration. Sens. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) and Wayne Morse (D Ore.) said Talbott should be queried further regarding his business connections.

Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler Aug. 2 denounced the Administration for failing to take action against the "unethical conduct" of Talbott. Butler accused President Eisenhower of sidestepping an "unpleasant responsibility" with his "friendly acceptance" of Talbott's resignation and said Mr. Eisenhower's handling of the matter "makes a mockery" of the President's campaign pledge to have uncompromising honesty in government. "The new rule seems to be 'don't get caught' or 'if you do get caught, we'll let you resign,'" Butler said.

On Aug. 4 the Permanent Investigations Subcommittee said its investigation had been "satisfactorily resolved" by Talbott's resignation.

Talbott was awarded the Navy's Distinguished Public Service Award and the highest civilian award of the Defense Department, the Medal of Freedom, at a ceremony Aug. 12, the day before he left office.

Pakistan Grain Elevators

Public hearings before the Permanent Investigations Subcommittee in March and April, 1955, disclosed a case in which the Foreign Operations Administration awarded a contract for the construction of grain elevators in Pakistan to the highest of five bidders. The Subcommittee clashed with FOA Administrator Harold E. Stassen over the appearance of FOA witnesses and requests for documents.

As a result of the hearings, Stassen announced May 3 that the contracts had been cancelled and that new bids would be sought, with the company involved barred from making any.

Hearings

Hearings were held March 31 - April 15, and May 3, on FOA bids for construction of three grain elevators in Pakistan.

TESTIMONY -- March 31 -- Leonard B. Saccio, FOA assistant general counsel, informed the Subcommittee that Stassen would not allow questioning of FOA employees about the project unless an FOA lawyer or Stassen himself was present.

Sen. Symington said FOA was negotiating with a California company to build the elevators although two Missouri companies made lower bids.

Howard Morrison of FOA's Agriculture Division said the California company had submitted the highest bid and that negotiations were carried on with it contrary to his recommendations. Morrison said Stassen did not want subordinates in his agency held accountable for decisions that were his own.

STASSEN SUBPENAED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee unanimously adopted a resolution to subpena Stassen to appear with "every record, every document" pertaining to the project. Another motion adopted provided that witnesses from either civilian or military agencies might be entitled to representation by counsel, but that the counsel could not come from the agency under examination.

April 1 -- Subcommittee Counsel Robert F. Kennedy questioned FOA staff members Morrison, W.S. Middaugh, and Virgil Pettit in a closed session. The witnesses were accompanied by a private attorney. There were no Senators present.

Kennedy said Stassen had been served "personnally" with a subpena to appear before the Subcommittee. Stassen said he refused to accept the subpena because it was "superfluous" as he already had agreed voluntarily to appear.

April 4 -- Chairman McClellan and Stassen held a closed meeting which, McClellan said, "made progress toward more harmonious relations." He said that a "full scale investigation" of the construction project would be continued. Stassen said there had been "a general understanding on a fair way to proceed" with the investigation.

TESTIMONY -- April 6 -- Stassen said he would reject all old bids and call for new ones on the Pakistan project so as to continue FOA's record of operation without "the slightest breath of scandal." Stassen said his agency had requested "design bids" and had based its choice on what it considered the most suitable design for the money involved.

He declined to give the Subcommittee 10 documents relating to construction of the elevators until he had reviewed them to judge if they should be made public. McClellan said the documents would be subpenaed if Stassen did not produce them soon.

McCarthy accused Stassen of lying twice under oath about McCarthy's manner of conducting past investigations of the Subcommittee.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- McClellan April 7 announced that Stassen had agreed to give the Subcommittee "a vast majority" of the documents requested and would submit to McClellan for personal inspection "the very few others" Stassen thought the Subcommittee should not see.

DOCUMENTS PRODUCED

The two men announced April 12 they had reached a "thorough understanding" on their disagreement over Congressional investigating powers. At a closed conference, McClellen said, Stassen turned over to him all but two of the 22 documents the Subcommittee had requested, and showed him the other two. Stassen said he planned to employ new engineers for the project and award the construction job to the lowest bidder. McClellan said the Subcommittee would proceed with public hearings.

TESTIMONY -- April 14 -- McClellan announced that "difficulties in getting information" from FOA had been "substantially resolved, satisfactorily to the Committee."

Robert Pinner, a project engineer for FOA and also an employee of the Ralph M. Parsons Co., of Washington, D.C., asked and received permission to change testimony he had previously given the Subcommittee. Pinner said some of his testimony was "not accurate." A few hours after this admission, Pinner was dismissed by the Parsons Co. Another witness, James W. Bryan of Los Angeles, labelled Pinner's testimony as "false."

Alfred E. Poulsen of the Agricultural Construction Co. of Los Angeles, the successful bidder for the FOA project, said he got inside information from Pinner on the construction job but swore "no pay-off" was involved. Poulsen contradicted Pinner's testimony that he had not contacted Poulsen while in Pakistan. He said that Pinner had sent him "four, five or six letters" from Pakistan giving him information about the project. He said the letters detailed how much money the government was budgeting for construction and equipment of the elevators.

William J. Herron, chairman of the board of the Agricultural Construction Co., said the firm's only assets were the $1,000 necessary for incorporation of the company in Delaware and the designs for the grain project.

Poulsen said the company was set up to operate in California, but McClellan read a letter from the California secretary of state which said there was no record in California of the Agricultural Construction Co.

April 15 -- Pinner said he "could have and apparently did" give information about changes in the Pakistan project to Poulsen. Pinner had testified previously that he had not contacted Poulsen about the FOA project.

May 3 -- At the final hearing Stassen told the Subcommittee its investigation had disclosed an "effort to play favoritism" in awarding the contract. He said he had barred those involved from another chance to bid on the project.

GI Hat Procurement

The Subcommittee in 1955 investigated alleged irregularities and a reported $50,000 bribe in the awarding of government contracts by the Armed Services Textile and Procurement Agency. As a result of the hearings, a Navy contract for caps was terminated and the company involved was placed on the Navy's list of "debarred, ineligible, and suspended contractors." An Air Force officer accused of accepting a $50,000 bribe was allowed to resign under conditions "other than honorable" without prejudice to possible action by the Department of Justice.

Hearings

Testimony was taken Jan. 28, Feb. 21, March 4, May 18-26, June 1-11, June 23 and July 19 on alleged graft in certain operations of the Armed Services Textile and Procurement Agency (ASTAPA).

TESTIMONY -- May 18 -- McClellan said the Subcommittee was "confronted with charges of graft and corruption."

Melvin Carlin and Ruth Picoult of Bonita Originals, Inc., New York City, told of money given to government employees who aided their firm in getting contracts. Mrs. Picoult said Marvin Rubin, a New York City manufacturers' agent, had instructed her to make several payments. Rubin said he made loans to government employees but made no other payments.

Julius Goldman, an inspector at the U.S. Navy Clothing Depot in Trenton, N.J., said he got money from Rubin "as an advance on the job" he discussed with him every week. Goldman said he violated regulations forbidding an inspector to have outside dealings with contractors.

May 19 -- Rubin said again he had never "paid a payoff" to government workers. Jerome Schlesinger, former Quartermaster Corps auditor, admitted Rubin had paid his expenses to Puerto Rico. Schlesinger said he had done nothing "detrimental to the government."

Joseph G. Porreca, a former Quartermaster inspector, said he had lied under oath when he denied he had received a home freezer from Rubin. He said he had never received cash payments from Rubin. He said he had lied in a closed committee meeting because he "was scared to death."

CASH TO GOVERNMENT WORKERS

May 24 -- Leon M. Levy, a partner in Bonita Originals, said he gave $6,699.94 in cash and gifts to government employees involved in three contracts he carried out for the armed forces in 1952 and 1953.

He said most of the money went to Maj. Eric C. Farnell, former chief of the clothing branch of the Army Quartermaster Corps in New York City; David Pollack, Mrs. Mella Hort, and Joseph Porreca, former ASTAPA officials in New York City. He also said he paid a $250 medical bill for Air Force Capt. Raymond Wool, who was in charge of one government contract, and that Wool was supposed to get an additional $3,500 for another deal that fell through.

Knowing he was wrong in making the payments, Levy said he turned the money over to Marvin Rubin in the belief he would be ruined financially unless the government workers were "taken care of."

Pollack confessed he had lied under oath in a previous closed committee hearing but insisted that "never in my life" had he received any payment from Levy or anyone representing him. He said he lied when he denied ever having had a close association with Rubin, and admitted that he had "leaked" inside information about Army contracts to Rubin.

May 25 -- Mrs. Hort said she tried to recover "around $30,000 or so" in overpayments to Harry Lev of the Mid-City Uniform Cap Co. of Chicago, but was told by Farnell and David Oshiver, a civilian ASTAPA official, not to be a "crusader."

She admitted receiving gifts for herself and her children from Rubin and Lev, but denied that $2,000 received by her and her husband from Lev was a gift. She said the money was an investment in a chemicals firm her husband and Lev were to form. She denied any attempt to blackmail Lev for $15,000 and accused the Subcommittee staff of "browbeating" her in an effort to make her give false testimony.

Farnell swore that any accusations against him were "a lie." William Ienni, a former Army inspector at a Bonita Originals plant in Puerto Rico, denied ever having received a "wage" of $50 a week from Leon Levy. He said he rejected two batches of sailor hats, samples of which he sent to Rubin with a request that Rubin get a ruling on whether they were acceptable. Rubin sent back word that Porreca said the hats were acceptable, but Ienni conceded that Rubin may never have consulted Porecca.

DIARY REVELATIONS

May 26 -- The Subcommittee released closed-door testimony taken from Levy Jan. 28, 1955, in which the New York City manufacturer said he had been told by Rubin that Air Force Capt. Wool received a $50,000 payoff on a Navy contract in 1953. Levy said Wool got the money from Chicago manufacturer Harry Lev. In a diary kept by Levy, he also said Mrs. Hort demanded $15,000 from Lev to keep her from revealing that Lev owed the government about $30,000.

June 1 -- Capt. Wool, former ASTAPA contracting officer in New York, under oath denied having received a $50,000 bribe to swing a $2 million Navy contract to Harry Lev.

Wool admitted he had filed fraudulent income tax returns in 1951, 1952, and 1953. The returns showed a dress shop his wife had operated had lost $2,175 during the three-year period. "There was some profit" from the shop, Wool said, adding he had used part of it to make a $10,500 payment on a home. Much of the home payment and 1953 bank deposits of $2,560 came from an iron box where he hoarded savings, he said.

Wool also denied his wife had received $5,000 from Lev. Wool said his wife had repaid, without his knowledge, a $5,000 loan from Patsy Luciano, a Madison, N.J., businessman. Luciano later testified he had never lent the Wools a bulk sum.

Another witness, Lt. Leo L. Kornfeld, formerly of the Navy Clothing Supply Office, Brooklyn, said he had made "a very grave error" in letting Lev and Marvin Rubin pay his hotel bill and other expenses on four trips to Puerto Rico, where Lev operated a manufacturing plant. Kornfeld also testified Lev had offered him $15,000 a year to manage the Puerto Rico plant, but he had decided to remain in the Navy.

Harry Shargel, assistant chief of the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot's legal office, said Lev had been allowed to deviate from government specifications, thereby saving Lev thousands of dollars in such processes as packaging and scrap disposal.

Hyman Serebransky, chief legal officer of the Philadelphia Quartermaster Inspection Service, testified the Navy still was pressing claims of about $100,000 against Lev based on deviations and other disputed matters.

PROFIT ON DRESS SHOP DOUBTED

June 3 -- Wool again said he had falsified his income tax returns by showing that a dress shop owned by him and his wife operated at a loss. Two former employees in the shop, however, said the shop did not do enough business to pay the rent. The witnesses challenged Wool's statement that $16,000 he said he kept in an iron cash box was a secret profit from the shop.

Showing Wool an affidavit from the purchaser of the shop who said the business "did not seem to be a very profitable operation," McClellan suggested that Wool said he had filed false income tax statements to conceal the source of the money. Wool denied this.

June 7 -- Hyman Serebransky said Lev received a government contract at a higher figure than he had bid.

David Oshiver called "untrue" a statement by one of his former aides that he had helped change a government contract held by Lev, on which Lev made several thousand dollars. Mrs. Mella Hort, the former aide, said Oshiver and Wool told her "not to meddle" and not to become a "crusader" when she opposed the change in the contract. Oshiver told the Committee he had received "nothing whatsoever" in payoffs.

BRIBE DENIED

Lev testified that he had never paid Wool $50,000 or any other bribe. He said he wasn't aware he had received a government contract at a higher price than he had bid, and gave the Subcommittee a "restitution" check for the sum he was alleged to have gained. Lev said the Quartermaster agency had made "an honest mistake" but added "it doesn't excuse me for accepting it."

June 8 -- Lev said he had given more than $2,000 worth of smoked sturgeon to a long list of people involved in military procurement but said he did not term this a "gift." He admitted that to "gain tax exemption" he had represented himself as a resident of Puerto Rico in 1954 and 1955.

(The Air Force announced it had filed court martial charges against Wool. The announcement said Wool had been accused of falsification of travel vouchers and of accepting gifts and gratuities "for services rendered.")

June 9 -- Lev said he had been able to "guarantee" in advance that government procurement officers would approve a change in specifications for an Air Force cap contract with his company, but he insisted that there was nothing wrong about this. Lev said he could not understand why Wool had court martial charges filed against him and denied again that he ever paid bribes to Wool.

McClellan said evidence indicated Lev saved $30,000 or more through the packaging arrangements. Either there was the "grossest inefficiency and incompetency" on the part of the military procurement officers, he added, "or there was something that went beyond...and amounted to finagling."

June 10 -- Lev denied getting advance information on the $2 million naval hat contract in 1953, denied he was awarded the contract without having a plant to carry it out, denied bribing a contracts administrator, and denied asking Charles J. Meise, a Singer Sewing Machine Co. representative, to pre-date an order for machinery.

TESTIMONY DISPUTED

Meise swore Lev placed his order on May 10, 1953, but asked that it be dated May 1. McClellan said Lev knew about the contract before invitations to bid were sent out on April 23, 1953.

Henry B. Vining, a Navy inspector at a Lev Puerto Rican plant, said he did not knowingly allow any defective caps to pass his inspection, but he said he now knew he had been dealing with what he called "sharpies." He said he had repayed Lev's associate, Maurice Ades, for money Ades spent for Vining's hotel bill. But an inspector for the General Accounting Office said he had been unable to find any record of Vining's repayments.

June 11 -- Lev swore he could not remember how he spent $213,924.08 in cash in 1952 and 1953, but he said none of it went for bribes. He said he would file a statement showing where the money went. He repeated denials of ever having paid any money to Wool.

June 23 -- Sol Schlesinger, proprietor of the Ideal Uniform Cap Co. of New York, denied he ever paid $100,000 to Col. Louis Shirley, former contract officer in New York City, and to two of Shirley's civilian aides to get a 1950 uniform cap contract. Schlesinger, however, declined to permit Subcommittee investigators to check his records lest evidence be found that "might tend to incriminate" him.

Shirley denounced as a "myth" any suggestion that he ever received a bribe. He denied there was anything unusual in a June 18 meeting with Schlesinger.

David Spatt, a former civilian aide to Shirley, said he never "took 5 cents" in bribes from anyone, and offered a detailed report on his finances in addition to access to all his records.

ACTION -- June 29 -- The Subcommittee released a letter from Secretary of Navy Charles S. Thomas in which Thomas said the Navy was terminating a contract with Schlesinger and placing his company on the Navy's list of "debarred, ineligible, and suspended contractors."

TESTIMONY -- July 19 -- Michael Weintraub, former Army inspector, said his life had been threatened and swore that Harry Lev tried to bribe him "many times." Weintraub said he made Lev "toe the mark" in complying with specifications even after Anthony Porreca, inspector in charge, suggested he "play ball" with Lev.

A Subcommittee investigator read a statement he said Hyman Roskin of St. Louis, a floor manager in Lev's plant, signed July 26, three or four days before he died. In the statement, Roskin said Lev chose his own inspectors and never had his caps rejected. Roskin also accused Lev of having paid $4,000 to "certain parties" to find out the sealed bid of another company. Former Army Col. Vere Painter was mentioned in the statement as having helped Lev become a millionaire on taxpayers' money.

Painter told reporters Roskin's statement linking him with illegal dealings with Lev was "a lie." Painter said he had "helped Lev in a legitimate way, and in no other way."

Lev said testimony linking him to bribes had "ruined" him. "I am no more a millionaire," he said. He attributed Roskin's statement to a grudge. Lev said Roskin was "always in trouble with gambling" and had "double crossed me and I asked him to resign."

Lev produced a financial statement to explain $213,924.08 in cash spent during 1952 and 1953. Lev said his transactions totaled only $203,000, with most of the money going to relatives as gifts. Subcommittee Counsel Kennedy said the statement actually only accounted for $134,600.

Before recessing the hearings, Subcommittee Chairman McClellan ordered Lev to produce the addresses of persons mentioned in his financial statement and the notes on which the statement was based.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- The Air Force July 22 waived court martial charges against Capt. Wool and allowed him to resign under conditions "other than honorable." The announcement noted that the action "in no wise handicaps" the Department of Justice from proceeding against Wool.

Peress Case

On Jan. 24 the Permanent Investigations Subcommittee voted unanimously to make a new investigation of the Army's handling of the discharge of Maj. Irving Peress. The Peress case was the subject of controversial hearings in 1954.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Investigation of Army-McCarthy Dispute." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, pp. 343ff.)

Peress, a N.Y. dentist who served 13 months in the Army, was honorably discharged on Feb. 2, 1954 almost simultaneously with the release of a letter dated Feb. 1, 1954, from Sen. McCarthy to Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens asking Peress' court-martial. Peress had testified before McCarthy on Jan. 30 in New York and had invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked about Communist activities.

The Peress hearings kicked off a series of disputes between McCarthy and the Army which culminated, in April, 1954, in extended televised public hearings on countercharges filed by the antagonists.

One of the issues of the Peress hearings was McCarthy's treatment of Army witnesses. After clashes between McCarthy and Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, Secretary Stevens ordered Zwicker not to appear before McCarthy.

Stevens conceded, in a March 12, 1955 speech that the Army mishandled the Peress case but said there were no "traitors" involved.

Hearings

The Subcommittee held hearings March 15-31 on the promotion and discharge of Irving Peress and issued a report on the case July 14.

TESTIMONY -- March 15 -- McClellan, presenting a letter from Army Secretary Stevens, said the Army was "unwilling to disclose all the facts" about the Peress case.

Maj. Floyd E. Van Sickle, Jr., said that in approving Peress for promotion to major in 1953 he inadvertently "overlooked" a notation on Peress' personnel card that indicated an investigation of the dentist was then underway.

March 16 -- Former Maj. Curtis R. Kirkland admitted he erred in failing to note that Peress did not answer a loyalty question on his application form in 1952. Kirkland said he, with Van Sickle, had "flagged" five other cases of medical applicants who cited the Fifth Amendment on the loyalty question.

Lt. Col. Ronald F. Thomas described how an Army intelligence report forbidding Peress' transfer from any post followed the dentist from New York to Texas to the West Coast to New Jersey. He said Peress' discharge was recommended on April 21, 1953, and not carried out until Feb. 2, 1954.

Lt. Col. James N. Anders of Army Intelligence said the delay in part was a result of the Subcommittee's 1953 Monmouth investigation, which took "almost 100 percent" of his unit's time.

DISCHARGE RECOMMENDED

March 17 -- Lt. Col. Chester T. Brown, intelligence officer at Camp Kilmer, N.J., said Peress' promotion was granted over his disapproval. He said he waited five months before taking the case to Brig Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, camp commander, because he expected the First Army or the Pentagon to act on his recommendation that Peress be discharged.

Lt. Col. Samuel A. Gordon (ret.), Brown's predecessor at Kilmer, said he called Peress' case to Brown's attention but nevertheless was admonished by the Army for negligence.

Maj. Vernon McKenzie of the Surgeon General's Office said he protested Peress' promotion. Defense Department counsel Wilber M. Brucker and Stephen N. Jackson said Peress' promotion was required under a law in effect in 1953.

March 18 -- Col. Ruluff F. Leverich, chief dental surgeon at Camp Kilmer, and Peress' former superior, said he had kept close watch on Peress, at the request of the post intelligence officer, and found nothing subversive in his activities.

March 22 -- Maj. Gens. Daniel D. Strickler and Miller B. White said an Army personnel board's proposal that Peress be given a "substandard" discharge was "misinterpreted" by subordinate Army officers. They also said that a subordinate had "edited" the board's decision and not submitted it for final review.

March 23 -- Brig. Gen. Zwicker said James N. Juliana, an aide of McCarthy, did not tell the truth when he said Zwicker withheld information in a public hearing conducted by McCarthy. Lt. Col. Walter Weible said he never recommended an honorable discharge for Peress but admitted he "overlooked" a step that might have blocked it.

March 24 -- Secretary Stevens said he "never heard" of Peress until the dentist was out of the Army but did not approve of his receiving an honorable discharge.

WHITE HOUSE CONSPIRACY DENIED

John G. Adams, the Army's chief counsel, denied McCarthy's charge that he had "conspired" with White House aides to block Senate investigation of the Peress case. Adams said he would have ordered dishonorable discharge for Peress had he known all the facts in the case and had he seen transcripts of closed hearings which McCarthy refused to give the Army. Adams said there were "no grounds" for a court martial of Peress on Feb. 1, 1954, when the discharge was ordered.

March 31 --Two former aides to the Subcommittee, C. George Anastos and Miss Mary Morrill, said that Zwicker gave them information from secret Army files naming Peress as a security risk. (Zwicker said March 23 that he did not.) Sen. McCarthy said Zwicker "ought not to be allowed to get out of this lightly.... It seems to be a clearcut case of perjury."

ACTION -- March 25 -- Concluding it was Army "red tape" that gave Peress an honorable discharge, the Subcommittee announced it would send the hearing record to the Justice Department to determine if perjury had been committed by any of the witnesses, as well as to determine if grounds existed for prosecuting Peress on charges of falsifying an Army form.

REPORT RELEASED

The Subcommittee July 14 filed a report (S Rept 856) criticizing Army handling of the Peress case and recommending changes in Army procedures. It cited "48 errors of more than minor importance" and said the Army's failure to make procedural changes until after the case became an incident of national interest was "inexcusable."

The Subcommittee concluded that Peress' promotion and honorable discharge were the result of "individual errors in judgment, lack of proper coordination, ineffective administration procedures, inconsistent application of investigating regulations, and excessive delays."

Sen. Bender, in a separate opinion, said the Subcommittee erred in not ruling on "the purpose of the investigation into the Peress matter...(the question) whether there existed any subversive collusion or Communist conspiracy in the Army.... A great hue and cry continued for nearly a year for identity of the Communist conspirators and the 'silent Communist master of the Pentagon' who 'protected' and 'covered up' the affairs of this 'fifth-amendment Communist'....

"Not one iota of evidence was revealed to indicate any subversion, collusion, or Communist conspiracy concerned with the handling by the military of the Peress matter.... I think it is of paramount importance that this Subcommittee should assure the people of this country that no Communist influence was found in the Army."

Defense Plants Inquiry

The Subcommittee resumed in 1955 consideration of alleged Communist infiltration in defense industries, with hearings in January and May.

A citation for contempt of Congress was made in February, 1955, as a result of the Subcommittee's hearings on this subject in 1954.

The parent Government Operations Committee Jan. 18 asked the Senate to cite for contempt Miss Diantha Hoag of Buffalo, N.Y., who had been questioned in executive session Aug. 6, 1954. In testimony made public Jan. 4, 1955, Miss Hoag, though swearing she had "never engaged in espionage or sabotage," pleaded the Fifth Amendment in refusing to say whether she had passed on secret information to persons she knew were Communists. She was employed at a Westinghouse plant in Cheektowaga, N.Y.

The Senate Feb. 4, by unanimous voice vote, cited Miss Hoag (S Res 31) for contempt of Congress. (See p. 393.)

EX-COMMUNISTS TESTIFY

HEARINGS -- Jan. 3 and May 10 on Communist activities in defense plants.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 3 -- Miss Mary S. Beynon, who said she had been an undercover FBI agent in the Communist Party, and Frank Nestler, who said he had been a Communist in 1943-46, named eight employees of the Westinghouse Company in the Pittsburgh, Pa. areas as Party members.

Dante de Cesare, a General Electric employee, said he had been a Communist in 1947-50, and named seven former GE workers as Communists. All had previously appeared before the Subcommittee and, counsel James Juliana said, had refused to answer questions on grounds of possible self-incrimination.

Three Westinghouse Air Brake employees swore they were not "now" Communists but refused to say whether they had been Party members an hour earlier. The witnesses, who relied on the Fifth Amendment, were Harold K. Briney, an officer of the United Electrical Workers (Ind.) local 601, Theodore Wright, and Joseph Slater.

Another who invoked the Fifth Amendment was Lawrence W. Parrish, an ex-employee of Bethlehem Steel Company's Quincy, Mass., shipyard. Parrish had received an "apology" from Chairman McCarthy on July 19, 1954, when it appeared he had been a victim of mistaken identity. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 363.)

May 10 -- Michael Sam, a Dunkirk, N.Y., member of the United Steel Workers of America (CIO), said he had never had any association with Communists or the Party. Sam said his signature on a Communist Party nominating petition in 1946 was forged. Another witness, Charles Wojchowski of Dorchester, Mass., invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked if he was a Communist.

William V. Delos and Robert H. LaFortune, GE employees in Schenectady, N.Y., and admitted ex-Communists, testified about Party activities during their membership. They testified before the Committee in 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 362ff.)

Grain Storage Bins

Bins for grain storage bought by the government from a Kansas City, Mo., fabricator were described as defective in hearings before the Subcommittee in July and August.

HEARINGS -- July 22, August 2-4 on defective grain storage bins in the Midwest.

TESTIMONY -- July 22 -- Bernard F. Locraft, Washington, D.C., civil engineer, said probably most of the 8,960 bins the government bought from a Kansas City, Mo., fabricator "were defective." The bins were bought for $4,887,000 from Black, Sivalls, and Bryson, Inc. The walls of the bins "are failing and buckling," Locraft testified. But he said he saw no way the manufacturer could have profited by the defects.

Kenneth W. Linberry, company president, wrote the Subcommittee the firm stood ready to "correct any manufacturing defects," though the company knew of none when the bins were shipped.

Aug. 2 -- Wendell Becraft, Agriculture Department official in Kansas, said he had protested frequently about defects in both metal and lumber bins. He added his protests brought little response. The Agriculture Department bought the bins, but the Navy inspected them.

Aug. 3 -- M.A. Gibson of the office of the Inspector of Naval Material in Kansas City, Mo., said he did not believe any corruption was involved, but there was "a carnival of carelessness." He said there was inadequate inspection, and agreed with Sen. Symington the manufacturer could not be blamed if he had followed specifications.

Aug. 4 -- Officials of Black, Sivalls, and Bryson said the firm followed specifications and was not liable for defects. Questioning indicated the Agriculture Department and the company held different views on the meaning of the specifications.

Bert Huff, a contractor who erected bins in Kansas and Illinois, said he had a civil suit pending against the manufacturers for supplying him with faulty materials.

Cross Resignation

The Permanent Investigations Subcommittee Nov. 15 held a closed hearing at which Chairman Hugh W. Cross of the Interstate Commerce Commission reportedly was questioned about allegedly using his official powers to help a friend who operated a transport service between Chicago railroad stations.

The question was whether Cross improperly had interfered in negotiations in the spring of 1955 which led to the award of a transfer contract to Railroad Transfer Service, Inc., instead of to the Parmalee Transportation Co., which had held the franchise for 102 years.

Cross resigned Nov. 25. In a letter to President Eisenhower, Cross said: But for "the uncertain condition" of his health and that of his wife, as well as his respect for the ICC and the Administration, he would have stayed on to "defend to the end against the baseless charges which have been made against me before a Congressional committee."

Cross, a Republican Lieutenant Governor of Illinois in 1940-48, was appointed to the ICC by President Truman on April 8, 1949.

Chairman McClellan Nov. 25 said, "I don't think it's necessary now to proceed any further" with the investigation.

SECURITY CASES

A hot debate that had occupied Congress throughout 1954 continued through 1955. At issue were statistics provided by Administration spokesmen on the progress of the Eisenhower security program in ridding the government of subversives and other security risks. Described by Democrats as a "numbers racket" intended to discredit the previous Administration, the statistics were defended by Republicans as an indication of the efficacy of the GOP's "great crusade."

Hearings on the security program in general and on a number of specific cases were conducted by a subcommittee headed by one of the most outspoken critics of the "numbers game," Sen. Olin D. Johnston (D S.C.), who in October, 1954 called the statistical releases "the biggest big-lie program in our American history." Other members of the Government Employees Security Program Subcommittee of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee were Sens. Matthew M. Neely (D W. Va.) and Frank Carlson (R Kan.). Chief Subcommittee counsel was ex-Sen. Guy M. Gillette (D Iowa, 1936-45, 1949-55). The Senate Feb. 21 appropriated $125,000 for the inquiry through Jan. 31, 1956.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Security Risks." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 379ff.) "Security Commission" (this volume, pp. 383ff.)

A federal security program which undertook to check all government employees and to dismiss as "security risks" those whose loyalty was found to be in "reasonable doubt" was begun in March, 1947 by then-President Harry S. Truman. The program established methods of investigating employees and applicants, criteria for evaluating background data, procedures for the dismissal of security risks, and avenues of appeal.

The Eisenhower Administration security program, dating from Executive Order 10450 on April 27, 1953, set up the broader criterion that no person should hold a government job whose employment was "not clearly consistent with the national interest."

Order 10450 re-defined "security risk" to include heavy drinkers, loose talkers, sex perverts, persons judged unreliable, untrustworthy or immoral, and persons previously convicted of felonies or misdemeanors.

When Republicans in 1953 and 1954 issued statistics on "security risks" discharged from government, their figures were challenged by Democrats who repeatedly called for a breakdown on how many were disloyal and how many were unsuitable under existing civil service regulations.

Democrats charged that Republicans were playing a "numbers game" to make it appear that the Truman administration was full of subversives.

FIRST STATISTICS

The debate began Oct. 23, 1953, when the White House announced that 1,456 federal employees had left the payroll under the security program, but did not say how many were loyalty cases. Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.) Dec. 13, 1953, said that 90 percent of the 1,456 had been dismissed for "a combination of Communist activities and perversion," but Rep. Katharine St. George (R N.Y.)

said Jan. 8, 1954, that a high government official had told her that "10 percent or less" were "subversives or Communists."

In his State of the Union message on Jan. 7, 1954, President Eisenhower put the number of security separations at 2,200, again providing no breakdown. Jan. 21, Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., refused to provide a breakdown, saying it was the Administration's right to withhold such information.

Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission March 2, 1954, before the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee announced new totals through Dec. 31, 1953, and provided a breakdown of dismissals and resignations, and of types of information held against employees. Of 2,427 separated, more than half had resigned and 383 had in their files "information indicating, in various degrees, subversive activities, subversive associations or membership in subversive organizations." Questioned, Young could not say how many of the 383 had been dismissed and how many resigned, or whether derogatory information in the file was the cause of separation. He would not say whether any of the 383 were "Communists" or "subversives." Young said the "bulk" of the 2,427 separations were accomplished "in accordance with regular established civil service procedure" rather than under the new loyalty program.

March 4, before the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, and March 10 before the Senate Committee, Young boosted the totals for the same period.

CAMPAIGN AMMUNITION

As the 1954 Congressional election campaign moved into high gear a new crop of statistics was reaped.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon led the Republican assault, saying in a speech Sept. 18 at Huron, S.D., "We're kicking the Communists and fellow travelers and security risks out of the government, not by the hundreds but by the thousands."

On Oct. 11 the Civil Service Commission announced that 6,926 security risks had left the government between May 28, 1953 and June 30, 1954, among them 1,743 with subversive data in their files.

Nov. 1, Nixon said that "96 percent of the 6,926 Communists, fellow-travelers, sex perverts, people with criminal records, dope addicts, drunks and other security risks removed under the Eisenhower security program were hired by the Truman Administration."

On Oct. 8, 1954, Sen. Johnston called the statistics on security separations "the biggest big-lie program in our American history." He said Administration officials had twisted the meaning of figures in a long display of "distortion, untruth and political immorality."

New CSC figures through Sept. 30, 1954, were issued Jan. 3, 1955. Of 8,008 security separations, 2,096 involved data on subversion. The report listed 3,002 dismissals, 5,006 resignations. Information on sex perversion was listed in 655 cases, previous convictions in 2,649 and other data in 4,417.

'Numbers Racket'

Against this background the Johnston Subcommittee undertook its "full-scale inquiry" into the security program. Twice, on July 28 and Sept. 26, 1955, CSC Chairman Young testified on the number of employees who had left government under the security program. Both times Democratic members of the Subcommittee clashed with him, charging that the statistics were misleading and were being used for political purposes. Young defended the Administration security program while admitting there had been unavoidable "errors of judgment" and "honest differences of opinion." He said the Commission had adopted "the statistical reporting method because Congress wanted it."

On Sept. 29 Young said that from May 28, 1953 to June 30, 1955, 2.3 million federal employees had been screened under the security program and only 3,586 of that number had been terminated because of security questions, or less than 10 percent of the 37,450 persons dismissed for cause. Resignations for the period totaled 495,724, of which "about 1 percent," or 5,684, involved persons whose "files contained security information."

Young explained that the total figure for each period represented "the number of terminations and resignations because of security questions falling within the purview...of Executive Order 10450," including resignations which took place before determination was completed where the file was "known to contain" unfavorable information.

Questioning brought out that the totals included an undetermined number of persons who resigned unaware that their files contained derogatory security information. Contents of the files were "known" to the agency but not necessarily to the employee.

CSC figures through June 30 showed about five resignations to every three dismissals. No information was given on the number of forced, as opposed to voluntary, resignations.

THE BREAKDOWN

The "breakdown" first supplied by Young, March 2, 1954, classified derogatory data in the files of employees who had been dismissed or resigned. Asked for a breakdown on reasons for dismissal, Young said it would be "futile and meaningless" to attempt to assign a specific reason in each case. No information was given on whether the information cited was the basis for disposing of the case.

Young listed four categories: (1) "Number whose files contained information indicating, in varying degrees, subversive activities, subversive associations, or membership in subversive organizations; (2) Number whose files contained information indicating sex perversion; (3) Number whose files contained information indicating conviction of felonies or misdemeanors; and (4) Number whose files contained any other type or types of information falling within the purview of Executive Order 10450, as amended."

The total of the various categories was higher than the combined figure for dismissals and resignations because some persons had several types of adverse information in their files.

Greatest interest and controversy centered on category (1) relating to subversion, for which the last given figure was 2,345.

Pressed for the name of any convicted Communist or subversive among the 2,345, Young replied that such information was not his responsibility but that of the Justice Department. "We wouldn't have any names," he said. "We just deal in numbers."

Young would not say how many of the category had been dismissed and how many had resigned.

OTHER TESTIMONY

Following Young's testimony, two agencies were represented as having dismissed most of the employees enumerated by Young on suitability rather than security grounds.

Veterans Administrator H. V. Higley said Sept. 27 the "great majority" of the 449 dismissed VA employees were ousted not as "security risks" but under "regular civil service procedure" on suitability grounds.

Frederick W. Baumann, Jr., acting security officer for the Government Printing Office, said most of the GPO employees listed as fired under the security program would have been discharged on suitability grounds even if there had been no security program.

LADEJINSKY CASE

In August and September the Subcommittee reviewed individual security cases in which it was charged that unjust decisions had been made, unreasonable criteria employed, or procedures followed which resulted in unfair treatment. Among them were:

The widely publicized case of Wolf I. Ladejinsky, agriculture attache in Tokyo, dismissed on security grounds in 1954 by the Agriculture Department and subsequently hired by the Foreign Operations Administration for a post in Viet Nam. Both Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson and FOA Administrator Harold E. Stassen testified. Benson said his department's charges against Ladejinsky were "gratuitous and unnecessary." Benson July 2 announced he had ordered departmental records expunged of his earlier finding that Ladejinsky failed to meet security requirements.

The case of Sanford Waxer, who was denied an honorable discharge from the Army on the basis of alleged associations with subversives and Eleanor Waxer, his wife, who had spent 18 months trying to get a final decision on a still-pending allegation that caused her suspension from a position at Fort Knox, Ky. The Army apologized to Dr. Alfred H. Kelly of Wayne University, a named "associate" of Waxer's, for having incorrectly linked him to an organization on the Attorney General's list.

The case of Joseph H. Sumners, Jr., discharged July 29, 1955, from a Navy civilian post on the grounds that his parents belonged to an unnamed subversive organization.

DATA REFUSED

Johnston protested repeatedly during the hearings that the executive branch was not cooperating in the inquiry.

Data was refused by the Small Business Administration, the State Department, and the Veterans' Administration, each citing the President's ruling during the Army-McCarthy hearings in 1954. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 353-4.) Subcommittee counsel suggested that a court test of the right of the executive branch to refuse data for Congressional inquiries might be necessary.

Deputy Counsel Paul E. Hadlick charged June 9 that the Small Business Administration had used "intimidation" to keep an employee from testifying by filing charges of wrongdoing against him. The witness, Clarence E. Clarke, was dismissed by SBA July 7 in a "reduction in force." The subject of Clarke's testimony, security director George V. McDavitt of SBA was dismissed July 25 for making "unauthorized statements" to his staff.

SUMMING UP

At the conclusion of testimony in September, Chairman Johnston said the hearings had "shown clearly that the security program (was) being run in a slipshod fashion and (needed) a general overhaul." Sen. Carlson, only Republican on the Subcommittee, said he was "convinced" the existing program had been "effective." He added, "responsible officials of the Administration have been, and are, making every effort to see that the program is both effective and just." He said he did not believe the program should be condemned because of "the handful of cases that have been brought before this Subcommittee."

Security Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee, Government Employees Security Program Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 26-Sept. 28 and Dec. 1-2 on the security program and its effect on federal employees.

TESTIMONY -- May 26 -- Civil Service Commissioner George M. Moore answered questions about the reinstatement of some 1,400 government employees dismissed for other than security reasons. A misunderstanding over the reasons for dismissal had resulted in his being asked to testify.

June 2 -- Ex-Sen. Harry P. Cain (R Wash., 1946-53) urged "basic reforms" in the Administration program, which he called "truly sad and unenlightened." Cain, a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board, said the law should be amended to give government agency heads the right to decide whether or not to suspend employees accused on security grounds. Cain suggested a free counsel be provided employees brought to hearings and that some new screening process evaluate information against job applicants. The former Senator said the Attorney General's subversive list was "being misused and perverted."

June 9 -- Philip B. Perlman, solicitor general during the Truman Administration, attacked the existing program and singled out Vice President Nixon for criticism on the basis of 1954 campaign speeches in which Nixon said he helped get former Bureau of Standards Chief Dr. Edward U. Condon's security clearance revoked.

Perlman said he was "outraged by the perversion of needed security laws and rules into instruments for the satisfaction of indefensible prejudices, grudges, and spleen," but added that he was "reluctant to believe that President Eisenhower knows or understands the extent of the evils inherent in the security program."

He recommended that the Subcommittee draft a new loyalty and security program for all except the most sensitive federal agencies.

SECURITY CHIEF CHARGED

June 14 -- Clarence E. Clarke, a suspended investigator for the security office of the Small Business Administration, charged that his superior, George V. McDavitt, director of the Office of Compliance and Security, used security procedures to get rid of employees who should not have been discharged.

Clarke accused McDavitt of having falsified information sent the Civil Service Commission on the operation of the SBA's loyalty program, refusing to accept clearance of personnel entitled to clearance, insisting on using only derogatory information in evaluating fitness of employees for their jobs, and making photostatic copies for his own use of confidential reports of the FBI and the CSC.

Clarke said he did "not know of any cases myself of any persons fired for security reasons. There were forced resignations, cancellations of temporary appointments, and reduction-in-force notices." He received a reduction-in-force notice May 25, he said. A few days later, after taking the matter up with the Subcommittee staff, Clarke said he was suspended on charges that he had slapped a stenographer, had improperly handled government documents, and had been guilty of insubordination.

SBA Administrator Wendell B. Barnes, who was to testify later, told reporters that Clarke was "a disgruntled, confused, mixed-up young man seeking notoriety through flamboyant statements."

June 17 -- Louis J. Lyell, a former SBA security investigator, said the SBA's security program had been conducted with a "total disregard for the individuals who fell within its scope." He insisted that "grossly unfair" methods were used by the agency and "a good many decent people denied employment."

He said that before he was hired he had to obtain clearance from the Republican National Committee. He said he was told by McDavitt, that when preparing digests of FBI and CSC field investigations he was to set out derogatory information fully but to leave out all non-derogatory information except to give the number of persons interviewed who gave no derogatory information.

SBA Administrator Barnes said his agency had no requirement that job applicants must have clearance from the GOP National Committee. He said Lyell and Clarke "mocked the truth" with their testimony. Barnes said he could not comply with a Subcommittee subpena that he produce McDavitt's personnel and security file under regulations issued by former Presidents as well as by President Eisenhower. He offered digests of McDavitt's personnel file and his application for the SBA post.

He said SBA needed a complete security program because it dealt with defense contracts and such secret projects as atomic energy matters. In no instance did McDavitt's office have the final decision on any person seeking employment in the agency, or even make any recommendation in the case, Barnes said, adding that he passed on any case in which an applicant was turned down.

June 23 -- Barnes was questioned further about the SBA's security program. The Subcommittee's legal staff suggested a court test of the power of Congressional investigators to obtain documents from the executive branch when Barnes again said he could not turn over certain information requested.

SECURITY CHANGES URGED

Lincoln W. Lauterstein of the American Veterans Committee urged a reduction in the existing scope of the federal security program. He recommended that loyalty, security, and competence be considered separately and not lumped together. Although disloyalty "should be ground for dismissal from any government job," he said, "it should be rigidly defined with adequate protections to the accused."

July 7 -- George V. McDavitt, SBA security chief, swore that his only relationship with Allen E. Zoll was as Zoll's tenant. At an earlier hearing it was brought out that McDavitt's telephone number was the same as that used by Zoll, head of an organization -- American Patriots, Inc. -- on the Attorney General's list of subversive associations.

McDavitt said Zoll had a room on a floor beneath his, and that he got the telephone number from the telephone directory because he did not have a phone of his own. Paul C. Hadlick, a Subcommittee counsel, asked McDavitt if he knew Zoll's number was unlisted. McDavitt repeated he got it from the directory. He denied there was any personal relationship between himself and Zoll.

He said his office kept a "debarred list" containing indexes gathered from eight or nine government agencies. The indexes contained names, he said, of those barred from doing business with the government, some of questionable categories, some with criminal records.

In a statement placed in the record, McDavitt said he had done his best "to expose subversives regardless of their extremes in ideology whether Fascistic or Communistic, I believe they are all dangerous to our American institutions."

July 14 -- W. J. Faucette said extra-marital activities in Germany by McDavitt caused Faucette to dispense with McDavitt's activities as an investigator for the U.S. Displaced Persons Commission. Faucette was McDavitt's superior.

July 22 -- Thurman Arnold, former assistant attorney general and judge, proposed that the federal loyalty-security program be abolished and government agency heads be authorized to fire employees simply for unsuitability. Arnold assailed existing hearing procedures as giving "the appearance of a trial without its substance."

SECURITY FIGURES GIVEN

July 28 -- Chairman Philip Young of the Civil Service Commission said the government had finished screening its employees for security risks, and 2.3 million workers "have met the test." A "very few" cases might be reopened on receipt of new information, he added.

From May 28, 1953, the day President Eisenhower's employee security program went into effect, to March 31, 1955, Young said, 34,257 employees had been discharged for cause, 3,432 of them for security reasons. Resignations totaled 441,025 in that period, Young said. Of that number, 5,447 quit before final action "in cases where the file was known to contain unfavorable information," he said.

Aug. 29 -- Mrs. Eleanor V. Waxer said she suffered "extreme mental concern" and "financial hardship" as she tried unsuccessfully for almost 18 months to get a government hearing on security charges against her. Mrs. Waxer was a civilian Army employee at Fort Knox, Ky., while her husband was stationed there as a soldier. She said she received a suspension notice on the ground she had "close and continuing association" with a person who belonged to the Progressive Party in Michigan, described as Communist-controlled.

Waxer said he was refused an honorable discharge when separated from the Army May 31 and was not told of the charges until Aug. 3. The charges said Waxer had "associated" with Dr. Alfred H. Kelly, a history professor at Wayne University, Detroit. Dr. Kelly was described as a contributor to American Youth for Democracy, a student group cited by the Justice Department as a Communist front organization.

Dr. Kelly said that in 1947 he conducted an investigation of AYD at the request of University officials. He said he reported the group had been set up by the Communist Party as a successor to the Young Communist League. He testified that as a result of his report, the AYD unit was banned from the Wayne University campus. Dr. Kelly said he "never was a member of the Communist Party."

Joseph Earl Vargo, a Navy veteran of 21 years, said he had been dismissed from the State Department as a security risk because he had married a Russian woman. Vargo said his marriage was approved by U.S. authorities while he was stationed at Moscow.

GROUP "STEERING CLEAR" OF DUTY

Aug. 30 -- Joseph L. Rauh, Jr., of Americans for Democratic Action accused the Subcommittee of "failure to do its duty by steering clear of an over-all inquiry into the Nixon 'numbers' game." He added "startling charges made by Vice President Nixon had been hotly disputed... but so far no effort has been made to investigate these charges." Rauh said the "numbers game" consisted of putting a brand upon 8,000 federal workers who had been discharged or had quit while "derogatory" information was in their personnel files.

Will Maslow of the American Jewish Congress urged the development of a new security program to be confined to sensitive government jobs.

Benjamin Scher, former Commerce Department employee discharged in April, 1953, said he had not been able to secure a hearing on the matter. He swore that neither he nor any member of his family was a Communist or ever had been.

Edward R. Nixon, former Government Printing Office employee, said he believed the Eisenhower security order was used to "get" his job. Nixon said he was dismissed as a security risk on grounds he had committed adultery with another GPO employee. A security hearing, he said, recommended that both be reinstated, but the GPO overruled the board.

Aug. 31 -- Joseph H. Sumners, Jr., a former civilian employee of the Navy, said he was discharged July 29 because his parents were members of an organization declared subversive by the Attorney General. He quoted Navy officials as saying that Sumner was "apt to tell (his) parents something about (his) work." He testified that no question about his loyalty had been raised during five years of active Naval service.

LADEJINSKY CASE AIRED

Sept 26 -- Scott McLeod, State Department security officer, declined to give the Subcommittee State Department files on the case of Wolf I. Ladejinsky.

Harold E. Stassen, special Presidential assistant on disarmament problems, explained his role in hiring Ladejinsky for the Foreign Operations Administration. He said each department was within its own rights in judging the facts as presented.

CSC Chairman Young said 9,310 federal employees had been separated under the security program between May 28, 1953, and June 30, 1955. His breakdown: dismissals, 3,614; resignations, 5,696; evidence of subversive associations or activities, 2,355; sex perversion, 840; felonies and misdemeanors, 3,002; other types of unfavorable information, 5,213. A letter to Johnston on Sept. 29 corrected these figures (see chart).

Sept. 27 -- Veterans Administrator H.V. Higley said the "great majority" of the 449 VA employees counted in the Administration's security statistics were not ousted as "security risks" but were removed under "regular civil service procedure" on suitability grounds.

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said it was "gratuitous and unnecessary" for the Agriculture Department to have made a security charge against Ladejinsky.

Assistant Attorney General William F. Tompkins said "10 to 15" persons had been "convicted" on perjury or false statement charges growing out of denials of past Communist associations.

Thomas J. Donegan, chairman of the government's Personnel Security Advisory Committee, said his committee was organized shortly after the Ladejinsky case. He said its function was to coordinate cases that might involve agency conflicts in security evaluations.

Sept 28 -- Frederick W. Baumann, Jr., acting security officer for the Government Printing Office, said most of the GPO employees listed as fired under the security program would have been discharged on suitability grounds even if there had been no security program.

John B. Phelps of the American Federation of Scientists said "more of our traditional legal safeguards" should be written into the program to prevent injustices. Irving Ferman of the American Civil Liberties Union said political activities of both major parties had "created almost complete anarchy" in the handling of the security problem.

Dec. 1 -- Subcommittee counsel Paul E. Hadlick reported that a staff study showed 3,241 of 3,586 "security risk" dismissals reported by Philip Young Sept. 29 actually were discharges under "regular civil service or normal departmental procedures."

Of the remaining 345, he said, 342 were fired under the Eisenhower executive order, one under the earlier, Truman security order, and two for unknown reasons. Some of the 342 were discharged for "unsuitability" and not for loyalty reasons. Hadlick added that several dismissed employees were rehired by their own agency or by some other branch of the federal government.

Dec. 1-2 -- Federal security officials testified on how their agencies computed the "security dismissal" figures furnished the Civil Service Commission

PUBLIC POWER HEARINGS

Hearings were held in 1955 by a House Government Operations Subcommittee headed by Earl Chudoff (D Pa.) on public power regulations of the Department of the Interior. Chudoff accused the Administration of conducting a "shocking and sordid" giveaway of power resources, but Interior representatives termed the charges "completely unjustified."

Among subjects covered by the hearings were an Interior Department regulation allegedly based on a memorandum prepared by a private utility company, and a proposed government contract with a Georgia utility that was ruled illegal by the Justice Department.

Background

The Administration's determination to cut back on federal power development was the crux of Congressional concern over power programs. The President's 1956 budget provided for continuation of power projects under way, but for few new undertakings.

The change in policy did not occur overnight, however. Congress, in the closing years of the Fair Deal, showed increasing reluctance to undertake all-out federal development, but instead endorsed so-called "wheeling" arrangements under which private companies distributed government-produced power. This paved the way for a "partnership" policy that combined efforts of states, local communities, private groups, and the federal government in power developments.

Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay, in an August, 1953 directive, said, "The primary responsibility for supplying the power needs of an area rests with the people locally. The responsibility of the Department of the Interior is to give leadership and assistance in the conservation and wise utilization of natural resources... In general, it will not oppose the construction of facilities which local interests, either public or private, are willing and able to provide in accordance with licenses and other controls of the Federal Power Commission or other appropriate regulatory bodies, and which are consonant with the best development of natural resources of the area."

In August, 1954 the Interior Department issued a regulation dropping the "wheeling" arrangement that required private utilities building transmission lines across public lands to agree to make available to the government any spare power capacity on their lines. The 1948 regulation had made it unnecessary to build duplicating power lines to carry government-produced electricity to rural electric cooperatives and municipalities -- the so-called "preference customers."

House

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations, Public Works and Resources Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- From May through October on changes in public power regulations by the Department of the Interior.

TESTIMONY -- May 10 -- C. Girard Davidson, former Assistant Secretary of Interior, said the Department was "evading the law" in order to give the nation's power resources to private utilities.

May 11 -- Walter Seymour, former Interior Department Power Division director, said consumers would be hurt by repeal of the regulation that permitted public power to be sent over private lines. Seymour said repeal would "reduce the assurance" that rural electric cooperatives and other "preference" customers would be able to obtain low-cost power.

June 7, 8 -- James D. Geissinger, regional solicitor for the Department of Interior at Denver, Colo., said he recommended changes in certain public power regulations on April 9, 1954, following study of an "anonymous document" and a call from Herman C. Kruse, registered lobbyist for the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. of San Francisco. Geissinger said he had believed Kruse was a disinterested party, but learned later that Kruse had misinformed him.

He said Kruse objected to the 1948 Truman Administration "wheeling" regulation. Geissinger said Kruse told him that other utilities were resisting this regulation and had at considerable extra expense built transmission lines across non-government lands because of their objections. Geissinger admitted that this statement was in error.

He also admitted making 10 recommendations to his superiors culled from 13 proposals embodied in the "anonymous" memorandum entitled "suggested changes in Bureau of Land Management right of way regulations" and carrying no identifying title or authorship. He said he later found out from Kruse that the memorandum had been prepared by Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (Kruse testified Sept. 12 -- see below.)

After hearing Geissinger's testimony, Subcommittee Chairman Earl Chudoff (D Pa.) accused the Administration of conducting a "shocking and sordid" giveaway of the nation's power resources. Chudoff charged that "Interior Secretary Douglas McKay, former Under Secretary Ralph A. Tudor, and present Under Secretary Clarence A. Davis seem to have coldly and deliberately handed the power policy-making function of the Department to Mr. Tudor's hometown private utility, the Pacific Gas & Electric Co." (Tudor was head of a San Francisco engineering company.)

INTERIOR ACTIONS DEFENDED

July 6 -- Under Secretary Davis called "completely unjustified" any contention the Interior Department acted illegally or contrary to the wishes of Congress in revising regulations for issuing power line rights of way across public lands.

He said the former "wheeling" regulation was of limited use "without the complete collaboration of the respective parties." Without cooperation, he said, the regulation "has the result of making all reserve capacity (of a private transmission line) uncertain so that the owners of the line never know whether they have reserves or not."

The controversy, he continued, boiled down to "a question of whether it is right to take a lease and write into it certain regulatory powers."

He said either he or his secretary had placed the controversial unsigned memorandum suggesting certain changes in power regulations on the desk of his former assistant, Geissinger.

July 7 -- Davis defended the Department's refusal to produce the original initialed copy of the 1954 order by Secretary McKay changing the regulations for the issuance of power line rights of way. He said he did not think the order was endorsed by anyone except himself and Geissinger.

FEDERAL CONSPIRACY CHARGED

General Manager Clyde T. Ellis of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association said the "great power corporations" apparently had succeeded in gaining control "of some of the key executive agencies created to carry out the will of the Congress." He added: "It might seem too strong to say that there is a conspiracy between the executive agencies and the private power companies, but I know of no other word to describe recent conditions."

After Congress adjourned Aug. 2, the Subcommittee held hearings in Missouri, Georgia, Idaho and California.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 31 - Sept. 1 -- At Springfield, Mo., R. J. Martin of the University of Missouri, a former representative of the Southwest Power Administration, said there had been an apparent change in the Interior Department's policy toward preference customers. He said SPA employees were told to contract for every kilowatt of power but not to provide power to preference customers who asked it to meet increased load demands. He said the former policy had been to withhold power for use by cooperatives and municipalities when their load increased.

Chudoff said he felt the Interior Department had been lax in carrying out the "intents of Congress in bringing power to preference customers."

Sept. 2 -- At Atlanta, Ga., William T. Crisp of the Tar Heel Electric Membership Corp., a cooperative, said he wanted to protest against what he said was the failure of the Eisenhower Administration to market an extra kilowatt hour of power since it came into office. He called on the Subcommittee to "help cooperatives exercise our rights under the law."

GEORGIA POWER CONTRACT DISPUTED

Chudoff said McKay was guilty of "bad faith" in failing to notify rural electric cooperative groups about a proposed contract with the Georgia Power Co. to transmit government power to Georgia's co-ops from the Clark Hill Reservoir.

Harllee Branch, Jr., president of the Georgia Power Co., issued a statement saying the Subcommittee had refused to permit him to appear. "This refusal raises a...question as to whether the present hearings of the Subcommittee are being conducted in a bona fide search for facts or are being used as a propaganda medium for the benefit of government-subsidized power groups," Branch said.

Rep. Robert E. Jones, Jr. (D Ala.) called the Branch statement "a deliberate attempt to bring disrepute" on the Subcommittee and "smear" it.

Rep. Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.) said he thought Branch should be given an opportunity to appear at the hearings. (Further hearings on the subject were held Oct. 12 - 18 -- see below.)

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Comments by Subcommittee members Sept. 7:

Rep. Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) said the effect of the hearings "has been to sabotage President Eisenhower's program of getting government out of business."

John E. Moss, Jr. (D Calif.) said that "to the extent the Eisenhower program has tended to sabotage" the Rural Electrification Administration, "we have and will oppose those policies."

Chudoff said federal power was being given to private utilities and "this is definitely a payoff for the support the big stockholders in the private utilities gave to the Republican party in the 1952 election."

TESTIMONY -- Sept. 10 -- At Idaho Falls, Idaho, Gus Norwood of the Northwest Public Power Association said a power interchange between the Interior Department and the Idaho Power Co. "violates..the Bonneville Power Act. It is highly discriminatory in favor of the Idaho Power Co. (and)...reverses the anti-monopoly clause" of the Act.

MEMORANDUM'S AUTHORSHIP DESCRIBED

Sept. 12 -- At San Francisco, Herman C. Kruse of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. said Interior Under Secretary Davis had asked him to find out views of western utility companies about certain regulations the Department was considering revising. Kruse said his company's law department gave him the controversial memorandum of suggested changes. (Robert H. Gerdes, general counsel for Pacific Gas, said the memorandum was typed in an office of Idaho Power Co.)

Chudoff said Davis "asked the utility for the changes" and "did not give the public" or "federal power customers" a chance "to comment or consider" them.

Hoffman countered that Chudoff did not "know anything about power" and "didn't even know what REA" was. "It is apparent to me," Chudoff said, "that the public is being cut off from public power that it is entitled to by shenanigans of the present Administration."

Sept. 13 -- A. J. Shaver of Nevada's Colorado River Commission said that Nevada was not giving up efforts to obtain power from California's Shasta Dam. Nevada signed a contract with the Interior Department for use of Shasta power but was unable to use Pacific Gas and Electric Co. lines to transmit the power out of California.

Oct. 11 -- Charles W. Leavy, head of the Southeastern Power Administration, said failure to reach "satisfactory" power marketing agreements with private utilities on two power projects in Virginia and Georgia had cost the government a possible $2.3 million in revenue since 1953. He said it resulted from inability of the government to get the private utilities to transmit public power over their lines to rural cooperatives and public agencies.

GEORGIA CONTRACT HELD ILLEGAL

Assistant Secretary of Interior Fred G. Aandahl said the Department had requested and received a Justice Department opinion on the legality of a "tricontract" proposal during negotiations for sale of power in Georgia from the federal Clark Hill Dam. The contract would have turned public power over to the Georgia Power Co. for resale to cooperatives. Aandahl said Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., had ruled that the contract should not be signed until an attempt had been made to sell the power directly to preference users. He said there was no reason to tell the company and cooperatives about the opinion since it came after the Department had shelved the tricontract offer.

Oct. 12 -- Aandahl submitted the Attorney General's opinion, dated July 15, 1955. The ruling held that where there were competing offers by public preference customers and a non-preference utility, the government "must contract with the preference customer on condition that such customer will, within a reasonable time...obtain the means for taking and delivering the power."

Aandahl said the Department had not contracted with the Georgia cooperatives because they had no means of taking the power and that Georgia Power had refused to transmit power over its own lines to them. He said that since delivery of the opinion a tentative agreement had been reached with Georgia Power to transmit Clark Hill energy to co-ops at terms more favorable to the utility.

Aandahl said he attended "several" White House conferences in 1955 on the "over-all policy" of the proposed contract.

Oct. 13 -- Chudoff said he wanted details of the reported White House conferences.

Rural Electrification Administrator Ancher Nelsen praised operating efficiencies he said were involved in a lease-operated plant arrangement between Colorado-Ute Electric Association and Western Colorado Power Co. He said there were advantages from integration of electric cooperative transmission systems with private utilities. But he denied REA ever had attempted to force "shotgun weddings" of co-ops and utilities as the price of an REA loan.

Oct. 18 -- Gerald D. Morgan, Presidential counsel, wired Chudoff rejecting his request for details on White House conferences about disposal of power from Clark Hill Dam in Georgia. Morgan said compliance with the request "would violate policy and practice governing the relationship" between the executive and legislative branches of government.

The Subcommittee, with Republicans dissenting, voted against calling Harllee Branch, Jr., of the Georgia Power Co. to appear. Branch replied, in a statement, that he was "shocked" at the Subcommittee's "decision to deny me and my company the opportunity to testify regarding false charges...made against us...(during)...the alleged 'hearings' regarding the distribution of power from the Clark Hill project." He said the company had "suffered irreparable damage" from "baseless insinuations" at the hearings.

Harold T. Nelson, Idaho regional Reclamation Bureau director, testified the Bureau was doing everything possible to ease a power shortage in Idaho. He said a shortage would not exist if Congress had approved appropriation requests in 1952 for Palisades Dam and power facilities at American Falls reservoir.

William A. Pearl, Bonneville Power administrator, said changes were being made in northwest federal power contracts so preference customers "can't grab all the power" during expected power shortages.

Oct. 19 -- Pearl said BPA twice had asked Congress to appropriate money for a federal transmission line to supply preference groups. The current situation, he said, was that Idaho Power Co. would build a transmission line and buy surplus power from BPA.

Chudoff said Interior Department officials interpreted power laws "just as they please" and promoted "illegal schemes" at the expense of preference customers.

ACTION -- Oct. 26 -- Answering criticism of the Subcommittee's failure to let Branch testify, Chudoff said his group had not turned up anything "which demonstrates any illegal or improper influence on the part of the Georgia Power Co." He added that the Subcommittee was not investigating power companies "at this time" but had concentrated on Interior Department policies.

INTERNAL SECURITY

The Internal Security Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee continued in 1955 its investigations of Communist influence in the United States and related security threats.

Highlighting its hearings were testimony by Harvey M. Matusow, self-confessed ex-Communist, who readily admitted to "lying for money" about hundreds of persons; disclosure by Winston Burdett, a Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, that he was "a devoted and dedicated" Communist and espionage agent from 1937 to 1942; release of diary excerpts dealing with Harry Dexter White, late Treasury aide accused of being a Communist informer; and hearings on "eavesdropping" on jury deliberations.

The Senate on March 18 granted the Subcommittee $260,000 to carry out its investigations -- $90,000 more than it received in 1954.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Internal Security Investigation." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 253-58; Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 316-23; Vol. X, 1954 pp. 366-70.)

The Internal Security Subcommittee was created in 1951 and early that year began hearings on the role of the Institute of Pacific Relations in shaping U.S. Far Eastern policy. A key witness was Owen Lattimore, a State Department consultant and university professor, who became the pivotal figure in the investigation. In December, 1952, Lattimore was indicted on seven counts of perjuring himself when testifying about Communist connections. In June, 1955, the Justice Department, after unsuccessful attempts to prosecute Lattimore, dropped the case.

Among witnesses before the Subcommittee in 1952 was Harvey M. Matusow, who testified that Lattimore's book, "Solution in Asia," carried the Communist Party line on China. Matusow also was a witness at hearings on subversion in 1953, but when he testified in 1955 he recanted much of his earlier testimony.

The Harry Dexter White case was the high point of the Subcommittee's 1953 investigations. Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., charged in a November speech that White was known to be a Communist spy by the Truman Administration when it promoted him to the International Monetary Fund in 1946. This accusation was answered by former President Truman in a nationwide radio-television address in which he said the Eisenhower Administration had embraced 'McCarthyism" for political advantage. The charges and counter-charges were gone into at length at hearings by both the Senate and House. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 620.)

In 1954 the Subcommittee showed increasing interest in "the pattern" of Communist infiltration into the government, and also delved into alleged Communist influence in the armed forces and labor unions.

On, Jan. 25, 1955 the Subcommittee released a report stating that five senior military commanders believed that "possible subversion, wishful thinking, European orientation and allied pressure" had denied them victory in the Korean conflict. The Subcommittee recommended that methods be found to "eliminate political interference" in future wars or military armistice negotiations. The report was based on 1954 testimony from Gen. Mark Clark, Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Lt. Gen. Edmond M. Almond and Adm. Charles T. Joy, all retired. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 369.)

AGREEMENTS REACHED

The Senate Judiciary Committee, parent of the Internal Security group, voted Jan. 20 to bar one-man hearings by its investigating units except on a two-thirds vote of the Committee membership.

Chairmen of three Congressional investigating groups agreed Feb. 10 to eliminate duplication of testimony in security probes. The Chairmen, Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.) of the Senate Government Operations Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, Sen. James O. Eastland (D Miss.) of the Internal Security Subcommittee, and Rep. Francis E. Walter (D Pa.) of the House Un-American Activities Committee, said they had agreed on "the scope, field and endeavor" of their respective operations.

The Internal Security Subcommittee June 29 proposed to the full Judiciary Committee that persons turned down for jobs with the government or with government contractors because of unevaluated derogatory information be given an opportunity for a hearing.

In another recommendation, it urged the Attorney General to compile a handbook giving additional information about organizations listed as subversive so that membership in the groups could be evaluated "intelligently." Current practices, the Subcommittee said, made the Attorney General's subversive list "widely misunderstood and misapplied."

The Justice Department also was urged to speed action in bringing groups labeled as Communist fronts before the Subversive Activities Control Board to determine whether such groups were, in fact, Communist-controlled.

Matusow Testimony

COMMITTEE -- Internal Security Subcommittee, Senate Judiciary.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 21-April 20 on statements by Harvey M. Matusow that he testified falsely before the Subcommittee in 1952 when, as an admitted ex-Communist, he linked various persons with Communism.

BACKGROUND -- Matusow, self-styled Federal Bureau of Investigation informer and author of a book on his experiences, "False Witness," said Jan. 31, 1955 that he had testified falsely at the 1952 trial of 13 second-string Communist leaders. He said Roy M. Cohn, then an assistant U.S. attorney, told him what to say and knew his testimony was false. Cohn, former chief counsel for the Senate Government Operations Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, branded Matusow's charges as "just another Communist maneuver."

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis.), Investigations Subcommittee Chairman when Cohn was counsel, Feb. 2 said Cohn "would not allow testimony that was not true. I have absolute confidence in this."

Matusow testified before a New York federal court Feb. 15 that he had falsely identified eight persons as Communist or pro-Communists. He named them as Elmer Davis, news commentator and author; Marquis Childs, news columnist; James Wechsler, editor of the "New York Post;" and Sens. Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.), Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.), Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y.), and James E. Murray (D Mont.). Matusow said he had since telephoned apologies and retractions to them but Lehman said: "Matusow never telephoned me at all."

Matusow also testified Feb. 12 that Sen. McCarthy had "encouraged my manner of presentation and my theme" in false statements made during the 1952 political campaign. The hearings were on a motion for a new trial for 13 convicted secondary Communist leaders.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 21 -- Matusow said he had engaged in "lying for money" against hundreds of persons. He said he was paid about $2,000 for making 1952 campaign speeches in which he charged Sen. Mansfield with being "a tool of the Communist Party" and Sen. Jackson with pro-Communist leanings. Matusow also testified that former Communist Elizabeth Bentley told him she gave false testimony before Congressional committees.

Subcommittee Chairman Eastland said Matusow's false statements had been so many that "this Subcommittee...cannot hope to determine what is the truth."

Feb. 22 -- Matusow said he was "specifically" asked by Sen. McCarthy to campaign in 1952. Material given him for speeches contained "handwritten pencilled notes" by McCarthy "showing he intended to attack the Army as far back as 1952," Matusow asserted.

Feb. 23 -- Albert E. Kahn, one of the publishers of Matusow's book, was questioned in a closed session. Eastland said that Kahn was "a Fifth Amendment case" who declined to answer questions. Eastland said it was "obvious" that the firm publishing the book was "a propaganda agency for far-left causes."

McCARTHY CRITICIZES DEMOCRATS

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- McCarthy Feb. 23 charged Sens. John L. McClellan (D Ark.) and Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (D Mo.) with "coaxing" Matusow "to smear Republican Senators." McCarthy said "that places them in a category far below Matusow." He added he "wasn't surprised at anything a confessed perjurer and confessed liar would say." McCarthy Feb. 22 denied that he had sent Matusow to campaign against Sens. Jackson and Mansfield.

Sen. William E. Jenner (R Ind.) said he saw no "coaxing" of Matusow to smear anyone. Jenner said, "you've got to get the truth from this man if you can, and you've got to ask questions to try to get it."

Elizabeth Bentley said Feb. 23 that she had known Matusow only casually and remembered no extensive conversation nor "particular discussions with him." She said there was "not a word of truth" in Matusow's statement about her.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 28 -- Matusow said he was only stating a "belief" and had no "personal" or specific information to back up his charge that many former Communists had lied before Congressional committees or as paid government witnesses. He also said he "believed that sometime or other" he had named persons as Communists in false statements to the FBI.

(Assistant Attorney General W. F. Tompkins, testifying March 1 before the House Appropriations Committee on Department of Justice budget requests, said the Justice Department knew as early as Jan. 22, 1952, that turn-about witness Matusow had been diagnosed as having a "psychoneurosis of a mild but acute form.")

March 1 -- Matusow, questioned about his finances, said he was receiving sizeable royalties from several toys he had invented, and had a new toy ready for marketing -- "a stringless yo-yo." He refused, under the Fifth Amendment, to disclose the manufacturer.

Matusow also invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked if he had testified truthfully in a 1953 probe of certain Texas labor unions. He said he would "like to familiarize" himself with the testimony he had given before answering questions. Matusow said he had lied to the House Un-American Activities Committee on July 12, 1954, when he testified he had not given any false testimony. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 373ff.) He said, "I am not admitting perjury," and added that he was admitting only that "I gave false testimony."

Matusow said his ex-wife told him she had given McCarthy $70,000 rather than the $7,000 listed by the Senate Elections Subcommittee in its 1953 report on McCarthy. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 350.)

LIED ABOUT 244 PERSONS -- MATUSOW

March 2 -- Matusow said he had falsely linked 244 persons with communism in previous Congressional committee hearings. "Some aspect of my testimony relating to every one of these people is false," he said. He would not say what "aspects" had been false, but added "there are many ways to give false testimony." When questioned about publication of his book, "False Witness," Matusow denied that the Communist Party had "promised to take care" of him financially if he wrote the book.

March 7 -- Albert E. Kahn, co-publisher of the book, declined "proudly" on the basis of the Fifth Amendment, to say if he was a Communist.

Kahn testified that the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union (Ind.), expelled from the CIO in 1949 for alleged Communist domination, had advanced his firm $3,250 for 6,700 copies of Matusow's book. Kahn also said he hired Herbert Tank as a "bodyguard" to give Matusow "needed protection" from the Justice Department and "agents, cohorts and aides" of McCarthy.

March 8 -- Tank, a New York writer, said he was paid by Kahn to guard Matusow but was not under orders from the Communist Party and had never been "in the employ" of the Party. Tank invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked if he belonged to the Party and if he had ever done work for the Communists without pay.

Kahn said Harry Sacher, counsel for the 13 Communist leaders against whom Matusow testified, had "broached" the idea of having Matusow make an affidavit of false testimony in that case.

March 9 -- Angus Cameron, Kahn's associate publisher, invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked if he was a Communist. John J. Edmiston, one-time acquaintance of Matusow, called Matusow a "cheap chiseler" and suggested that passages in his diary were "phony."

MATUSOW SENTENCED FOR CONTEMPT

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- United States District Judge R. E. Thomason of El Paso, Texas, March 16 sentenced Matusow to three years in a federal prison for criminal contempt of court. Thomason said Matusow "maliciously lied" in order to gain a new trial for Clinton Jencks, who was convicted in 1954 for lying in a non-Communist affidavit signed under the Taft-Hartley law. Matusow appealed the conviction.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., April 15 announced the Justice Department no longer classed as "consultants" former members of the Communist Party used as government witnesses. Henceforth, Brownell said, ex-Communists would be classified as "expert witnesses," with pay of about $4 a day, instead of consultants, who get $25 or more daily.

TESTIMONY -- April 18 -- Nathan Witt, counsel for the Mine, Mill, and Smelter Workers, Ralph Shapiro, a New York attorney, and Mandel A. Terman, were questioned on the financing of Matusow's book. Each refused to say if he had ever been connected with the Communist Party.

April 19 -- Mrs. Anita Willcox of South Norwalk, Conn., who posted bail for Matusow after his conviction in El Paso, said she had never seen Matusow "nor had any contact with him whatsoever." She said she provided the $10,000 bail at Kahn's request.

Harry Sacher refused to say if he was a Communist. John Lautner, a former Communist from Washington, D.C., said he had attended Communist meetings with Witt and Sacher.

Joseph Starobin, New York writer, invoked the Fifth Amendment and declined to disclose information about Communist affiliations and his financial transactions.

J. H. Morrow of Montana said the $600 which he paid Matusow for "expenses" during a 1952 Montana speaking tour came from a club backing the re-election of ex-Sen. Zales Nelson Ecton (R Mont., 1946-52).

April 20 -- Matusow was questioned about documents he had supplied the Subcommittee and other documents which the Subcommittee had received from the New York court where Matusow testified in February in a hearing on a motion for a new trial for 13 convicted Communists.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Federal Judge Edward J. Dimock of New York April 22 granted a new trial to two secondary Communist leaders convicted on the testimony of Matusow. Sentences of 11 other convicted Communists were allowed to stand because, Dimock said, there was sufficient independent evidence to sustain the guilty verdict.

Dimock said it was "quite likely that Matusow lied both at the trial and in support of the recantation." The judge said Matusow was an "irresponsible witness, a man without regard for the truth, with a passion for the limelight and the need for a few dollars."

Matusow's testimony led to his indictment by a federal grand jury in New York July 13 on six counts of perjury. Matusow pleaded innocent on July 27.

CITATIONS VOTED

ACTION -- The Senate Judiciary Committee July 12 reported three resolutions to cite witnesses before the Internal Security Subcommittee for contempt.

S Res 129 (S Rept 823) would cite Joseph Starobin for refusing under the Fifth Amendment to answer questions about Communist Party affiliation at an April 19 hearing.

S Res 130 (S Rept 824) would cite Harry Sacher for refusing to answer questions on April 19 about cases he had handled.

S Res 131 (S Rept 825) would cite Matusow for refusing to answer questions at a March 1 hearing.

The Senate July 27 and 28 adopted by voice votes the resolutions citing Starobin and Sacher for contempt. The citation against Matusow was dropped because of his July 13 indictment for perjury. (See "Contempt Citations," p. 393.)

Pittsburgh Hearings

HEARINGS -- June 10, 11 and 16 on Communist Party activities in the Pittsburgh, Pa. area.

TESTIMONY -- June 10 -- Joseph D. Mazzei of Pittsburgh, a former FBI undercover agent, described John A. Mullen, political action director for the United Steel Workers (CIO) and a former mayor of Clairton, Pa., as "a Communist Party functionary." Mazzei also said Communists tried to discredit Justice Michael Musmanno of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court "in every way possible" because of a campaign Musmanno waged against the Communists after World War II.

David J. McDonald, steelworkers president, issued a statement supporting Mullen and calling the charges against him "totally unfounded." Acting Subcommittee Chairman Price Daniel (D Texas) said Mullen at a closed hearing denied he was a Communist.

Mazzei's wife, Mary, also a former FBI agent, said she too had seen Mullen at various Communist Party meetings and said he was introduced to her as "Comrade Mullen." Matthew Cvetic and Flavian Stazer, former Pittsburgh Communists, said they had heard that Mullen was a Communist, but said they had no personal knowledge of this.

Musmanno termed as "shocking and inexplicable" Mullen's March, 1953, accusation that the judge had sought dismissal of bribery charges brought by Mullen against two Clairton Councilmen and a coal operator.

June 11 -- Musmanno said he had no reason to suspect Mullen of Communist connections until the union leader accused him of intervening in the bribery case. The justice said he asked the late Philip Murray, former steelworkers president, about charges that Mullen was a Communist and Murray had told him "that is ridiculous." Musmanno added that Mullen had denied having any Communist sympathies. Musmanno was subsequently cleared of the charge by a special three-judge court.

Mullen swore he had never been a Communist Party member. He also denied he had said Musmanno wanted him to drop the bribery charges. Mullen said Musmanno had told him that mutual friends had said "it would be better for me (Mullen)" if the charges were dropped.

June 16 -- District Attorney James F. Malone, Jr., of Allegheny County, Pa., said Mullen had given his office a statement that Musmanno tried to persuade him, on behalf of a "mutual friend," to have the bribery charges dropped. Musmanno, a spectator at the hearing, told Daniel he was "challenging the accuracy, truthfulness, and honesty of several statements" made by Malone.

George E. Dietze, former FBI undercover man in the Pittsburgh Communist Party, said he had been a doorman at Red meetings and swore he had never seen Mullen at any of them. He called charges against him "ridiculous."

Press, Radio Communists

HEARINGS -- June 29, July 13, 14, on communism in the press and radio.

TESTIMONY -- June 29 -- Winston M. Burdett, currently United Nations correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, said he had been "a devoted and dedicated member of the Communist Party" from 1937 to 1942 and had engaged in Communist espionage in Finland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, and Turkey. He said he joined the Party in August, 1937, while employed on the now-defunct "Brooklyn Eagle," and left the Party in 1942, shortly after becoming a full-time reporter for CBS.

Burdett listed the names of various persons he said he knew while he was a Communist, some of them still in the newspaper industry. His espionage activities, he testified, consisted of sounding out officials in the countries in which he was a correspondent and transmitting reports to persons connected with the Soviet Union.

After he decided sometime during the winter of 1941-42 to leave the Communist Party, he said his wife was killed by Iranian tribesmen. He later found out, he said, that her murder had been instigated by the Russians.

CBS issued a statement saying it had known of Burdett's background since 1951 and had decided to continue his employment in the conviction that he had been a loyal citizen since his break. The network also released a letter from Subcommittee Chairman Eastland commending Burdett for his testimony in previous closed Committee meetings.

Milton Kaufman admitted to having been a member of the CIO Newspaper Guild in New York, but took the Fifth Amendment to questions about communism in the Guild. Mrs. Violet Weingarten said she was a Guild member and was not a Communist, but refused to answer any other questions about communism. Lyle Dowling, former Naples editor of "Stars and Stripes," denied being a Communist, but refused to answer other questions concerning Communist affiliation.

June 30 -- Victor Weingarten swore he had not been a Communist since 1940, but refused to answer other questions about communism or his former associates.

Charles Grutzner, a "New York Times" reporter, said he quit the Communist Party in 1940 because it had not been run on "democratic principles." He said he had been recruited in the Party by a fellow "Brooklyn Eagle" worker, Nat Einhorn, whom Burdett also had named.

KOREAN STORY QUESTIONED

Grutzner said he told the "Times" about his past some years ago. He had been working for the paper since late 1940. Grutzner was questioned closely about stories he had written for the "Times" while covering the Korean war, particularly one in which the first mention was made that new-type jet planes were in use by UN forces.

Grutzner said he had filed the story direct to the "Times," that copies had been left with the Korean public relations office, and that the "Times" had cleared the story with the Pentagon before publishing it. He said he learned subsequently that Associated Press and United Press correspondents had filed similar stories through Japan where they had been held up. He denied ever having been told that information on the planes was classified.

Gladys Bentley, a former "Eagle" employee named by Burdett as a Communist, refused to answer questions about communism. Amos Landman, formerly of the "New York Daily Mirror", refused to say whether the signature on an affidavit was his. The affidavit bore the name of Amos Landman and said the signer had been a Communist in 1937 or 1938 but had left the Party in 1939. Landman said he also had worked for the defunct New York "PM", and as a free lance correspondent in the Far East.

July 13 -- Melvin L. Barnet, a "New York Times" copy editor for about two years, said he was on the "Brooklyn Eagle" from 1936 to 1941. He invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked if he had been a Communist Party member at the "Eagle", but said he had not been a Communist since February or March of 1942. The "Times" discharged Barnet immediately after he testified.

David A. Gordon, a "New York Daily News" reporter for six years, said he had been with the "Eagle" from 1933 to 1943 and denied being a Communist "in any way for the past 12 years." He invoked the Fifth Amendment on questions relating to Communist activities at the "Eagle". He admitted having known most of the persons named in previous testimony by Burdett, but refused to say if he had known them as Communists. The "Daily News" fired Gordon July 14.

Landman took the Fifth Amendment when asked if he refused to answer questions to avoid informing on others.

Charles S. Lewis, public affairs director of WCAX radio and television stations in Burlington, Vt., said he had been on the "Eagle" staff from 1929 to 1942. Lewis said he had been a Communist Party member for a few months in 1937 but had quit.

CONTROVERSY OVER GERMAN RADIO

Lewis testified that as head of the radio branch of the Office of Military Government in Germany in the late 1940's he had recommended dismissing Col. William F. Heimlich as director of RIAS (radio in American sector of Germany). Heimlich, currently a Washington, D.C., businessman, said Lewis had wanted him to fire commentators who were "the backbone, blood, and brains of our anti-Communist drive." Lewis said Heimlich had refused to lower the salaries of several station employees.

July 14 -- Ira Henry Freeman, "New York Times" reporter since 1928, said he had joined the Communist Party in 1938 but quit a year later. His connection with the American Newspaper Guild led him to join the Party, Freeman said. He was recruited, he added, by Milton Kaufman, then executive director of the Guild's New York chapter.

Ansel Talbert, "New York Herald Tribune" military and aviation editor, testified about a news story filed from Korea by Charles Grutzner. Talbert said Gen. George C. Stratemeyer "strongly opposed" publishing the information. Talbert denied there was any agreement among Korean correspondents to file the story with a request that their offices clear it with the Pentagon. He said Grutzner filed his story by commercial wireless, despite military warnings not to use that transmission method.

Morgenthau Diary

ACTION -- The Subcommittee June 12 released testimony taken in a closed session from former Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and excerpts from his diary placed in the hearing record in connection with the late Harry Dexter White, a former Treasury aide who was accused of being a Communist informer. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 367.) Additional excerpts were released July 3.

Morgenthau told the Subcommittee that White came to the Treasury in 1934 as one of about 30 economists studying banking practices in the Cleveland Federal Reserve District. He said he did not become acquainted with White until the economist had been with the Treasury for some time.

"No security agent and no individual ever reported or suggested to me that there was any doubt about White's loyalty," Morgenthau said. He added that it was "some time" after he left the Cabinet that he heard of the charges against White. If the charges had been brought to his attention before he left office, Morgenthau said, he would have suspended White and ordered a full investigation.

Eastland July 3 said the excerpts showed White was "in a much more powerful position with the Treasury than has been generally understood." Eastland said White "had a worldwide commercial espionage system reporting to him...(and) an effective political intelligence network."

HEARINGS -- Aug. 30 at Concord, N.H. to seek "previously unrevealed incidents" in White's life; Oct. 28 in Washington on release of Morgenthau's diary.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 30 -- Attorney General Louis C. Wyman of New Hampshire submitted documents he said were discovered in 1953 in White's summer home. White died in New Hampshire in 1948.

Wyman said correspondence files included letters from such persons as former President Harry S. Truman; the late Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius; former Vice President Henry A. Wallace; the late Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson; Morgenthau; and Prof. Kirtley Mather of Harvard University.

Eastland said the papers threw "light on the conduct" of an unnamed individual to be investigated later. He said the papers would aid in a broad inquiry into influences exerted on United States policies in China and Europe.

Oct. 28 -- Morgenthau testified in closed session that he had given the 900 volumes of his diary to the government and that release of the papers was up to federal officials.

J. H. Macomber, Jr., of the General Services Administration said that about 300 pages of some 1,600 requested by the Subcommittee bore a secret classification and were being reviewed for possible declassification by the agencies concerned.

Knowles Probe

HEARING -- Sept. 15 on possible Communist Party activities of Mrs. Mary Knowles.

BACKGROUND -- Mrs. Knowles in May, 1953, invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to tell the Subcommittee whether she was a Communist party member, as charged by Herbert Philbrick, former FBI undercover agent. Mrs. Knowles then was dismissed as a librarian in South Norwood, Mass. Later, she was hired by the William Jeanes Memorial Library in Plymouth Meeting, Pa. The Subcommittee said the Fund for the Republic, which was financed by the Ford Foundation, in June, 1955, awarded $5,000 to the library "for its 'courageous and effective defense of democratic principles' in refusing to discharge Mrs. Knowles on the demand of townspeople."

TESTIMONY -- Sept. 15 -- Mrs. Knowles refused to say whether she ever was a Communist and challenged the right of the Subcommittee to question her. She said that "for many, many years" she had had no connection with any organization on the Attorney General's subversive list. She said the Fund for the Republic award was not a subsidy to the library but was made "for their courageous stand in employing me." Sen. William E. Jenner (R Ind.), sole Subcommittee member at the hearing, said he felt Mrs. Knowles was in contempt.

Jury 'Eavesdropping'

ACTION -- The Subcommittee Oct. 5 ordered an inquiry on recordings made of jury deliberations at Wichita, Kan., as part of a study by the University of Chicago Law School.

Eastland said his group would "recommend whatever legislation...necessary to insure that anyone who so violates the sanctity of the jury room...will find himself in violation of the law." He said violation of the jury system would be "one of the greatest blows ever struck at the integrity of our judicial system."

Chicago University Professor Harry Kalven, director of the project, said the recordings had been made with prior consent and approval of the chief judge, the trial judge, and attorneys for all parties, including the United States District Attorney.

HEARINGS -- Oct. 12, 13, on recordings made of jury deliberations at Wichita, Kan.

TESTIMONY -- Oct. 12 -- Dean Edward H. Levi of the University's law school said the arrangements to record the jury deliberations were made with the consent of the trial judge and Chief Judge Orie L. Phillips of the 10th Judicial Circuit. He said jury deliberation recordings made under proper safeguards could develop information helpful in strengthening the jury system. The recordings were not to be played publicly, he said.

Oct. 13 -- Robert M. Cowger, a former assistant United States attorney for Kansas, said he agreed to permit a University of Chicago research team to record jury deliberations in a condemnation case he was prosecuting for the government in May, 1954.

George Templar, former U.S. attorney for Kansas, said he first learned of the recordings when they were played at the annual conference of the 10th Judicial Circuit in July where "upwards of 75-100 persons were present." William C. Farmer, U.S. attorney for Kansas, who attended the conference, said his impression of the recordings was that they were "strictly a study of jury deliberation and...the...objective" was to determine whether juries were doing their job to the best of their ability and whether judges could improve their instructions and lawyers explain their cases more clearly.

Fred L. Strodtbeck, sociology professor at the University of Chicago, said he thought those at the judicial conference were impressed by the high caliber of the jury and the way it arrived at its verdict in a complicated case.

Paul Kitch, Kansas lawyer, said he "sold" Levi on making the recordings in order to build confidence in the jury system. He said the recordings offered a "fair sampling of what the jury system can accomplish." He said Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark and Solicitor General Simon Sobeloff were at the conference when the recordings were played.

Chicago lawyer Abner J. Mikva said there were many precedents for disclosing "secrets" of jury deliberations. He said judges had been forced in some Kansas cases to allow jurors to testify as to what was said in their closed discussion.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Eastland Oct. 14 ordered the transcript of the hearings on jury "eavesdropping" sent to the House Judiciary Committee, which would originate any impeachment proceedings against federal judges.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., Oct. 22 said chief judge Phillips "never approved the jury eavesdropping and the statements made to the contrary are wrong." Paul Kitch Oct 23 reiterated that Phillips approved the project. The judge Oct. 23 said he "merely gave...opinion and advice. I had no authority to tell them what to do..."

TRANSPORTATION STUDY

The Presidential Advisory Committee on Transport Policy and Organization April 18, 1955, issued a report recommending fewer controls on the transportation industry. Trucking and railroad groups had sharply divided reactions to the report.

Neil J. Curry, president of the American Trucking Associations, said April 19 that "in the guise of attempting to improve competition in transportation, the report ...would ultimately destroy effective competition." Curry added that "restricting the power" of the Interstate Commerce Commission in rate matters would remove from the transportation scene the only effective protection provided by Congress against "dog-eat-dog rate warfare and discrimination between shippers, commodities and territories..." He said truckers felt they could not survive the "unbridled money power" of the railroads if the ICC's power were curtailed.

However, President William T. Faricy of the Association of American Railroads April 21 said the "report,...recognizing as it does that changed conditions in transportation call for corresponding changes in government policy, is distinctly encouraging."

A House subcommittee held a series of hearings in October to hear a discussion and explanation of the report. Bills (S 1920, HR 6141, HR 6142) to carry out the report's recommendations were introduced in 1955 but no action was taken on them.

Background

The Advisory Committee was established by President Eisenhower on July 12, 1954. Members included Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, chairman, Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, and Director Arthur S. Flemming of the Office of Defense Mobilization. Ad hoc participating members were Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey, Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield, and Budget Director Rowland R. Hughes.

To assist it, the Committee appointed a Working Group of transportation analysts from outside the government. Under the direction of Arthur W. Page, a director and former vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., the Group invited members of the transportation industry to submit views on the soundness of existing transportation policy. The Group also used data and information from government sources for its report to the Committee. This report was not made public.

In his 1955 State of the Union message President Eisenhower said the Committee was "thoroughly examining existing federal transportation policies to determine their effect on the adequacy of transportation services. This is the first such comprehensive review directly undertaken by the executive branch of the government in modern times. We are not only examining major problems facing the various modes of transport, we are also studying closely the inter-relationships of civilian and government requirements for transportation. Legislation will be recommended to correct policy deficiencies which we may find."

The Advisory Committee submitted its report to the President and it was released April 18, 1955.

Major Conclusions

What were major conclusions?

The introduction of the report said:

"Within the short span of one generation this country has witnessed a transportation revolution....

"As late as 1920, the railroads held a virtual monopoly of intercity transportation with the exception of areas served by water....

"Today a wide selection of transport methods (is available) for the movement of goods and people from one place to another with economy, expedition, and safety....

"In major respects, government (at all levels) has played a decisive role in these fast moving and dynamic changes in the organization, financing, and operation of the nation's domestic transportation services....

"During this same period, government has failed to keep pace with this change and has, in fact, intensified its regulation of transportation....

"Paradoxically, the underlying concept of this regulation has continued to be based on the historic assumption that transportation is monopolistic, despite the fact that the power of individual transportation enterprises to exercise monopoly control has been rapidly eliminated by the growth of pervasive competition....

"The dislocations which have emerged from this intensified competition, on the one hand, and the restraining effects of public regulation on the other, have borne heavily on the common carrier segment of the transportation industry."

The Committee concluded that:

"The transportation industry operates today in the general atmosphere of pervasive competition.

"Adjustment of regulatory programs and policies to these competitive facts is long overdue.

"The restoration and maintenance of a progressive and financially strong system of common carrier transportation is of paramount importance to the public interest."

Major Objectives

Major objectives listed in the report:

- "Increased reliance on competitive forces of transportation in ratemaking in order:

"(a) to have transportation enterprises function under a system of dynamic competition which will speed up technical innovation and foster the development of new rate and service concepts.

"(b) to enable each form of transport to reflect its abilities in the market by aggressive experimentation in rates and service in order to demonstrate to the full its possibilities for service to the shipping and traveling public.

- "Maintenance of a modernized and financially strong system of common carrier transportation.
- "Encouragement of increased efficiency and economy in the management of all transportation services in order to give the ultimate consumer the benefit of the lowest possible transportation costs.
- "Development of an efficient transportation system for defense mobilization or war."

Recommendations

Recommendations of the Presidential Committee:

Rate Control -- Limit regulatory authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission to determination of reasonable minimum or maximum rates....

Suspension Powers -- Continue on a more restrictive basis ICC's authority to suspend proposed changes in rates, shorten suspension period to three months instead of seven.

Long-and-Short Haul Clause -- Remove requirement that rail or water common carriers obtain prior approval before making certain changes in rates if changes were necessary to meet actual competition and the change was not less than a minimum reasonable rate.

Volume Freight Rates -- Make lawful volume rates based on cost differences when rates were established to meet competition.

Private Carriers -- Define a private motor vehicle carrier as any person not included in definition of a common or a contract carrier who transported property he owned, provided the property was not acquired for the purpose of transporting and selling it.

Contract Carriers -- Redefine motor and water contract carriage as transportation providing services for hire but otherwise equivalent to...private carriage.

Bulk Exemptions -- Repeal the bulk commodity exemption granted water carriers so such transportation would be subject to regulation similar to other forms of transportation.

Freight Forwarders -- Provide statutory standards for determining which cooperative shippers or associations distributing volume freight on a non-profit basis are entitled to exemption from regulation.

Service Deficits -- Empower the ICC to override certain state service requirements if continuing service would result in a net revenue loss or unduly burden commerce; provided reasonably adequate service remained available.

Government Rates -- Continue permitting carriers to establish voluntary special rates for government transportation, but subject such rates to provisions of the Act, with certain exceptions.

Policy Clauses

Key clauses of existing and recommended policies on transportation (emphasis supplied):

Existing Policy -- "It is hereby declared to be the national transportation policy of the Congress to provide for fair and impartial regulation of all modes of transportation...so administered as to recognize and preserve the inherent advantages of each; to promote safe, adequate, economical, and efficient service and foster sound economic conditions in transportation and among the several carriers; to encourage the establishment and maintenance of reasonable charges for transportation services, without unjust discriminations, undue preferences or advantages, or unfair or destructive competitive practices...." (Interstate Commerce Act, as amended. 54 Stat 899)

Recommended Policy -- "To provide for and develop, under the free enterprise system of dynamic competition, a strong, efficient and financially sound national transportation industry....

"To encourage and promote full competition between modes of transportation at charges not less than reasonable minimum charges, or more than reasonable maximum charges,...

"To reduce economic regulation of the transportation industry to the minimum consistent with the public interest to the end that the inherent economic advantages...of each mode of transportation may be realized in such a manner so as to reflect its full competitive capabilities." (Report of the Presidential Advisory Committee and proposed legislation)

An indication of the comparative positions of the railroad and trucking industries since 1930 is shown on the following chart, which gives the percentage of ton-miles carried over railroads, highways, and waterways:

Year	Railroads	Highways	Waterways	Total Ton-Miles (millions)
1930	73.1%	4.5%	16.4%	528,069
1935	67.7	8.1	16.2	419,251
1940	61.5	9.5	19.3	610,473
1945	67.4	6.1	14.1	1,014,884
1950	57.5	14.1	15.9	1,029,716
1953	52.8	15.6	17.4	1,164,671

Percentages will not total 100 as pipelines and airlines are excluded.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Transportation and Communications Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Sept. 19-21 on the report of the Advisory Committee on Transport Policy and Organization.

TESTIMONY -- Sept. 19 -- Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks said the Advisory Committee's recommendations were "not aimed at giving one form of transportation an unfair advantage over another." He urged limiting the Interstate Commerce Commission's regulatory authority "to the prescription of reasonable minimum and maximum rates." Weeks denied trucking industry charges that abolition of ICC's price-fixing system would give the railroads an unfair advantage over their competitors.

He said the recommendations were designed to "strengthen" publicly regulated common carriers -- both railroad and motor transport -- against contract truckers and "private" trucking fleets owned by manufacturers. Weeks said the changes would strengthen the common carrier system, which was steadily weakening.

Director Arthur S. Flemming of the Office of Defense Mobilization said the policy proposed new safeguards in determining reasonable maximum rates where it could be shown the carrier had no effective competition for certain traffic.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson also endorsed the proposed new policy. He said "greater flexibility in rate making will enable common carrier management to adjust rates more readily, and rates will be permitted to reflect cost advantages whenever they exist and to their full extent." He added: "It is the common carrier segment of our transportation industry upon which primary reliance must be placed in the event of an emergency."

RAILROADS, TRUCKERS DIFFER

Sept. 20 -- J. Carter Fort of the Association of American Railroads said the Association generally favored the recommendations of the Advisory Committee. He supported a recommendation providing, in effect, that a regulated carrier should not be barred from establishing a competitive rate merely because of its effect on another form of transportation. "In resisting the recommendations of the Advisory Committee with respect to competitive rates, the truckers are attempting to protect traffic for which they are not economically qualified and which they can be assured of only as a result of artificial restraints upon their competitors," he said.

James F. Pinkney of the American Trucking Associations, Inc., predicted that adoption of the new policy would lead to a "rate-cutting war" with "the inevitable effect of driving the independent trucking industry out of business." He said, "If carriers were permitted to establish rates solely at their discretion, it is inevitable that competitively made rates would favor the large shipper, the large producing and consuming communities, and the commodities moving in heavy volume as against the small shipper, the small community, and the commodity which moves in small volume." "Chaos" would result if the government discarded "the wealth of administrative and judicial precedent" built up around existing policy, he said.

Sept. 21 -- Giles Morrow of the Freight Forwarders Institute said his industry was faced with "cut-throat competition of fly-by-night operators." He endorsed a proposal to set up more exacting standards to specify which groups of shippers acting together were subject to federal regulation.

Chester C. Thompson of the American Waterways Operators, Inc., assailed the recommendations of the Advisory Committee as "ill-advised" and a "hunting license for the railroads." He said "the overall policy announced publicly by the Administration with respect to the small businessman is being absolutely contravened by the new transportation policy announced by the Cabinet committee.."

Dave Beck, AFL Teamsters Union president, in a statement said limitation of ICC regulatory authority would bring back "the good old days of railroad monopoly and unlimited power."

DIXON-YATES CONTRACT

Controversy over the Dixon-Yates power contract extended throughout the 1955 session of Congress. Although President Eisenhower ordered the contract cancelled July 11, Congressmen found the subject too good a political football to drop.

The issue of public versus private power was in the fore during lengthy hearings. When they concluded, an interim report by a panel of the Senate Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee strongly censured motives and actions by top government officials. The role of Adolphe H. Wenzell, Budget Bureau consultant and officer of the company acting as financial agent to Dixon-Yates, was sharply criticized.

The Atomic Energy Commission Nov. 23 ruled the contract invalid and said the government would not pay settlement costs. Wenzell's "conflicting private interest" while advising the government was cited by the AEC as the basis of its decision.

The Dixon-Yates contract provided that a private utility group build a $107,250,000 steam generating plant at West Memphis, Ark. The power was to be fed into the Tennessee Valley Authority system to replace power furnished by TVA to Atomic Energy Commission installations.

Background

REFERENCE -- "Atomic Energy Program." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 534ff.)

The Dixon-Yates controversy grew out of increased demand for power in the TVA area, particularly by the AEC, whose nuclear plants were expected to absorb approximately half of TVA's output by 1957.

In 1953, with the power need expected to become most critical in the Memphis area, President Truman sought funds for a proposed TVA-owned steam plant at Fulton Landing, Tenn. TVA respresentatives estimated that the cost of the plant would be $100 million, with the government borrowing this amount at 2½ percent interest. The proposal was rejected by Congress principally because it did not feel TVA should be expanded further, especially for a power facility that was not hydroelectric.

In 1954, TVA asked the Eisenhower Administration to approve construction of eight new steam generating plants with 1,395,000 kilowatts capacity. This request was denied by Joseph M. Dodge, director of the Bureau of the Budget. Dodge Jan. 4 proposed, instead, that the AEC release 500,000 to 600,000 kilowatts of TVA power for distribution elsewhere in the valley by contracting to buy an equivalent amount from private sources for its uranium-enriching plant at Paducah, Ky.

President Eisenhower, in his 1954 budget message, said "no appropriations are included in the 1955 fiscal budget for new power generation units by the Tennessee Valley Authority." The Budget Bureau explained later that the Administration wanted time to restudy "the respective needs of the federal government, TVA and private enterprise in this whole matter, without denying the region adequate power in the interim."

DIXON-YATES ORIGIN

At this point Dixon and Yates entered the picture. Edgar H. Dixon, president of Middle South Utilities, Inc., proposed supplying TVA with 450,000 kilowatts of power to be delivered at their Memphis terminal. On Feb. 20, 1954 the Budget Bureau asked Eugene A. Yates, president of the Southern Company, a utility holding company with subsidiaries bordering the TVA region on the South, if he would cooperate with Dixon in furnishing a plan to provide the new power. Yates agreed, and on Feb. 25 the AEC received the initial plan of what became known as the "Dixon-Yates proposal."

A revised plan was submitted April 10 because certain terms in the original proposal were not acceptable to the government. The second plan called for erection of a $107,250,000 plant at West Memphis on a 25-year contract with Dixon-Yates. The plant would feed 500,000 kilowatts of electricity into the TVA transmission system at Memphis, leaving the existing AEC load at Paducah undisturbed, and another 100,000 kilowatts to AEC's Oak Ridge, Tenn. plants.

Disapproval of the plan was registered April 22 by TVA officials, particularly with regard to cost estimates.

The AEC received an alternative proposal May 27 from a New York finance syndicate headed by Walter Von Tresckow. This was largely a financing arrangement for a plant at the TVA-recommended site of Fulton, Tenn. The AEC recommended against the plan on June 9.

The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy began hearings June 18 on amendments to the Atomic Energy Act of 1946, partially with the proposed Dixon-Yates contract in mind. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 538ff.) The amended act, passed Aug. 17, required, in part, that AEC power contracts be submitted to the Joint Committee for its approval.

CONTRACT APPROVED

The AEC on November 10 voted to approve the Dixon-Yates contract, as amended. Contract changes included provisions for arbitration, a limit on profits to be realized by the contractor, and a recapture clause permitting the government to take over the proposed plant at any time within three years. The contract was signed November 11. Nov. 13, the GOP-controlled Joint Atomic Energy Committee in effect approved the contract by voting, 10-8, to waive the 30-day waiting period required in the new atomic energy law.

The Securities and Exchange Commission began hearings on the contract Dec. 7. The Dixon-Yates proposal was for the purchase of $5.5 million in capital stock in Mississippi Valley Generating Company, a new corporation set up to build and operate the plant. The balance reportedly would be raised by borrowing from banks and other institutions.

In an effort to prove the Dixon-Yates contract "detrimental to the interests of investors and consumers," the state of Tennessee, joined by 40 municipalities, consumer groups and cooperatives in the TVA area, Dec. 7 called on the SEC to compel the private utility firms to produce all their papers relating to the contract. The utilities group opposed as a "fishing expedition" the introduction of such evidence. Opposition attorneys said the papers were needed to determine if the formation of Mississippi Valley Generating Co. by Middle South Utilities and the Southern Co. would bring about a concentration of control of public utilities in violation of the Public Utility Holding Company Act.

The SEC Dec. 9 granted opposition attorneys the right to cross-examine the private power group's witnesses on private conversations which led up to public negotiation of the Dixon-Yates contract.

Hearings ended Dec. 21, and on Jan. 11, 1955 the SEC recommended approval of the contract.

REACTIONS

Public and private power groups were quick to show their preferences. The National Rural Electric Cooperative Association and the American Public Power Association were leading opponents of the contract. Favoring the contract were the National Association of Electric Companies and business groups interested in getting government out of commercial enterprises.

The NAEC Jan. 3 issued a pamphlet which said the Dixon-Yates power contract "stands out as an example of industry and government working together to build up the nation's military and economic strength." The pamphlet, according to the Association, was published to "help create an informed body of opinion on this important subject." P. L. Smith, president of NAEC, said the booklet would also "help clear up misconceptions and misinformation." According to the publication, the AEC estimated that power under terms of the contract would be available at "lower rates, on a comparable basis, than under any other existing AEC contract for power."

Harold Quinton, president of Edison Electric Institute, a research group for private utilities, said Feb. 2 that the Dixon-Yates combine was "doing a splendid service in the public interest in standing firm" on the controversial power contract. In a telegram to Dixon, Quinton said: "I want to state that the investor-owned electric power industry wholeheartedly supports the basic philosophy of the government in calling on private enterprise to perform these jobs. The contract is a splendid example of cooperation between private citizens and government."

From this point on, hearings by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Senate Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee were interspersed with charges of "politics" and demands for investigations of motives and persons involved in the Dixon-Yates contract.

PRESIDENT CANCELS CONTRACT

On July 6, President Eisenhower told a press conference he would cancel the contract if Memphis went ahead with proposed plans to build a generating plant. A final decision to cancel the contract was announced July 11 by Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr. after Memphis Mayor Frank Tobey assured the President the city had positive plans for the plant.

This was not the end of the controversy, however, for hearings continued on the roles played by various agencies and individuals in the transactions. On Aug. 22 an interim report on its hearings was issued by a panel of the Senate Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee, including Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.), Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.), and William Langer (R N.D.). The report said the Dixon-Yates deal was a "usurpation of Congressional responsibilities and functions...a deliberate effort to reverse power policy in the Tennessee Valley by devious, indirect and improper administrative practices..."

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Joint Atomic Energy.

ACTION -- Jan. 27 -- The 10-member Democratic majority voted to adopt a resolution designed to block the Dixon-Yates power contract. The resolution, offered by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.), called for rescission of the 1954 resolution which authorized AEC to execute the contract ahead of schedule. The 1955 resolution also recommended that AEC cancel the contract.

Jan. 28 -- The resolution was adopted on a 10-8 party-line vote.

Feb. 3 -- The Committee released a report based on 1954 hearings defending the proposed power contract. Republicans, who controlled the Committee at the time the report was written, termed the contract "proper" and said the real issue was whether TVA should be allowed to continue power output expansion indefinitely "subsidized by federal funds."

The Democratic minority said the contract was "fundamentally wrong", the AEC "has been distracted from its primary task of assuring our country world leadership in atomic energy," and there "is still no assurance that the present contract adequately protects the interests of the government and the American taxpayers."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss said Feb. 8 that the AEC, at a Feb. 5 meeting, "resolved, by majority vote, that it would not now cancel" the Dixon-Yates power contract as requested by the Joint Committee.

On Feb. 7 the Securities and Exchange Commission rejected a demand of the state of Tennessee for additional hearings on the contract. The SEC Feb. 9 approved financing of the project by a 4-1 vote.

CHARGES DISPUTED

HEARINGS -- Jan. 31-Feb. 10 on the state of the atomic energy industry.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 31 -- Thomas E. Murray, AEC commissioner, said he favored the resolution the Committee adopted Jan. 28 calling upon AEC to drop the Dixon-Yates proposal. He called the project a "drain on (the) time and energies" of the AEC.

Feb. 1 -- Strauss said "it is unfortunate and inaccurate to give...the impression of any slow-down or discontinuity in our progress" as a result of the Dixon-Yates controversy. He asserted that "the production of atomic weapons...is at an all-time high."

Feb. 8 -- Murray reiterated his opposition to the contract and said it had taken about 2,087 hours of Commission time since November, 1954.

Feb. 10 -- Strauss said "a false impression" was given by Murray in his statistics. Strauss said Murray omitted to say that three of AEC's most important divisions -- military applications, reactor development, and research -- had spent no time at all on the contract.

The Dixon-Yates combine announced Feb. 12 that it had used its option to buy a site near West Memphis, Ark., for its proposed plant. Edgar Dixon said the company was "just about ready to go" with actual construction.

Reps. Chet Holifield (D Calif.) and Melvin Price (D Ill.) of the Joint Committee Feb. 15 asked the SEC to hold new hearings on the Dixon-Yates contract. They charged the SEC with "excessively restrictive rulings."

The state of Tennessee March 14 asked the U.S. Court of Appeals for an order blocking the financing of the Dixon-Yates power contract. The state asked the court to set aside the Feb. 9 order which authorized the first phase of the financing (a stock issue). On Feb. 18, the SEC denied a petition for rehearing on the stock issue filed on behalf of Tennessee and municipalities within the state which were protesting the contract.

The General Accounting Office April 1 sharply criticized previous work by Ebasco Services, Inc., a New York engineering and construction firm scheduled to design and supervise construction of the plant. The report advised the AEC to get "contractual assurance" that any increase in Ebasco's cost estimate for Dixon-Yates would not be paid by the government through higher power rates.

The AEC April 21 approved, by majority vote, the hiring of Ebasco Services as "architect-engineer and construction management contractor" for the plant.

Monopoly Subcommittee Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 27 -- Aug. 3 on the role of the Budget Bureau in the Dixon-Yates contract.

TESTIMONY -- June 27 -- Budget Director Rowland Hughes said the Bureau retained Adolphe H. Wenzell in 1953 as an unpaid consultant on the accounting system of TVA, "particularly as to comparison of its annual reports of earnings with private industry...." Wenzell was simultaneously an officer of the First Boston Corp., a New York financing house which represented Dixon-Yates. Hughes insisted that Wenzell was not present at meetings when proposals to finance the power plant were discussed.

(In a Senate speech Feb. 18, Lister Hill (D Ala.) declared that an official of the First Boston Corp., an investment house that handles utility financing, acted as a consultant to the Bureau of the Budget "during the very period when the Dixon-Yates deal was being put together. There exists persuasive evidence that this man participated in conferences and meetings on the Dixon-Yates matter, which were held in the Budget Bureau, at the very time when the First Boston Co. was making arrangements for financing the Dixon-Yates plant" Hill said.

(The official was identified as Wenzell, vice president of First Boston, who was an adviser to the Budget Bureau in May-Sept., 1953, and was recalled to the Bureau from January-April, 1954, to work on "technical aspects" of the Dixon-Yates proposal.)

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Subcommittee Chairman Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.), June 28 told the Senate of an apparent effort "to conceal and hide the true facts" in the Dixon-Yates contract. He said his Subcommittee investigators were refused access to Budget Bureau files.

Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) June 30 denied Kefauver's charges and said "at no time did Mr. Wenzell act for the Bureau of the Budget or any other agency for the transaction of business with the First Boston Corp. or the Dixon-Yates interests."

President Eisenhower June 30 asked Budget Director Hughes to determine whether the Dixon-Yates contract currently was in the interests of the Tennessee Valley. The President said the study was needed because of a June 23 decision of the City of Memphis, Tenn., to build its own generating plant rather than take Dixon-Yates power.

FBI AGENTS CALLED IN

TESTIMONY -- July 6 -- Kefauver said it was "distasteful" to him to have discovered FBI agents had been ordered by Attorney General Brownell "to conduct an inquiry into the good faith of the Mayor and City Commission of Memphis." Justice Department officials had said the FBI was being used because it was the "easiest and the fastest" way to get desired data on the plans of Memphis.

Paul L. Miller, an assistant vice president of First Boston Corp., was asked about that company's selection as the Dixon-Yates financial agent, and the role played by Wenzell. Miller said Wenzell called him to Washington, more than a month before the first Dixon-Yates proposal was made, to attend a meeting with Wenzell, Edgar H. Dixon, and AEC Chairman Strauss.

Chairman Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.) of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, a hearing spectator, said the Administration omitted all mention of Wenzell, Miller and First Boston in its account, published Aug. 21, 1954, of negotiations leading to the Dixon-Yates contract.

Miller denied he was called into the discussion because his company expected a fee for its advice. He said Wenzell kept him "very generally" informed about developments.

July 7 -- Miller said the sale of $100 million in bonds to finance the Dixon-Yates company still was subject to approval by the SEC. However, he disagreed with Anderson, who suggested the contract could be cancelled without cost.

Kefauver said he would write the Comptroller General suggesting payments be held up on the grounds that testimony before the Subcommittee showed "a highly questionable relationship" between First Boston and the government, and there was "in fact no contract" since "the debt money arrangement has not been finally acted upon."

PRESIDENT DEFENDS WENZELL ROLE

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- President Eisenhower July 6 said the contract would be cancelled if Memphis went ahead with its plans for a municipal power plant. He also said Wenzell had played a proper role in the negotiations. He told his press conference he regarded the decision of Memphis to build the plant as in line with his philosophy of local responsibility for power where other factors were not involved.

TESTIMONY -- July 8 -- Arthur H. Dean, counsel for the First Boston Corp., expressed surprise that the role of First Boston and Wenzell in Dixon-Yates negotiations was not generally known. He said Wenzell's experience might illustrate "that no private citizen ever ought to try to render a public service."

Wenzell said he made an "objective" study of power in the Tennessee Valley area from which he outlined four plans. One would have established a special generating company to feed power into the TVA area, a plan similar to the Dixon-Yates proposal.

Under questioning, Wenzell agreed he opposed public power and considered any expansion of TVA "galloping socialism." He said First Boston paid his salary during his work for the Budget Bureau because it was "a chance to do a public duty for the Administration."

Wenzell said he attended six meetings on Dixon-Yates at AEC headquarters in the spring of 1954. Kefauver said this refuted earlier testimony by Administration officials that Wenzell had no policy-making role. Wenzell produced the report he had made to the Budget Bureau. It was made public July 9.

Kefauver said the report showed TVA was "attacked in the dark, behind its back, and with no chance to reply."

July 11 -- Wenzell was questioned on his work for the Budget Bureau. He recalled an interview with Strauss, but said he could not recall the topic.

CONTRACT CANCELLED

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- The Administration's decision to cancel the contract was announced July 11 by Brownell, after Mayor Frank Tobey of Memphis had assured the President the city had positive plans to provide its own power.

TESTIMONY -- July 12 -- Chairman J. Sinclair Armstrong of the SEC declined to answer questions as to whether a decision to cancel SEC hearings into Dixon-Yates financing, June 13, was made under pressure from any other executive agency. Kefauver noted the hearings did not reopen until June 16, the date upon which the House voted on the Public Works appropriation measure providing funds for Dixon-Yates. (See pp. 227ff.)

July 13 -- Armstrong said Brownell told him he could answer the questions he had avoided the previous day. He said his refusal to answer had been based upon a 1954 ruling that inter-departmental discussions were privileged. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 353.) SEC is an independent agency not under direct control of the President.

Armstrong said Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams had asked him to suspend the Dixon-Yates finance hearings. He said Adams thought it might be necessary to have government attorneys intervene, but decided not to do so. Armstrong declined to answer detailed questions about his conversation with Adams

(On July 13 the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy held hearings on cancellation of the Dixon-Yates contract. See below.)

July 18 -- Chairman George D. Woods of the First Boston Corp. said he initiated contacts between his company and former Budget Bureau Director Joseph M. Dodge in May, 1953. Woods said he was "at a loss" to understand why Hughes said he was not aware First Boston was the Dixon-Yates financial agent.

July 19 -- Woods said he obtained Wenzell's report on the TVA a few weeks after it was completed, while Members of Congress were unable to get copies. He said he then sent two vice presidents to Tennessee for official talks with TVA officials to "continue the policy inaugurated" when he offered help to Dodge. Woods denied his approach to Dodge was for the purpose of "breaking up TVA."

Dean said conflict of interest laws did not apply to "intermittent" experts retained by the government, and Wenzell was not liable under them.

SHERMAN ADAMS DECLINES TO TESTIFY

July 20 -- Sinclair Armstrong said Sherman Adams mentioned the TVA appropriation when they talked of postponing the SEC hearing. Asked if he discussed the Subcommittee hearings with Adams during the last week, Armstrong declined to reply, claiming the matter was "completely privileged."

July 21 -- Kefauver said Adams refused a Subcommittee invitation to testify.

Kenneth E. Fields, AEC general manager, declined to say whether he and other AEC staff members had been in touch with other government officials when they were preparing a chronology of the Dixon-Yates contract from which the names of Wenzell and Miller had been removed.

July 27 -- Robert A. McDowell, SEC director of corporate regulation, said he believed the Dixon-Yates contract had met legal requirements.

Armstrong said he had been directed not to testify about a July 13 telephone conversation with Adams. He said his instructions came from Brownell, through White House counsel Gerald Morgan. Armstrong said he already had told the Subcommittee every detail in which SEC had dealt with Dixon-Yates financing.

Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) said he hoped President Eisenhower would "suggest" that Adams give the Subcommittee "the full details of the Dixon-Yates deal."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Edgar H. Dixon July 27 said cancellation of the Dixon-Yates contract was a victory for the Eisenhower Administration.

President Eisenhower July 27 said former Budget director Dodge, currently a Presidential assistant, had been directed to testify fully on the contract.

TESTIMONY -- July 29 -- Kefauver said SEC hearings on Dixon-Yates financing were "a fraud and a sham." Kefauver said "the record clearly shows a situation was created which made it impossible for...(SEC) to sit...as an impartial and unbiased judge...."

Armstrong said Kefauver made an "unwarranted conclusion." He added that SEC had decided the question of Dixon-Yates financing "on the record before it."

McDowell said he did not think Wenzell's role in negotiations had anything to do with the financing decision.

A letter was received from Adams confirming his refusal to testify. Kefauver asked Adams to change his decision. Adams replied his "position has not changed."

Aug. 1 -- Kefauver said Adams' refusal to testify indicated he had knowledge which "he and the President do not want this Committee and the public to have."

DIXON DESCRIBES PLAN

Dixon said he had known Wenzell "casually" and denied that Wenzell or any other official of the First Boston Corp. was consulted in regard to the Dixon-Yates contract negotiations.

Dixon said he had "no idea what in the world he (Wenzell) did." Sen. William Langer (R N.D.) told Dixon: "I want you to know that I believe you are lying right now."

Dixon said money costs were discussed "informally" with Wenzell from time to time "as a means of checking our own informed judgment." Dixon said the Dixon-Yates plan was his own idea and "a sound idea." He added he thought the President "did exactly right" in cancelling the contract.

Aug 2 -- Dixon was questioned about the functions of Wenzell during preparation of the Dixon-Yates contract. Langer moved that the testimony of Dixon and Wenzell be referred to the Justice Department for possible perjury action. Kefauver said some of Dixon's testimony contained "glaring conflicts." An attorney representing Dixon protested Kefauver's statement, claimed Dixon had been consistent in his testimony.

Joseph M. Dodge, former Budget director, said the policy decision on the Dixon-Yates contract was his alone. He said Wenzell's name might have been omitted from the official Dixon-Yates chronology because he was not a "principal." Dodge described Wenzell as "a technical consultant." Earlier, Dixon described Wenzell as "a courier."

Dodge said a report on TVA written by Wenzell for the Budget Bureau had been given to President Eisenhower and to former President Herbert Hoover. Hoover said he thought the report was a good one, said Dodge. Asked what he thought of Wenzell giving a copy of the report to Woods, (chairman of First Boston Corp.), Dodge replied, "I don't like it."

Kefauver asked Dodge why he, a Presidential assistant, could come before the Subcommittee while another assistant was not available. Dodge said he was testifying as a former Budget Bureau director and not in his capacity as a Presidential assistant.

GOVERNMENT PAYMENT IN ORDER

During the hearings an opinion by Assistant Comptroller General Frank H. Weitzell was discussed. Weitzell held the Dixon-Yates contract in order, unless wrongdoing could be demonstrated, and penalty clauses against the government valid. Weitzell's opinion, written for the AEC, suggested the contract could best be closed out by negotiation.

Aug. 3 -- Kefauver said Dixon had transgressed federal law in taking up his official duties with the Mississippi Valley Generating Co. because a person could not be a director or official of more than one utility, unless Federal Power Commission permission was obtained. Kefauver said Dixon "acted at his own peril" in acquiring land and equipment before SEC approval of Dixon-Yates financing plans.

Dixon said the decision to go ahead was a matter of business judgment. He said he anticipated no difficulty in reaching a satisfactory settlement with the government, told reporters cancellation charges would be "well under" an estimate of $5.5 million.

REPORT CRITICIZES OFFICIALS

ACTION -- The three-man Subcommittee panel Aug. 22 issued an interim report saying the investigation had raised questions as to "the proper role and the integrity of independent, quasi-judicial agencies, and honesty and uprightness in government."

The report said officials of the Eisenhower Administration had shown "contempt of Congress and its constitutional powers" through the use of "devious, indirect, and improper administrative practices." Officials criticized included Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams, Budget Director Rowland Hughes, and SEC Chairman J. Sinclair Armstrong. "One of the shameful things about the Dixon-Yates deal is the way the President's staff has played fast and loose with the facts even where he is concerned," the report added.

The report also accused Administration officials of "a broad effort" to hide the part played by Adolphe Wenzell in Dixon-Yates negotiations. The contract was "a deliberate effort to reverse power policy in the Tennessee Valley," the report contended. "Misuse of independent agencies, suppression, concealment" had been used to attain that end.

The report was signed by panel chairman Kefauver, Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.), and William Langer (R N.D.).

Atomic Energy Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Joint Atomic Energy.

HEARINGS -- July 13 on the cancellation of the Dixon-Yates contract.

TESTIMONY -- AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss said preliminary plans had been drawn up to terminate the contract, but that the agency was still awaiting direct instructions to proceed. He said he had believed Adolphe Wenzell was only representing First Boston Corp., not the Budget Bureau, when he met with him in January, 1954.

William Mitchell, AEC general counsel, said the Dixon-Yates contract was fully effective and a binding obligation of the government, a view criticized by Committee Chairman Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.). Anderson said Mitchell had told the Committee in November, 1954, the contract could not be in force until it cleared all legal and financial barriers with the SEC. This had not been achieved, and the contract could not be binding, Anderson contended.

ACTION -- The Committee July 26 and 28, in executive session refused to sanction draft legislation designed by the AEC to facilitate cancellation of the agreement with the Mississippi Valley Generating Co.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Rep. Joe L. Evins (D Tenn.) July 30 said a House Small Business Committee hearing July 28 learned three FPC attorneys had severely criticized the Dixon-Yates contract.

Evins said FPC Chairman Jerome K. Kuykendall failed to tell this to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee in November, 1954, when he testified "our attorneys had not passed" on the contract.

Anderson July 30 released identical letters written to the AEC, Justice Department, and Budget Bureau in which they were asked to furnish monthly reports of all conferences, phone calls, and correspondence relating in any way to cancellation of the Dixon-Yates contract.

On Oct. 7, Strauss said the AEC would "hold in abeyance the negotiation" of a settlement of the Dixon-Yates contract pending an analysis of its validity. Strauss said the AEC had "been conducting a study of the potential effects upon the contract of questions of possible conflict of interest and public policy."

CONTRACT HELD INVALID

On Nov. 23 the AEC ruled that the contract was invalid and "not an obligation which can be recognized by the United States." The decision was based on an opinion by AEC's general counsel, William Mitchell, who found, on the basis of Wenzell's role, that "there is a substantial question as to the validity of the contract which can only be settled in the courts."

Mitchell's opinion said, "It appears that Wenzell, while having a conflicting private interest, acted as one of the principal advisers of the government" in the negotiation and formation of contract terms. The attorney said that between January and April, 1954, Wenzell attended a series of meetings with government officials and "also met with Dixon eight or ten times during this period, including occasions when other government representatives were not present." Mitchell added that "the matters on which Wenzell was advising the contractor (Dixon) were the same on which he had been employed to advise the government."

Mitchell said Wenzell's government superiors did not know of his alleged conflicting interests, but that "there is no evidence the government was damaged" by them.

Dixon announced in New York that the firm would "promptly file an appropriate action in the courts," adding, "We are confident of the outcome."

COMMITTEE -- Anti-Monopoly Subcommittee.

RESUMED HEARINGS -- Dec. 5 on the cancelled Dixon-Yates contract.

TESTIMONY -- AEC Chairman Strauss, citing the constitutional separation of government powers, refused to say whether he had discussed with White House officials the contract's repudiation. He said it would be "a natural inference" he did advise the White House of "the possibility of fraud....My views have never altered in respect to the fact that the objectives of this contract were sound, economic and in the public interest." Strauss said the only times he talked with Wenzell, he thought Wenzell represented only the First Boston Corp. "I did not ask Wenzell -- I should have, perhaps -- whether he had any other interests."

Sen. O'Mahoney told Strauss: "There has been the utmost attempt on the part of witnesses from the government...to conceal the facts.... You should not have allowed your President to have gotten himself into such a position."

William Mitchell, AEC general counsel, said "I found no probable fraud...I did not come to any conclusion that there had been violations of the criminal code." He refused to give the names of staff lawyers who helped draft his opinion on the contract, said he took the responsibility for the opinion.

Budget Director Rowland R. Hughes refused, on the basis of privileged communications, to say whether he had discussed the contract with Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams. Referring to his Bureau, Hughes said, "We have nothing to be ashamed of. We have made mistakes, Lord knows, but there was nothing phoney, or dishonest, or any conspiracy with anybody."

UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES

The House Un-American Activities Committee in 1955 continued its investigations of Communist influence in industry and entertainment. The Committee also held a series of hearings on Communism in various parts of the United States.

One witness was cited for contempt of Congress after he refused to answer questions before the Committee. Twenty-six witnesses were cited for contempt in 1954.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Un-American Activities." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 370ff.; Vol. IX, 1953, pp. 354ff.)

The Committee released two staff reports Dec. 21, 1954. In one, the Committee staff reported that Communists had had "little success" in the "infiltration and control of the Negro population" in the U.S. The report said this "can only reflect favorably on the loyalty and integrity of these Americans."

The second staff study charged that a publication called "March of Labor" was "carrying out the dictates of Lenin by bringing disguised Communist propaganda into the ranks of American workers." The report said the monthly magazine's "propaganda" was aimed at supporting "independent unions...ousted from the CIO because they were controlled by Communists," and was "designed to discredit American government policies..."

1955 Developments

The House Feb. 2 by voice vote adopted a resolution (H Res 102) providing $225,000 for the Committee's investigations.

The Committee Feb. 11 released its annual report (H Rept 57) for 1954. The report based on hearings and investigations in 1954, proposed that Congress:

- Provide that proof of membership in the Communist Party shall constitute prima facie evidence of violation of the Smith Act.
- Make it a crime for anyone to carry secret government documents in interstate commerce without authorization.
- Revoke second-class mailing privileges for subversive publications.
- Permit as evidence "the results of technical surveillance in matters affecting the national security, provided that adequate safeguards are adopted to protect the civil liberties of all citizens."
- Re-examine the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938 "to determine its effectiveness in controlling and exposing subversive activities."
- Require any person bidding for a government contract to swear that he is not, and has not been within the past 10 years, a member of any group advocating overthrow of the government by force and violence.

The Committee called on labor unions to amend their constitutions to deny membership to Communist Party members.

INDIANA HEARINGS

HEARINGS -- By a special Subcommittee, headed by Rep. Morgan M. Moulder (D Mo.), Feb. 28-March 1 on alleged Communist Party activities in the Fort Wayne, Ind., area.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 28 -- John T. Gojack, vice president of the United Electrical Workers Union (Ind.) and president of UE District Nine at Fort Wayne, refused to answer questions concerning alleged instances of Communist Party activities in the Fort Wayne industrial area.

Gojack invoked the First Amendment when asked if he was a Communist prior to 1949. He denounced the Subcommittee and Congressional investigations.

Lawrence Cover, secretary of a UE local at Peru, Ind., said he had not been a Communist and never would be. He said he knew of no Communists or Communist activities within his union district.

Julia Jacobs, a UE employee in St. Joseph, Mich., who once worked at Fort Wayne and Dayton, Ohio, invoked the Fifth Amendment when questioned about the Communist Party.

March 1 -- Gojack continued to refuse to answer questions because, he said, the hearing was unconstitutional. He accused the Subcommittee of trying to be "prosecutor, judge, and jury" and asserted it had "no right to ask how I think and feel."

ACTION -- The Subcommittee March 1 unanimously voted to recommend to the full Committee that Gojack be cited for contempt of Congress. The contempt resolution (H Res 315 -- H Rept 1406) was adopted by voice vote of the House July 26.

NEW YORK, WASHINGTON HEARINGS

HEARINGS -- By the Subcommittee March 16 and May 3-6 on Communist Party activities in the New York City area.

TESTIMONY -- March 16 -- Five witnesses were questioned in connection with Communistic activities in youth movements in the area. Each refused to answer questions relating to any association with Communist Party activities, invoking their constitutional privilege of refusing to answer. The witnesses were Leon Wofsky, Joseph Bucholt, Robert Fogel, Ernest Parent, and Sam Engler.

ACTION -- May 7, Chairman Moulder ordered that a letter of commendation be presented to a woman he described as "one of the most intelligent witnesses ever to come before this Committee." The witness, Mrs. Mildred Blauvelt, said she spent more than eight years in the Communist Party in New York City as an agent of the New York City Police Department. She named about 450 persons as Communists in testimony May 3-5.

HEARINGS -- On alleged Communist Party control of various organizations in the state of Washington, in Seattle, Wash., March 17-19, and in Washington, D.C., June 1-2.

TESTIMONY -- June 1 -- Ex-Rep. Jerry J. O'Connell (D Mont., 1937-39) denied any "official connection" with the Washington (state) Pension Union, labeled a "Communist front" by the House Committee. O'Connell said he did not know whether the Union was Communist controlled, but acknowledged he had been at its meetings when he was executive secretary of the State Democratic Party in 1944-47 and in a similar position with the Progressive Party in 1948-49.

June 2 -- O'Connell said he did not remember sending a telegram to federal Judge Harold Medina protesting court treatment of top Communists on trial in 1949. O'Connell was shown a photographic copy of a "Daily Worker" story reporting he had sent the wire. "This is the first time that's ever been called to my attention," he said.

MILWAUKEE, DETROIT HEARINGS

HEARINGS -- By a special subcommittee headed by Rep. Clyde Doyle (D Calif.) March 28-31 in Milwaukee, Wis., on alleged Communist activity in the area.

TESTIMONY -- March 28 -- James R. Eggleston said that the Communist Party promised him, in 1949 or 1950, that it would establish a separate Negro republic within the United States.

March 30 -- James De Witt was the ninth witness during the hearings to invoke the Fifth Amendment on the question of Communist Party membership.

Doyle said March 31 that Milwaukee was "one of the weakest links in the nationwide Communist conspiracy."

The Doyle subcommittee in April also held hearings on Communism in the Detroit area. The hearings, held in Washington, were an extension of 1954 hearings.

TESTIMONY -- April 25 -- David Mates of Detroit, international representative of the United Electrical Workers Union (Ind.), appearing under a Committee subpena, said he did not appear at a 1954 hearing because he was under a physician's care. He identified the doctor as Dr. E.M. Shafarman. He cited the Fifth Amendment in refusing to testify about Spanish Civil War service, Communist Party membership, certain passports, and his residence and occupation in the 1930s.

Dr. Shafarman testified that when Mates was to appear before the Committee in 1954, he was suffering from nervous exhaustion. The doctor said the diagnosis was made before he knew Mates was to appear. Dr. Shafarman invoked his Constitutional privileges when asked about attending certain alleged Communist Party meetings.

Other investigations undertaken by the Subcommittee in 1955 concerned Communist infiltration of labor unions and schools in the Newark, N.J., area (May 16-19), and Communist Party activities in the Los Angeles and San Diego, Calif., area (June 27-July 6).

ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY HEARINGS

HEARINGS -- By a third special subcommittee, headed by Committee Chairman Francis E. Walter (D Pa.), Aug. 15-18 in New York City on possible Communist infiltration of the theater, radio, and television fields.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 15 -- Actor George Tyne refused to say whether or not he had belonged to a Communist Party cell in Hollywood in 1944. Actor Lou Polan said he refused "to answer any questions that this Committee puts before me."

Actor Stanley Prager said he knew "I'm a good American. I've never been a member of an organization that I believe seeks the overthrow of the United States government by force and violence." He invoked the First and Fifth Amendments to keep from answering questions, but said "there is no inference of guilt to be drawn from this."

Phil Leeds refused to say whether or not he had told a Committee investigator he had been a Communist Party member in 1940, but no longer was a member. Actor John Randolph and his actress wife, Sarah Cunningham, also declined to answer questions about Communism.

Aug. 16 -- Chairman Walter said he felt pressure had been exerted on some witnesses to prevent them from giving full testimony.

Three of four witnesses invoked the Fifth Amendment. The fourth -- Actor Elliott Sullivan -- resisted questioning, but did not invoke any Constitutional privilege.

Lee Hays, a folk singer, invoked the Fifth Amendment in connection with a group called People's Songs. Miss Irma Jurist, a night-club accompanist, and Mrs. Susan d'Usseau, an artist, invoked the Fifth Amendment in connection with questions about Communist Party membership and recruitment.

Aug. 17 -- Actor George Hall said he joined the Communist Party for about 18 months in July or August of 1946. He identified various persons as having been seen by him at Communist Party meetings, including Randolph, Miss Cunningham, and Miss Jurist.

Miss Madeline Lee, a comedienne, cited the First, Fourth, Fifth, and Eighth Amendments in refusing to answer questions. Peter Lawrence, pleading the First and Fifth Amendments, said he "never belonged to any organization that I've felt tried to overthrow the government...."

Joshua Shelley, a comedian, refused to answer questions, pleading the First and Fifth Amendments. George Keane, named by Hall as a Communist, cited the First, Fourth, and Fifth Amendments "because I consider this hearing is an inquisition and not an investigation."

Actor Albert Ottenheimer, invoking the First and Fifth Amendments, said: "I have never committed espionage or sabotage or knowingly advocated the use of force and violence to over throw the government...."

Aug. 18 -- Actor Alan Manson, named by Hall as a one-time Communist Party member, invoked the First, Fifth, and Ninth Amendments. Tony Kraber, actor, folk singer, and former Columbia Broadcasting System executive, pleaded the First and Fifth Amendments to questions about Communist Party membership in 1934-35.

Peter Seeger, folk singer, said he would not answer any questions pertaining to "my associations, philosophy, and religion." He said he wanted to make it plain he was not invoking the Fifth Amendment in refusing to answer questions.

HEARINGS ON ROSENBERG GROUP

HEARINGS -- By the full Committee Aug. 2-4 on the activities of the National Committee to Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 346.)

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 2 -- James W. Glatis, a former FBI agent in the Boston area, identified Herman Tamsky as the Boston leader of the Rosenberg fund. Tamsky invoked the Fifth Amendment.

An accountant's report showed $302,530 had been collected, exclusive of monies received by local committees. Chairman Walter said it was "significant" the Rosenberg committee spent $57,000 on travel for "delegations to Washington" but only $1,299 for the welfare of the Rosenberg children.

Aug. 3 -- Herman E. Thomas, for ten years an FBI undercover agent, said the Communist Party always "kept a certain proportion of the money raised" by such groups as the Rosenberg committee. Thomas said the Communist Party used the Rosenberg case to gain influence in mass organizations such as churches and labor unions.

Aug. 4 -- Emily Alman of Englishtown, N.J. said she had been treasurer of the National Committee for the Rosenbergs for 10 months ending March, 1954. She had handled $300,000 during that period, she said. Mrs. Alman refused to answer some questions on the disposition of funds of the committee or to identify Rosenberg committee leaders in various cities.

Aug. 5 -- David Alman, executive secretary of the Rosenberg Committee in 1952-53 and husband of Emily Alman, declined to say whether he took documents from the office of the attorney defending David Greenglass in the Rosenberg spy trial. In a statement, Attorney O. John Rogge said the documents were stolen and then returned after apparently having been photographed.

Alman said a successor committee to the Rosenberg group "is still searching for new material" about Morton Sobell -- convicted with Greenglass and the Rosenbergs -- "and I do not wish to assist in cutting off any new information it wishes to obtain."

Louis Harap said it was a mistake to regard him as president of the Rosenberg committee, even though House investigators produced a document with his name as president. He refused to say whether or not he was a Communist, nor whether he was managing editor of "Jewish Life." Subcommittee investigators showed him a copy of "Jewish Life" with his name on the masthead.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Walter Aug. 6 said he would ask Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., to list the National Committee to Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case as a subversive organization.

HEARINGS -- Dec. 13-15 in Chicago on Communists in government.

TESTIMONY -- Dec. 13 -- Herbert Fuchs said he and 16 other lawyers were members of a Communist cell in the National Labor Relations Board in 1937-42. He said two Communist cells operated in the Denver War Labor Board office while he was there in 1942-45, and said he organized a Communist cell within the staff of a Senate subcommittee investigating railroads and holding companies in 1936-37. Fuchs said he left the Party in 1946.

Named by Fuchs as cell members: NLRB -- Lester Asher, David Rein, Woodrow Sandler, Jacob H. Krug, Mortimer Riemer, John W. Porter and wife, Mrs. Margaret Porter, Ruth Weyand, Allen Heald, Harry Cooper, Frank Donner, Edward Scheuneman, Burt Diamond, Allen Rosenberg, Martin Kurasch, and Joseph B. Robison. Denver WLB -- Phil Reno, Scheuneman and wife, Cecelia, Raymond Lavallee, Kurasch, Porter, Gerald Matchett, Dwight Spencer, Don Plumb, and wife, Arlene.

(The NLRB Dec. 14 said none of those named was currently with the Board.)

Dec. 14 -- Riemer said he joined the Communist party in 1935 or 1936, later was a member of a Communist cell of NLRB lawyers, and left the Party during World War II.

Gerald J. Matchett, economics instructor at the Illinois Institute of Technology, and his wife, Margaret Ellen, said they were not currently Communists, but declined to answer most questions on grounds of self-incrimination. (Matchett was suspended by the college Dec. 15.)

Asher said "Fuchs tried t sell me on Communism and was unsuccessful." Heald, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, said he met each week from 1938 to January, 1941, with the NLRB group named by Fuchs, but he never saw or heard anything to indicate they were Communists.

Dec. 15 -- Ellis Olim, named by Fuchs as a Communist, agreed to answer questions if granted immunity from prosecution under PL 600, 83rd Congress. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, p. 333, and this volume, pp. 393ff.) Committee members said they would seek immunity for him.

UNION WELFARE FUNDS

House and Senate Labor subcommittees reported in 1955 on investigations, begun in 1954, of the administration of union welfare funds covered by collective bargaining agreements. As a result of hearings by the Senate group, an official of the International Laundry Workers Union (AFL) was cited for contempt of Congress.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Union Welfare funds." (See CQ Almanac, Vol. X, 1954, pp. 305ff.) "Detroit Hearings on Union Funds" (Vol. IX, 1953, p. 266).

In November, 1953, a House Education and Labor Subcommittee held hearings in Detroit to determine whether the insurance funds of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen, and Helpers of America (AFL) had been misused.

The full Committee in February, 1954, authorized a special subcommittee to investigate the administration of union welfare funds covered by collective bargaining. The Subcommittee to Investigate Union Welfare Funds held hearings in September in Los Angeles and Nov. 29-Dec. 1 in Washington.

On Jan. 5, 1955, the Subcommittee issued an interim report which stated that it found "a wide range of questionable practices by union officials, employers, insurance companies, brokers, administrators, and trustees connected with health and welfare funds." The Subcommittee added that there had been "picketing and threats of violence...to exact payments." Some union officials, the report said, had conducted themselves as if the welfare of workers was "something to be exploited for personal gain." It recommended that the Education and Labor Committee continue the investigation in the 84th Congress and that the Bureau of Internal Revenue revise and expand the information it required of trust funds having tax-exempt status.

The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Subcommittee on Welfare and Pension Funds Jan. 26 submitted a report on its 1954 investigations. The report said:

Of 26 welfare and pension funds studied, seven were "well managed," six were "grossly mismanaged," and 13 were governed by "questionable practices."

In many instances, management, unions, and insurance groups had "been equally remiss in failing to take preventive action against abuses and mismanagement" of the funds.

Congress should consider:

Requiring funds to register and file annual reports with the government.

Authorizing federal inspection of the funds' records.

Amending the Taft-Hartley Act "to make clear the extent to which the federal government will regulate employee benefit funds."

The Senate Feb. 21 adopted a resolution (S Res 40) authorizing $190,000 to the Committee to extend its investigation through Jan. 31, 1956. An amendment by Sen. Allen J. Ellender, Sr. (D La.) to reduce authorized funds from $190,000 to $150,000 was rejected.

Senate Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare Subcommittee on Welfare and Pension Funds.

HEARINGS -- March 21-April 4, Nov. 28-Dec. 6.

TESTIMONY -- March 21 -- C. Manton Eddy of the Connecticut General Insurance Co. and Gilbert Fitzhugh of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. advised against legislation which would hinder growth of union welfare funds. Their joint statement said abuses of funds uncovered in investigations "were not characteristic of insured welfare programs."

March 22 -- Representatives of the Continental Can Co. and the United Steel Workers of America (CIO) explained a fund established by their two groups. Another fund, worked out between American Motors Co. and the United Automobile Workers (CIO), was discussed by their representatives.

March 23 -- AFL painters and decorators of the Chicago area testified on their welfare plan experience.

March 24 -- Carl Lundgren of the Painters, Cleaners, and Caulkers Association of Illinois, an employers' group, said employers contributed well over $200,000 to a union welfare fund because they were "afraid of being put out of business" by losing their workers. He said employers knew little about the fund nor about a "defense fund" financed by employees.

Dr. Shafarman testified that when Mates was to appear before the Committee in 1954, he was suffering from nervous exhaustion. The doctor said the diagnosis was made before he knew Mates was to appear. Dr. Shafarman invoked his Constitutional privileges when asked about attending certain alleged Communist Party meetings.

Other investigations undertaken by the Subcommittee in 1955 concerned Communist infiltration of labor unions and schools in the Newark, N.J., area (May 16-19), and Communist Party activities in the Los Angeles and San Diego, Calif., area (June 27-July 6).

ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY HEARINGS

HEARINGS -- By a third special subcommittee, headed by Committee Chairman Francis E. Walter (D Pa.), Aug. 15-18 in New York City on possible Communist infiltration of the theater, radio, and television fields.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 15 -- Actor George Tyne refused to say whether or not he had belonged to a Communist Party cell in Hollywood in 1944. Actor Lou Polan said he refused "to answer any questions that this Committee puts before me."

Actor Stanley Prager said he knew "I'm a good American. I've never been a member of an organization that I believe seeks the overthrow of the United States government by force and violence." He invoked the First and Fifth Amendments to keep from answering questions, but said "there is no inference of guilt to be drawn from this."

Phil Leeds refused to say whether or not he had told a Committee investigator he had been a Communist Party member in 1940, but no longer was a member. Actor John Randolph and his actress wife, Sarah Cunningham, also declined to answer questions about Communism.

Aug. 16 -- Chairman Walter said he felt pressure had been exerted on some witnesses to prevent them from giving full testimony.

Three of four witnesses invoked the Fifth Amendment. The fourth -- Actor Elliott Sullivan -- resisted questioning, but did not invoke any Constitutional privilege.

Lee Hays, a folk singer, invoked the Fifth Amendment in connection with a group called People's Songs. Miss Irma Jurist, a night-club accompanist, and Mrs. Susan d'Usseau, an artist, invoked the Fifth Amendment in connection with questions about Communist Party membership and recruitment.

Aug. 17 -- Actor George Hall said he joined the Communist Party for about 18 months in July or August of 1946. He identified various persons as having been seen by him at Communist Party meetings, including Randolph, Miss Cunningham, and Miss Jurist.

Miss Madeline Lee, a comedienne, cited the First, Fourth, Fifth, and Eighth Amendments in refusing to answer questions. Peter Lawrence, pleading the First and Fifth Amendments, said he "never belonged to any organization that I've felt tried to overthrow the government...."

Joshua Shelley, a comedian, refused to answer questions, pleading the First and Fifth Amendments. George Keane, named by Hall as a Communist, cited the First, Fourth, and Fifth Amendments "because I consider this hearing is an inquisition and not an investigation."

Actor Albert Ottenheimer, invoking the First and Fifth Amendments, said: "I have never committed espionage or sabotage or knowingly advocated the use of force and violence to over throw the government...."

Aug. 18 -- Actor Alan Manson, named by Hall as a one-time Communist Party member, invoked the First, Fifth, and Ninth Amendments. Tony Kraber, actor, folk singer, and former Columbia Broadcasting System executive, pleaded the First and Fifth Amendments to questions about Communist Party membership in 1934-35.

Peter Seeger, folk singer, said he would not answer any questions pertaining to "my associations, philosophy, and religion." He said he wanted to make it plain he was not invoking the Fifth Amendment in refusing to answer questions.

HEARINGS ON ROSENBERG GROUP

HEARINGS -- By the full Committee Aug. 2-4 on the activities of the National Committee to Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. IX, 1953, p. 346.)

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 2 -- James W. Glatis, a former FBI agent in the Boston area, identified Herman Tamsky as the Boston leader of the Rosenberg fund. Tamsky invoked the Fifth Amendment.

An accountant's report showed $302,530 had been collected, exclusive of monies received by local committees. Chairman Walter said it was "significant" the Rosenberg committee spent $57,000 on travel for "delegations to Washington" but only $1,299 for the welfare of the Rosenberg children.

Aug. 3 -- Herman E. Thomas, for ten years an FBI undercover agent, said the Communist Party always "kept a certain proportion of the money raised" by such groups as the Rosenberg committee. Thomas said the Communist Party used the Rosenberg case to gain influence in mass organizations such as churches and labor unions.

Aug. 4 -- Emily Alman of Englishtown, N.J. said she had been treasurer of the National Committee for the Rosenbergs for 10 months ending March, 1954. She had handled $300,000 during that period, she said. Mrs. Alman refused to answer some questions on the disposition of funds of the committee or to identify Rosenberg committee leaders in various cities.

Aug. 5 -- David Alman, executive secretary of the Rosenberg Committee in 1952-53 and husband of Emily Alman, declined to say whether he took documents from the office of the attorney defending David Greenglass in the Rosenberg spy trial. In a statement, Attorney O. John Rogge said the documents were stolen and then returned after apparently having been photographed.

Alman said a successor committee to the Rosenberg group "is still searching for new material" about Morton Sobell -- convicted with Greenglass and the Rosenbergs -- "and I do not wish to assist in cutting off any new information it wishes to obtain."

Louis Harap said it was a mistake to regard him as president of the Rosenberg committee, even though House investigators produced a document with his name as president. He refused to say whether or not he was a Communist, nor whether he was managing editor of "Jewish Life." Subcommittee investigators showed him a copy of "Jewish Life" with his name on the masthead.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- Walter Aug. 6 said he would ask Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., to list the National Committee to Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case as a subversive organization.

HEARINGS -- Dec. 13-15 in Chicago on Communists in government.

TESTIMONY -- Dec. 13 -- Herbert Fuchs said he and 16 other lawyers were members of a Communist cell in the National Labor Relations Board in 1937-42. He said two Communist cells operated in the Denver War Labor Board office while he was there in 1942-45, and said he organized a Communist cell within the staff of a Senate subcommittee investigating railroads and holding companies in 1936-37. Fuchs said he left the Party in 1946.

Named by Fuchs as cell members: NLRB -- Lester Asher, David Rein, Woodrow Sandler, Jacob H. Krug, Mortimer Riemer, John W. Porter and wife, Mrs. Margaret Porter, Ruth Weyand, Allen Heald, Harry Cooper, Frank Donner, Edward Scheuneman, Burt Diamond, Allen Rosenberg, Martin Kurasch, and Joseph B. Robison. Denver WLB -- Phil Reno, Scheuneman and wife, Cecelia, Raymond Lavallee, Kurasch, Porter, Gerald Matchett, Dwight Spencer, Don Plumb, and wife, Arlene.

(The NLRB Dec. 14 said none of those named was currently with the Board.)

Dec. 14 -- Riemer said he joined the Communist party in 1935 or 1936, later was a member of a Communist cell of NLRB lawyers, and left the Party during World War II.

Gerald J. Matchett, economics instructor at the Illinois Institute of Technology, and his wife, Margaret Ellen, said they were not currently Communists, but declined to answer most questions on grounds of self-incrimination. (Matchett was suspended by the college Dec. 15.)

Asher said "Fuchs tried t sell me on Communism and was unsuccessful." Heald, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, said he met each week from 1938 to January, 1941, with the NLRB group named by Fuchs, but he never saw or heard anything to indicate they were Communists.

Senate Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare Subcommittee on Welfare and Pension Funds.

HEARINGS -- March 21-April 4, Nov. 28-Dec. 6.

TESTIMONY -- March 21 -- C. March 23 -- AFL painters and decorators of the Chicago area testified on their welfare plan experience.

March 24 -- Carl Lundgren of the Pointers, Cleaners, and Caulkers Association of Illinois, an employers' group, said employers contributed well over $200,000 to a union welfare fund because they were "afraid of being put out of business" by losing their workers. He said employers knew little about the fund nor about a "defense fund" financed by employees.

March 25 -- Francis X. Plant, a Subcommittee staff member, said there was a $900,307 "discrepancy" in the amount of insurance premiums paid by the International Laundry Workers Union (AFL) to insurance broker Louis B. Saperstein and the amount received by insurance companies from Saperstein between April 1, 1950, and April 2, 1954. Plant said the amount was in addition to more than $1 million which Frederick Russell of Binghamton, N.Y., president, Security Mutual Life Insurance Co., testified was paid Saperstein in commissions.

March 26 -- Concetta Montefusco, former bookkeeper of the Harlew Insurance Agency, Newark, N.J., said she was directed by Saperstein to forward to Security Mutual 20 percent less than was paid by labor unions to the agency. She said this was done for the more than two years prior to October, 1954, that she worked for the agency.

Charles Naddeo, vice president of a Philadelphia ILWU local, said he did not know how many claims had been handled for his local in 1954, or in any given month, or the total benefits paid out.

DISCREPANCY NEWS TO BOOKKEEPER

March 28 -- Evelyn Horner, bookkeeper for the ILWU welfare fund, said she had no knowledge of any discrepancy until the Subcommittee's hearings. Subcommittee Counsel William Leece told her an audit showed that of $4,867,774 forwarded to Saperstein, only $3,941,673 was sent by Saperstein to Security Mutual and the California Life Insurance Co. of San Francisco. After certain "adjustments" were made in the figure, Leece said, the Subcommittee staff "estimated the discrepancies" at a little more than $900,000.

Saperstein invoked the Fifth Amendment to queries on whether he received the $900,000. Under further questioning, however, he said: "I did not keep it."

March 29 -- Saperstein continued to invoke the Fifth Amendment and refused to explain his participation in what Subcommittee Chairman Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) termed a "rigged" audit of ILWU welfare funds.

Eugene C. James, ILWU international secretary-treasurer, invoked the Fifth Amendment and declined to answer questions about the $900,000. The Subcommittee unanimously decided to recommend that James be cited for contempt of Congress. (See below.)

March 30 -- Matthew J. Dooley of San Francisco, an employer trustee of the union's social security department, testified that at Saperstein's request the trustees approved the payment of premiums directly to him. The ILWU welfare plan, he said, "has grown in financial strength" and has increased its benefits in recent years while not increasing premium payments.

He said that since California Life had taken over the policy from Security Mutual on Oct. 1, 1953, dividends also had been increased. He added that California Life terminated the services of Saperstein in June, 1954.

Douglas said ILWU books showed no record of the more than $900,000 alleged to have been received by Saperstein. Neither, he continued, was there any record of $85,000 which Security Mutual allegedly sent James.

April 4 -- Counsel Leece said about $245,000 paid into the welfare fund of Chicago Local 52, Pointers, Cleaners, and Caulkers Union (AFL), was not accounted for.

Edward J. Gallagher, president of the union, said checks drawn by him and John T. Ryan, union secretary-treasurer, against the welfare fund were used to pay benefits and organization expenses. He said none of the money was used by him personally.

Charles J. Vokoun, welfare fund office manager, said he cashed the checks made out by Gallagher and Ryan and turned the proceeds over to Gallagher. Ryan said he signed the checks while they still were blank.

CONTEMPT CITATION VOTED

ACTION -- July 14 -- The Committee reported a resolution (S Res 135 -- S Rept 872) recommending that the Senate cite Eugene C. James for contempt of Congress for refusing to answer questions and failing to "produce certain documents" requested by the Subcommittee.

The Senate adopted the contempt citation July 19, by voice vote, without debate.

The Subcommittee July 27 released an interim report on its investigation of welfare and pension funds. The Subcommittee reported it had traced more than $573,000 missing from the International Laundry Workers Union (AFL) welfare fund to a Chicago bank account controlled by the union's secretary-treasurer, Eugene C. James. The sum was part of nearly $1 million "embezzled" from the union fund, the report said.

HEARINGS RESUMED

The Subcommittee late in 1955 resumed hearings on the administration of employee welfare funds.

HEARINGS -- Nov. 28-Dec. 6.

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 28 -- John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and its welfare and pension fund, said federal and state governments should employ existing laws to "prosecute the human jackals feeding on welfare funds." He said no new laws were necessary.

Witnesses affiliated with Amalgamated Local 286, United Automobile Workers (AFL), in Chicago, said its president, Angelo Inciso, operated the welfare fund and also was board chairman of the American Continental Insurance Co., which handled the money for the union members. They said Inciso regularly deducted one dollar outright and another 4 percent for administration costs from the $6.15 monthly premiums employers paid into the welfare fund for each union employee. Secretary-treasurer Anthony Doria of the local said he could not explain the fund's operation because he had not time to gather the records. Inciso did not answer the Subcommittee's subpena.

Nov. 29 -- Finance Chairman Enders M. Voorhees of the United States Steel Corp. said, "It seems to us there is much merit" in letting the states, not the federal government, supervise insurance and welfare programs.

Subcommittee Counsel Paul Cotter said General Motors had not cooperated fully when queried about its welfare program.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Nov. 29 -- The Subcommittee voted to request the full Committee to initiate contempt of Congress proceedings against Inciso for his failure to respond to a subpena.

The Subcommittee voted to explore publicly the details of the GM welfare and pension funds despite company objections that it would reveal confidential information. Subcommittee Chairman Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) said employees had a right to know, "as a matter of equity."

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 30 -- Vice President A. M. Randall of the Mutual Benefit Health and Accident Association of Omaha said brokers who sold group insurance made as much as 30 percent of the first year's premium in commission. He said that rate was changed in 1953 to a maximum of 20 percent of the first year's premium.

Cotter said companies which paid such sizeable commissions for their business must bear "some culpability" for any resulting abuses within the funds.

Dec. 1 -- A staff investigator said William H. Croland, formerly of the C. J. Simons Corp., Newark, N.J., had withheld $164,000 in welfare insurance premiums to use as kickbacks to those helping him obtain new business. Simons said he did not know of the practice, according to the investigator.

Dec. 2 -- Marvin Zalk of Jersey City, N. J. administrator of four truckers' union welfare funds, said he received $11,600 from an insurance agent as "commission" on group insurance paid for from welfare funds.

Dec. 5 -- Angelo Inciso, president of Chicago Local 286 of the United Automobile Workers (AFL), said employer contributions to the union's insurance fund totaled about $200,000 a year and were regarded as "dues." He said "everything" was handled through a voucher system, and no books were kept.

Dec. 6 -- Inciso said he had arranged a $40,000 loan of union funds to the Precision Paper Tool Company of Chicago while his union was striking at the plant.

Sen. Gordon Allott (R Colo.) said the testimony revealed a "very definite, plain pattern of looting and abuse of union funds."

CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS

The Constitutional Rights Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee late in 1955 began an investigation of possible "erosion" of civil rights in the United States. The Subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Sen. Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (D Mo.), opened its inquiry with a special hearing at which spokesmen from major national organizations described instances of circumvention or defeat of privileges guaranteed by the Constitution's Bill of Rights. There followed a series of hearings on the impact of security measures on guarantees of the First Amendment.

Scheduled hearings on freedom of religion were cancelled by the Subcommittee after they had provoked controversy among major religious groups.

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Judiciary, Constitutional Rights Subcommittee.

HEARING -- Sept. 17 -- On "the present status of constitutional rights in America."

TESTIMONY -- Citizen spokesmen from major organizations presented "petitions for the redress of grievances" at a hearing commemorating the 168th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

Donald R. Wilson of the American Legion said one of the primary functions of the Subcommittee should be to safeguard the nation against "those who would defy the Congress, deceive the courts, destroy the government and enslave the people while proclaiming that the Constitution prohibits their being unmasked...."

Dr. Eugene Carson Blake of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. said the chief concern was that "no government or branch...think of itself as the arbiter or controller of men's opinions, convictions, or faith.... There has been a growing tendency on the part of our representatives in government to suppose that it is within the competence of the state to determine what is and what is not American."

Joseph F. Lamb of the Knights of Columbus said: "The fraternal citizen would warn against giving undue attention or weight to the alarmed cries of clever phrasemakers who find evidence of what they call the 'erosion' of our rights whenever a perjurer or traitor is punished for his crime."

Dr. John Lester Buford of the National Education Association said: "Academic freedom has been impaired or denied, not only through pressure brought upon teachers, but by censorship of textbooks and teaching materials."

NEGROES' RIGHTS DENIED

Roy Wilkins of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said "practically throughout the country, Negro citizens are denied in varying degrees the full citizenship rights envisioned by the Constitution." He cited voting discrimination and opposition to school desegregation as instances of denial of Negro rights.

John C. Lynn of the American Farm Bureau Federation and A. Boyd Campbell of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. said collective bargaining agreements which forced workers to join unions violated the First Amendment's freedom of association guarantee. They also protested federal expansion into state and local authority.

William F. Schnitzler of the American Federation of Labor urged repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and other laws containing broad regulatory language that "could be utilized to make criminals out of decent and honest workers pursuing just and proper activities."

J. Russell Wiggins of the Freedom of Information Committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors said the people's right to know about their government, considered "fundamental" and "elementary" in 1789, was currently "being disregarded all too frequently."

Mrs. John G. Lee of the League of Women Voters said "tolerance and respect for the opinions of others is being jeopardized by men and women whose instincts are worthily patriotic, but whose minds are apparently unwilling to accept the necessity for dissent within a society."

John D. Randall of the American Bar Association said "slogans" are "no way in which to examine our rights... Such generality is extremely harmful because people... might possibly believe" some branches of the government had failed in their duties.

RELIGIOUS SERIES CANCELLED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee Oct. 5 cancelled public hearings on freedom of religion. Chairman Hennings said Subcommittee members decided they had held "a hearing in written form" by sending out a questionnaire on the subject.

A Subcommittee spokesman Oct. 1 said the group had received objections that the hearings would open up sores between religious faiths and denominations and involve the Subcommittee in arguments unrelated to the basic issue of religious freedom.

Glenn L. Archer, executive director of Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State, Oct. 14 charged the Subcommittee had tried to suppress "the facts concerning religious liberty and church-state separation." Archer said he wished to testify on "extensive" violations of the First Amendment and the "promotion of sectarian religion" in tax-supported schools by Protestants as well as Catholics.

Security Cases and First Amendment

HEARINGS -- Nov. 14-29 -- On the impact of security measures on guarantees of the First Amendment.

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 14 -- Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, chairman of the Experimental College of the University of Wisconsin and former president of Amherst College, said Congress had no right to ask anyone, under the "threat of harmful or degrading consequences," whether he was a Communist.

Zechariah Chafee, Jr., professor at Harvard Law School, said the Subcommittee should consider whether the Conspiracy Act of 1861, which prohibited conspiracy to overthrow the government, "does not make unnecessary all our recent sedition laws."

Thomas I. Cook, professor of political science at Johns Hopkins University, said "an atmosphere of freedom" must be maintained. "Rights are never absolute" and Congress could erect limits but, he added, there must be a "clear" danger before First Amendment rights were infringed.

Nov. 15 -- Dr. Linus C. Pauling, head of the chemistry department of California Institute of Technology, said it was "reasonable to conclude" that his winning of the Nobel Prize in 1954 "forced the State Department" to reverse itself and issue him a passport.

Scott McLeod, State Department security officer, said passport rules seemed to give "undue consideration" to accused Communists by granting them formal appeal rights denied others. He said he might have authorized cancelling the passport of Judge William L. Clark, former chief judge for the Allied High Commission in Germany. Clark criticized State Department policy and was removed from office.

Clark said he was forced to surrender his passport in the Canary Islands in 1953 while on a holiday, and was given a "one-way passport" home. He said he finally got his full passport back in 1955 after court action.

Geoffrey F. Chew, professor of physics at the University of Illinois, speaking for the Federation of American Scientists, said, "the passport should be recognized as a right of the United States citizen -- not merely a privilege -- which may be denied only for reasons clearly relevant to national security." He said a current difficulty was that "the State Department feels it is doing a favor to a citizen in granting him a passport...."

NOBEL PRIZEWINNERS TESTIFY

Nov. 16 -- McLeod said a "self-generating appeal" had won a passport for Pauling in November 1954, so he could go to Sweden to accept the Nobel Prize. He said he did not know whether Secretary of State John Foster Dulles had anything to do with it. He testified that it was "conceivable" passport actions were based on information from anonymous sources. Asked to explain "self-generating appeal," he replied: "We read the newspapers and we don't live entirely in an ivory tower."

The Subcommittee queried McLeod later in the day by telephone as to who "ordered" the "lifting" of Judge Clark's passport and who was "involved in the decision." McLeod declined to identify the officials. He said disclosure of their names would constitute Congressional intrusion on internal matters of the "executive family."

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, Nobel Prize-winning physicist, said screening programs and the indiscriminate questioning of the loyalty of American scientists endangered the development of American science.

Nov. 17 -- Capt. Carl W. Lawrence of the Delaware State Police Criminal Division said a Communist who failed to register before crossing the Delaware Memorial Bridge was subject to imprisonment under Delaware law.

ARMY PROCEDURES CRITICIZED

Nov. 18 -- Harley L. Ross of Fort Ord, Calif., an Army private, said the Army accused him of "close and continuing association" with a Communist, his assigned Army roommate. William G. Witthoft of Chicago, former soldier, said his Army intelligence report contained "derogatory" information about him partly because his mother-in-law, who died when his wife was six years old, "was reported to be lying low as a Communist."

Rowland Watts, secretary of the Workers Defense League, said the Army was guilty of "unconscionable ...unconstitutional infliction of punishment" by denying honorable discharges to men because of "remote associations" years before they were drafted.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- The Defense Department Nov. 18 changed its procedure to require pre-induction security checks on men who declined to fill out personal history forms. Chairman Hennings said the procedure change would "restore constitutional rights to a large number of people who, under present regulations, would receive security risk discharges."

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 21 -- Col. Marvin C. Hillsman, president of the Army Discharge Review Board, said an ex-convict with a good Army performance record had a better chance of getting an honorable discharge than a soldier who belonged to allegedly subversive organizations before he was drafted.

A married couple said the Army charged they were security risks and then suspended them from their civilian jobs. Although the charges were similar, the Army fired the husband and cleared the wife, they said.

The Motion Picture Association of America said movie censorship had "seriously eroded" the constitutional guarantee of freedom of expression.

Nov. 22 -- Joseph L. Rauh, Jr., counsel for the CIO United Auto Workers, said the union questioned "the scope and fairness of the Defense Department's procedures" in carrying out its industrial security program. He said the time had come "to limit the (security) program to workers with access to significant security information, and to penalize employers who use it as a ground of discharge from, or refusal to hire on, non-security work."

Assistant Secretary of the Army Hugh M. Milton, II, said any inductee who invoked the Fifth Amendment in filling out personal history statements was automatically denied an honorable discharge. He said he could "conceive" that a man using the Fifth Amendment could be innocent of any wrongdoing, said he would give "serious reconsideration" to the Army's policy.

Nov. 23 -- Joseph Gaberman of State College, Pa., said the Navy branded him a security risk for civilian employment but cleared him of the same charge as a Naval Reserve Officer.

Jerome D. Fenton, a government security officer, said any man accused of being a security risk "is in the safe hands of his government." He said he was not familiar with the Gaberman case.

Fenton, director of the Defense Department's Office of Industrial Personnel, said new procedures in its security risk program had resulted in giving loyalty clearance to civilian employees at a rate of 5 to 3, as against a denial of clearance, 5 to 3, as of April 1954.

This improvement, he continued, resulted from tighter security examinations.

Currently, he said, the files of persons under scrutiny were read separately by screening panel members and by the legal and security advisers. Then, in round-table discussion, the panel's decision must be unanimous.

Nov. 25 -- Clifford J. Hynning, Treasury Department attorney dismissed June 23, 1954, on security grounds, said two charges brought against him were dropped after a hearing, but he was fired, he said, because the hearing board did not believe him when he could not recall a 10-minute 1942 interview with an FBI agent.

Nov. 28 -- Novelist Kay Boyle said the State Department had accused her of being a Communist in security charges brought against her husband, Joseph M. Frankenstein, but had continued to use her books in overseas information libraries. She denied she ever had been a Communist or a member of a Communist front. She said that in response to a friend's request, she had contributed $20 to a conference sponsored by an organization on the Attorney General's list of subversive groups.

Nov. 29 -- Fenton said the Defense Department's security regulations were "in complete harmony" with Executive Order 10450 setting up the Eisenhower Administration's security program. He said "inquiry into the area of kinsmen is done by every agency of government" regardless of whether it was spelled out in their regulations.

ANTITRUST INVESTIGATIONS

Following its recommendations based on 1954 hearings, the Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee undertook in 1955 a full-scale inquiry into antitrust policies and monopolies. Harley M. Kilgore (D W. Va.) headed the Subcommittee for which the Senate March 18 voted $200,000 for investigations.

In its 1954 report the Subcommittee warned that the United States was in the "third great merger movement" in U. S. history and that previous movements had been followed by "devastating business collapse."

OTHER HEARINGS

Hearings on antitrust problems were held in May and June by the Antitrust Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee under the chairmanship of Emanuel Celler (D N. Y.) The House Small Business Committee under Wright Patman (D Texas) began hearings Oct. 31 on price discrimination and the Robinson-Patman Act.

A report on antitrust legislation including 73 recommendations was submitted March 31 by the Attorney General's Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws. Hearings on it were held by the Senate and House Antitrust Subcommittees and the Senate Small Business Committee.

ADMINISTRATION VIEWS

President Eisenhower during his administration had not taken a specific stand on major controversial issues of the antitrust program: whether mergers have reached the point of endangering the national economy; the question of repealing retail "fair trade" laws; extension of anti-merger legislation to banking; and concentrations of power in the public power industry. In 1954 the Budget Bureau backed an amendment by Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R Ind.) which would have had the effect of repealing the Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination act. The bill failed to get out of committee.

The highly publicized Attorney General's Committee after 18 month's study came up with one major controversial recommendation: repeal of the retail "fair trade" laws, last amended in 1952. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VIII, 1952, pp. 325ff.)

Administration officials in the Senate and House hearings offered other proposals for strengthening the antitrust laws and supported some Congressional proposals. In the House June 23, Rep. Patman declared that between Stanley N. Barnes, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division (also co-chairman of the Attorney General's Committee), and Federal Trade Commission Chairman Edward F. Howrey "we now have more recommendations for strengthening the antitrust laws than are contained in the whole 393 pages of the report of the Attorney General's Committee."

The Federal Trade Commission announced Aug. 22 that its anti-monopoly investigations in fiscal 1955 had increased by close to 50 percent.

SUBJECT OF HEARINGS

Both Senate and House Antitrust Subcommittee inquiries dealt principally with the problem of "bigness" of industry: the economic effect of mergers, the current trend toward them, the present laws and their enforcement by the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice. They heard testimony as to the situation in a number of industries, including automotive, steel, textiles, airlines, and banking.

The chief incentive toward business mergers, as described by FTC Chairman Howrey, was not taxes (though that was important) but the desire of a company to gain new capacity for itself without creating additional capacity in its field.

Some mergers were defended as strengthening the economic life of the nation, and as sharpening competition, others condemned as tending to monopoly. The Senate Subcommittee heard extensive testimony on the automotive industry, including representatives of Chrysler, Kaiser, Ford and Studebaker-Packard, and later devoted a series of hearings to the role of General Motors.

Conflicting testimony from Administration officials was heard on the significance of recent bank mergers. Howrey said there had been "very alarming mergers" among banks, citing the need for legislation to combat the monopolistic tendency in this field. William McChesney Martin, Jr., chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors, and Assistant Attorney General Barnes seconded the need for legislation. But Ray M. Gidney, U. S. Comptroller of the Currency, said recent bank mergers had increased rather than reduced competition and revitalized the banking system.

Three inquiries dealt with the problems of price discrimination and price fixing. The Senate Antitrust Subcommittee and the House Small Business Committee concentrated on the economic effects of the Robinson-Patman Act of 1936, which prohibits discrimination in manufacturers' prices, and heard views pro and con its continuation and increased enforcement. At the conclusion of the Senate testimony, Kilgore observed that some clarifying amendments to the Robinson-Patman Act apparently were needed. Chief Counsel Joseph W. Burns said the testimony showed "conclusively that it is not a well written law..."

The Celler Subcommittee hearings on pricing problems centered on the so-called "fair trade" laws -- laws exempting retail price fixing agreements from prosecution under the antitrust laws. Assistant Attorney General Barnes urged Congress to "consider" repeal of retail price maintenance laws to protect consumers. The Attorney General's Committee of which Barnes was co-chairman strongly urged their repeal, describing fair trade pricing as "an unwarranted compromise of the basic tenets of national antitrust policy."

The Senate Antitrust Subcommittee heard testimony also on the application of antitrust laws to foreign trade and investments. Sen. Kilgore and Chief Counsel Joseph W. Burns held informal conferences on the subject in September with American businessmen in London, Paris and Rome.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

Problems encountered by the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice in enforcing antitrust laws also were under scrutiny. Two recommendations for strengthing enforcement procedures were made:

Representatives of the Justice Department and the FTC sought to make compulsory existing procedures under which companies may seek a ruling from the government in advance of a merger to determine whether it would comply with the law.

Administration witnesses also sought legislation giving the government authority to demand a company's records from the beginning stages of investigation rather than depend upon their voluntary cooperation to produce data.

FTC Chairman Howrey recommended also, in a report on mergers issued May 20, two other changes in antitrust law: one, to give the government power over the manner in which companies divest themselves of illegally acquired assets, in addition to present power to force divestiture; and a broadening of the definition of interstate commerce contained in the Clayton Act.

Background

The Kilgore Subcommittee investigations were based on the 1954 Subcommittee's recommendation for a full investigation of monopolies and concentrations of economic power. However, the Subcommittee failed to follow its own urging that the 84th Congress investigate first the "critically important power field." It held hearings on a power merger in September after Congress adjourned.

The report, issued Jan. 23, 1955, was based on hearings on the proposed Dixon-Yates power contract with the Atomic Energy Commission. (See CQ Almanac Vol. X, 1954, pp. 539, 548-50. Also this volume, pp. 533ff.)

The Subcommittee, headed by Sen. William Langer (R N. D.), criticized the Eisenhower administration's public power program, the Dixon-Yates contract and what it termed "monopolistic trends and abuses" in the electric power industry. It recommended that after investigating the power field Congress should extend an inquiry "to all the trends toward concentration of power in defiance of the intent and purpose of the nation's antitrust legislation".

Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) expressed disagreement with the report.

Attorney General's Committee

On March 31, 1955, the National Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws, which had been appointed by Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr., in August, 1953, submitted a report containing its findings and recommendations. It called for:

- Strict enforcement of anti-merger laws, examining each case on its merits to determine whether it would substantially lessen competition.
- Outright repeal of the federal "fair trade" laws that exempt manufacturer-fixed retail prices from antitrust prosecution.
- A new statute to curb union activities that lessen competition -- "to the extent that" such restraints are not "effectively curbed" by existing laws.
- Power for the Attorney General to demand private records of corporations during the investigative stage of civil antitrust proceedings.
- An increase to $10,000 (from $5,000) in the maximum penalty for violating the Sherman Act, the basic antitrust law. (Legislation passed in 1955 increased the fine to $50,000. See p. 466.)
- Authority for the government to sue for recovery of actual damages suffered by the government through antitrust violations. (The legislation was enacted in 1955. See p. 466.)
- Periodic surveys by the Justice Department to check on whether or not judicial decrees had been effective in restoring competition.
- Discretionary authority for federal judges to award less than treble damages, as currently required, in private antitrust cases. (For hearings on the proposal, see p 467.)
- Closer cooperation between the Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission, with each to have access to the other's records.

Senate

Hearings on the report were held by the Kilgore Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, by the Senate Small Business Committee, and by the House Judiciary's Antitrust Subcommittee. (See p. 552.)

COMMITTEE -- Senate Small Business Committee.

HEARINGS -- April 27-29 on the report of the National Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws.

TESTIMONY -- April 27 -- Committee Chairman John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) opened the hearings by saying the report "seemed to ignore" the needs of small business and to contain recommendations that could undermine the government's antitrust and anti-monopoly program.

Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes, chief of the Justice Department's antitrust division and a co-chairman of the Attorney General's Committee, said he disagreed with some things in the report but "for the most part...my views coincide with the majority position." He suggested a new agency to pass in advance on the legality of proposed mergers.

Prof. Walter Adams of Michigan State University and Prof. Louis B. Schwartz of the University of Pennsylvania, both of whom were members of the Attorney General's Committee and filed dissenting statements, attacked the report. Adams said the majority was afraid to recommend breaking up big corporations which had absorbed weaker competitors. Schwartz said the group recommended interpretations of existing law that "would seriously undermine" antitrust enforcement.

April 28 -- George J. Burger of the National Federation of Independent Business said there was nothing in the report "that calls for vigorous enforcement of the antitrust laws." He opposed a recommendation that fair trade laws be repealed, and urged the Senate Committee to investigate the Federal Trade Commission's administration of antitrust laws.

Spokesmen for the U.S. Wholesale Grocers Association and the National Food Brokers Association opposed suggested changes in antitrust laws which would limit brokerage fees to "services rendered." They said this would enable a manufacturer to give favored customers unfair advantages.

April 29 -- Opposition to sections of the report came from spokesmen for the National Candy Wholesalers, Inc., the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, Inc., National Association of Independent Tire Dealers, National Association of Retail Druggists, National Farmers Union, Cooperative League of the United States, and National Association of Retail Grocers.

William D. Snow of the Petroleum Retailers blamed a high rate of business failure among service station operators on price discrimination he said was permitted under Supreme Court and administrative interpretations of the antitrust laws.

Most witnesses agreed with Snow that a 1951 Supreme Court decision should be overruled by legislation. The decision held that a price cut made in good faith to meet a legal lower price of a competitor was a complete defense against prosecution for violation of the price discrimination provisions of the Robinson-Patman Act.

The Senate in August, 1951, passed a bill to reinforce the Supreme Court's decision, but a House Judiciary Subcommittee failed to report the measure. (See CQ Almanac, Vol. VII, 1951, pp. 487ff.)

REPORT STUDIED BY SECOND GROUP

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 3 on the report of the National Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws.

TESTIMONY -- Subcommittee Chairman Harley M. Kilgore (D W. Va.), in an opening statement, said he was "concerned with the growing number of mergers" and indicated this would play a major part in the Subcommittee's investigation.

Assistant Attorney General Barnes said the Justice Department was looking into the possibility of substitutes for the "fair trade" laws which the report recommended repealing. He said the Justice Department had as yet adopted no policy concerning the recommendations.

Prof. Milton Handler of Columbia University, a member of the Attorney General's Committee, said no amendment to the fundamental structure of the antitrust laws was needed.

Prof. Eugene V. Rostow of Yale University, also a member of the Committee, advocated treaties to "protect the American economy against foreign cartels."

Another member, Wendell Berge, a former Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division, called the report excellent, and said drastic changes in the basic antitrust laws would be upsetting to business.

Mergers Analyzed

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 1-July 1 on current antitrust problems and economic conditions, with particular emphasis on mergers.

TESTIMONY -- June 1 -- Chairman Edward F. Howrey of the Federal Trade Commission said he believed the recent mergers of smaller automobile companies had been "beneficial to our economy" and had increased the combined companies' ability to compete with the three biggest manufacturers.

Tax incentives were an important factor in business mergers, though not the major one. The chief incentive, he said, appeared to be the desire of a company to gain new capacity for itself without creating additional capacity in its field.

Federal Trade Commissioner John W. Gwynne suggested that corporations be required to keep the government advised from the beginning of any efforts to merge. He said "prompt and effective cooperation would...be much simpler than going through the unscrambling process it it should develop the acquisition violated the law." Currently, he added, no notice of intent was required and "many of the initial steps are often taken before the public or government know about it."

Howrey said there had been "very alarming mergers" among banks, and Congress should bring them under the anti-merger law. He also cited bank mergers as an "outstanding example" of merger types which had an anti-competitive effect.

June 2 -- Prof. M. A. Adelman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology said "hostility to bigness must in practice become a serious deterrent to growth and to rivalry." Adelman said he hoped the Robinson-Patman Act would be used where the "seller unquestionably had great market power...and used it to discriminate in price and hamper the growth of new competition."

Prof. Carl Kaysen of Harvard University said it might be desirable to extend antitrust laws to cover "non-competitive situations" whether or not illegal conduct was involved.

CAR COMPANY PRACTICES PROBED

June 7 -- Assistant Attorney General Barnes said the government was checking for possible antitrust practices in the automotive industry. Under investigation, he disclosed, was bus production by General Motors Corp., contracts between the Ford Motor Co. and its dealers, and local dealer associations, many of which had been accused of price-fixing.

He said recent mergers in the auto industry had increased the strength of the small firms and "created far more competition than it eliminated." He asked for legislation to compel companies proposing to merge to file "notice of intent" in advance with the Justice Department and the FTC.

June 8 -- L.L. Colbert, Chrysler Corp. president, said competition was so keen in the automotive industry "there is no such thing as an entrenched and unassailable position. No company is so deeply dug in that it lies beyond the reach of an able and determined competitor."

Recent mergers in the industry, he continued, "can be one of the most effective ways of stimulating competition." Because of competition, he said, cars today cost less, with adjustments for loss of the dollar's buying power, than they did 30 years ago, despite the many improvements made.

June 9 -- Jesse W. Markham, Princeton University professor and FTC consultant, said the growth of big business through absorption "should be checked by vigorous antitrust action."

Prof. Clare E. Griffin, University of Michigan, said he would not recommend a limit on the size of a company because that would kill its incentive to grow and to compete. Prof J. Fred Weston, University of California, said he saw no cause for alarm in recent mergers.

June 10 -- George W. Romney, president, American Motors, testified.

STEEL MERGER DEFENDED

June 14 -- Officials of Bethlehem Steel Corp. and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. defended their plans to merge. Arthur B. Homer, president of Bethlehem, said the merger would stimulate competition, not lessen it. George McCuskey, Youngstown vice president, said his company was convinced the merger would "result in substantially increasing competition."

June 15 -- Edgar F. Kaiser, president of Kaiser Motors Corp., said he did not believe the size of automobile companies should be limited "as long as you have the competition that exists today." He said he believed there was "extreme competition between the Big Three (General Motors, Chrysler, and Ford). I believe this is healthy and in the public interest -- good vehicles at a low price." Kaiser added that he did not think the independents' share of the auto business was large enough to have much effect on price.

June 16 -- Robert R. Nathan, a consulting economist, said the problem of large corporations and their effect on the market "is the most unmanageable aspect of our economy... The increasing trend toward concentration of economic authority and economic decision through concentrated control of great aggregations of capital endangers both the economic and political bases of our society."

June 23 -- Lewis D. Crusoe, executive vice president, Ford Motor Co., said the automobile market was large enough and promising enough to allow any producer to achieve success if he could produce a car the public wanted. He opposed limiting the size of automobile companies or their share of the total market on grounds it would "deprive the consumer of the principal benefits of our free economic system."

June 24 -- Chairman William McChesney Martin, Jr., of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors recommended an extension of antitrust laws to cover all bank mergers. He noted an increasing trend in bank mergers, rising from 100 in 1952 to 207 in 1954. He emphasized that mergers were not necessarily evil, and were authorized by some laws.

Ray M. Gidney, U.S. Comptroller of the Currency, said his agency was not yet ready with any recommendations regarding bank mergers. He added that "the effect of mergers upon which we have had to pass has been to make for more rather than less competition."

TEXTILE COMPETITION DEBATED

June 29 -- J. Spencer Love of Burlington Industries, textile manufacturers, said no one company produced more than 2 or 3 percent of U.S. textiles. He added: "There is not today and there cannot conceivably arise for years to come any important concentration of power with any one company which can seriously reduce either the present terrific competition or opportunities for newcomers to provide further competition."

Solomon Barkin, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), contended that "colossal textile corporations," Burlington among them, "dominate price and production practices within the industry" to such an extent that Congress should call a halt.

He said big textile companies, taking over weaker rivals by merger, were "bringing ruin in their wake." He added they profit from "tax law" loopholes, were out "to crush organized labor," and improved their positions by buying and sometimes closing weaker competing plants.

June 30 -- James J. Nance, president of Studebaker-Packard Corp., said "there is no monopoly in the automobile business," and the "market is so huge that a company securing only a relatively small percent of the total business can operate profitably and soundly, assuming that its whole operations are basically efficient."

The Studebaker-Packard combination, he continued, "does not solve all the problems which confronted the separate businesses or assure us an untroubled road to prosperity. (It) does give us substantially increased strength with which to meet competition and to better serve the public." A "substantial" reason for the merger, Vance said, was "the recapture of what we consider to be a fair and reasonable share of defense business."

Chairman Kilgore commended firms which appeared before the Subcommittee. He called it "regrettable" that General Motors -- "one of the largest corporate entities in the nation" -- had "declined the invitation to testify." (GM spokesmen appeared at hearings that began Nov. 8. See below.)

July 1 -- The Subcommittee heard testimony from Theodore G. Montague, president, the Borden Co.

Distribution Practices

HEARINGS RESUMED -- Aug. 23-Sept. 2 on business practices in the field of distribution.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 23 -- Kilgore said the hearings would seek to resolve differences of interpretation in the Robinson-Patman Act and the Sherman Antitrust Act.

FTC economist Jesse Markham said the Robinson-Patman Act resulted, in some cases, in higher prices to the consumer. The law prevents big distributors from passing on to consumers the economies gained from their more efficient marketing facilities, Markham added.

A Connecticut College economist, Joel B. Dirlam, contended the Act, while limiting the range of price discounts to customers, had other "offsetting advantages."

Northwestern University economist Richard Heflebower said price-fixing laws were a "delusion." "I see no reason why consumers should be asked to subsidize retailers...unable or unwilling to meet competition," he added.

Aug. 24 -- A Michigan State University economist, Walter Adams, said Attorney General Brownell permitted a possible monopoly when he approved the sale of government butyl rubber plants to Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. (See p. 429.) It was "doubletalk," Adams added, when Brownell said the sale served to "promote competition." Adams said Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield acted "in truly monopolistic fashion" in refusing airmail contracts to non-scheduled airlines, even though they submitted the lowest bids.

Adams also criticized the Civil Aeronautics Board, said it "strangled competition" in favor of the "grandfather" lines. He also attacked the CAB decision not to renew the license of non-scheduled North American Airlines. Adams said the trucking industry was less competitive than it could be, and blamed excessive regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission for this condition.

George J. Burger of the National Federation of Independent Business praised the Robinson-Patman Act and called for stricter enforcement of its provisions by the FTC. Burger said current entorcement procedures were inadequate. He called for legislation to finance stronger policing by the FTC and to provide for penalties of $5,000 a day against firms which do not comply with FTC orders.

Aug. 25 -- L. A. Watson, a Minneapolis, Minn., manufacturer of hearing aids, criticized an FTC ruling that outlawed exclusive dealerships in his industry. He called for an "urgent and desperately needed rule of reason" in interpreting antitrust laws. Samuel A. McCain, counsel for the Corn Products Refining Co. of New York, defended the Robinson-Patman Act on grounds its provisions against price discrimination benefited large business, small business, and the general public.

Aug. 26 -- George H. Frates, National Association of Retail Druggists, and William J. Dixon, State Pharmaceutical Association of W. Va., testified.

LAWS CRITICIZED

Aug. 30 -- William Simon of the Empire State Petroleum Association said "fair trade" laws work at cross purposes with other antitrust laws and tend "to keep all prices high." He said the apparent aim of the Robinson-Patman Act was to protect individual businessmen from "the normal effects of the very competition that the Sherman Antitrust Act aims at requiring."

Cyrus Austin, Rubberoid Co. of New York, said the law needed clarification by Congress. He said it should be amended to allow a manufacturer to meet the lower prices of a competitor and to extend the price cut benefits to other customers in the area "even though there may be some fringe competition between these customers and more distant customers who do not receive the reduction."

Paul Treen, Simplex Manufacturing Corp. of New Orleans, said the FTC moved too slowly to redress wrongs.

Aug. 31 -- Harold T. Halfpenny, National Standard Parts Association, said the three major automobile manufacturers "set and establish the price for almost every part and replacement" needed to repair cars and trucks while the FTC "stands idly by." He said Congress should clarify the law.

Alfred R. Brenholts, Columbus, Ohio, spark plug manufacturer, said he suspected three rivals in his industry were violating FTC orders to cease allegedly unfair trade practices.

Sept. 1 -- George H. Souther of the Electric Auto-Lite Co. defended his company's pricing practices. He said the Robinson-Patman Act was vaguely worded. If the courts and others "could know with certainty what the law means, it would become infinitely more palatable to businessmen," he added.

Lyman Sherwood, Independent Grocers Alliance, and Neil A. Riley, Association of Independent Food Dealers of America, contended the FTC had misconstrued Congressional intent in ruling that cooperative store groups such as IGA legally may not provide their own brokerage services. They said that originally the provision was intended to prevent chain stores from gaining unfair competitive advantage by receiving concealed discounts disguised as brokerage fees.

GROCERS OPPOSE CHANGES

Sept. 2 -- R.H. Rowe of the U.S. Wholesale Grocers Association said a liberalization of Robinson-Patman prohibitions would give grocery chains and other mass buyers "the whip hand" over smaller competitors.

Sherwood and Riley urged that the Robinson-Patman Act be continued. They said a change in the Act would favor big chains, which "have been able to circumvent the restriction...by acquiring their own manufacturing facilities and by purchasing the entire output of other manufacturers."

Henry Bison, Jr., National Association of Retail Grocers, backed the wholesalers' stand. He said the proposed change would constitute "abusive price discrimination," ultimately hurting consumers by producing monopolies in the food distributing industry.

Chairman Kilgore said some clarifying amendments in the Robinson-Patman Act apparently were needed. Chief counsel Joseph W. Burns said testimony "shows conclusively that it is not a well-written law...."

Antitrust Laws and Foreign Trade

HEARINGS -- Sept. 13-15 on the application of antitrust laws to foreign trade and investments.

TESTIMONY -- Sept. 13 -- David C. Murchison, former FTC consultant, opposed a proposed United Nations agreement designed to curb cartels and other restrictive business practices in international trade. Under the proposed agreement, Murchison said, any country could engage in monopolistic practices legal under its own laws. The agreement would apply curbs "only to countries having antitrust laws and enforcement programs," he added. Murchison said the agreement also would "discriminate in favor of state-owned or operated enterprises" competing with private firms in international trade.

Sigmund Timberg, secretary of the UN committee which drew up the treaty, said it would obligate participating governments to implement anti-monopolistic measures recommended by an international body set up under the pact. Timberg said the State Department in the spring of 1955 withdrew American support from the UN committee's proposals, holding that other nations had much lower antitrust standards than the U.S., thus making the treaty unworkable.

Earl W. Kintner, FTC general counsel, said the Commission was studying activities of every export association formed under the Webb-Pomerene Act of 1918. The Act, designed to help American firms compete with European cartels, exempted from antitrust laws associations set up for the sole purpose of engaging in export trade.

Sept. 14 -- Representatives of the National Foreign Trade Council urged Congress to clarify antitrust laws as they applied to foreign trade and investment activities. Charles R. Carroll said criminal penalties should not be used against any American company "on the basis of acts or omissions outside the boundaries of the United States."

Sept. 15 -- Marshall M. Smith, deputy Assistant Secretary of Commerce for International Affairs, said the application of antitrust laws to foreign commerce needed clarification. He said a survey by his department showed that U.S. business firms considered other factors to be more important deterrents to investment abroad than uncertainty surrounding the antitrust laws, however.

Thorsten V. Kalijarvi, deputy Assistant Secretary of State, said he thought the proposed UN agreement was not feasible, but that other, less formal means existed for developing and expanding a freer world trade.

Power Merger Investigated

HEARINGS -- Sept. 21-23 on a merger of the Washington Water Power Co. and the Puget Sound Light and Power Co.

TESTIMONY -- Sept. 21 -- Walter J. Gruber of Union Securities Corp., New York, denied his firm maneuvered for a merger of the two northwest power utilities in order to obtain new underwriting business for itself. A stockholders committee, of which Gruber's firm was a member, said it represented interests of stockholders of Puget Sound Light and Power Co. It was formed in 1952 to work for a merger of the Puget Sound Co. and Washington Water Power Co. Gruber said neither he nor his firm owned stock in Puget Sound Co. at that time, although his firm owned blocks of the stock from time to time.

Alfred Berman of Puget Sound Co. said the investment houses had no right to claim they spoke for stockholders when they only sold shares to those persons.

Frank McLaughlin, Puget Sound Co. president, in a letter produced by the Subcommittee, said two stockholders committee members were large firms which "have placed large securities issues for Washington Water Power." He wrote that his company "believes" they wanted to "take over Puget's properties and customers under the guise of merger...."

Acting Subcommittee Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) said the stockholders committee's chief purpose was "to lay the groundwork for a very good operation in the interest of the investment houses."

Chandler Hovey, Jr., of White, Weld and Co. said his firm held blocks of Puget Sound Co. stock at various times to "maintain a market" for that security. O'Mahoney said this appeared to be different from the position of a "bona fide" stockholder.

Hovey said the stockholders committee July 20 wrote stockholders to urge their support for the proposed merger. The letter was withdrawn after the Securities and Exchange Commission advised the group that it was, in effect, soliciting proxies to be used in voting the merger.

Hovey said the committee "made all kinds of efforts to indicate" the letter was not a proxy letter and that his firm "honestly believed" it was doing a service to its customers in promoting the merger. He said on July 20 neither he nor his firm owned stock in the Puget Sound Co., although their names were on the letterhead of the stockholders committee.

O'Mahoney said he thought the committee had prepared "a very clever letter" that "tried to get around" SEC regulations.

INTERLOCKING CONNECTIONS CHARGED

Subcommittee counsel Burns said several firms on the stockholders committee "appear to have close banking relationships with Electric Bond and Share Co. and Washington Water Power Co." Washington Water Power was a former member of the holding system of Electric Bond and Share, a subsidiary of which was Ebasco Services, Inc. Burns said Ebasco had "a substantial and continuing interest" in promoting the merger of the two Washington utilities.

Sept. 22 -- Jacob Bleibtreu of the New York investment firm of Abraham and Co., identified a December, 1953, letter by Puget president McLaughlin. Bleibtreu's firm served on the stockholders committee for Puget Sound.

McLaughlin said a proxy fight conducted by the stockholders committee "will do more to wreck the company and destroy private power in western Washington than public power itself has been able to do." Bleibtreu said his company held no Puget stock at the time of the July 20 letter from the stockholders committee to the stockholders. But he said his firm had owned large blocs of stock previously and its customers still did.

Richard S. Nye of Georgeson and Co., New York, testified on arrangements for his firm to handle the drive to persuade Puget stockholders to approve the merger.

EBASCO'S ROLE DEFENDED

William E. Parrott, general consultant for Ebasco Services, Inc., said he could remember very little he had done in behalf of the merger. He said he became secretary of Pacific Northwest Power Co. in 1954 but that Ebasco did not assign him to this role. He said he received no pay in the new job but remained on Ebasco's payroll. Pacific Northwest was created by four private utility companies -- Washington Water Power, Montana Power, Pacific Power and Light, and Portland General Electric.

Sept. 23 -- George G. Walker, president of Electric Bond and Share Co. and chairman of its subsidiary, Ebasco Services, said his company had divested itself of all its electric utility holdings and was operating within the law.

Sen. O'Mahoney said Wall Street investment houses "secretly" were conducting a major campaign "against the legislative purposes of state and federal governments" on the public power issue.

General Motors' Role

HEARINGS -- Nov. 8 - Dec. 9 on the relation between General Motors Corp. and a trend toward monopoly.

TESTIMONY -- Nov. 8 -- Acting Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D Wyo.) said three economists invited to testify on a Brookings Institution report on General Motors they helped prepare a few years ago had refused on grounds of a "pledge of confidence" to Brookings and the company.

O'Mahoney said it appeared they feared "that the purpose of the Committee is somehow to institute anti-trust proceedings." He said it was not the Subcommittee's purpose "to institute a prosecution of General Motors." He urged legislation to require federal charters for corporations.

Corwin D. Edwards, former economist for the FTC and Justice Department, said no government agency currently was charged with keeping "an effective check on concentration" by consistently assembling statistics on the subject, although the rough data was available at the Census Bureau.

T.K. Quinn, a former vice president of the General Electric Corp., and author, said "General Motors is entirely too big." Quinn proposed a "maximum free enterprise bill" to limit the size of corporations and restore "economic freedom in many fields that are now practically closed." He suggested steeply graduated corporate income-tax rates.

LOCOMOTIVE COMPETITION

Nov. 9 -- William F. Lewis, vice president of Alco Products, Inc., GM's closest competitor in diesel locomotive manufacture, said government war orders gave GM a "tremendous" advantage in gaining top position in the field.

O'Mahoney read a letter from Robert D. Calkins, president of Brookings Institution, saying that the three economists who had refused to testify Nov. 8 were "free agents" and that Brookings was "imposing no inhibitions on them." Calkins said that to permit the three to testify on data given them in confidence by GM executives would be to jeopardize all research into corporate management.

V.H. Peterson, vice president of Fairbanks Morse and Co., another diesel manufacturer, said the sheer size and financial strength of GM "doesn't make it any easier to compete with them."

Peterson and Lewis said they could compete with GM and expect to obtain what they called a "reasonable" and a "significant" share of business.

Nov. 10 -- Harold L. Hamilton, retired GM vice president in charge of its Electromotive Division, said that in 1930 a company he owned turned to the idea of burning diesel fuel, but because it could not get capital to develop the idea, sold out to GM.

He denied earlier testimony that wartime government contracts gave GM its dominant position in railroad diesel engine manufacture. He also rejected the suggestion that GM used its position as a big railroad customer to boost its share of the diesel market.

Nov. 15 -- Ewart Harris, retired government anti-trust lawyer, reviewed the history of GM and E.I. duPont de Nemours and Co. relations. (The government had appealed to the Supreme Court a decision against its suit to force duPont to sell its GM stock. The government contended that duPont bought GM stock in order to assure a market for its automotive products.)

William C. Dixon, another retired antitrust lawyer, said convicting GM and other corporations of conspiracy to monopolize sales of buses and supplies to local transit systems had not improved competition in that field.

Nov. 16 -- Frank R. Fageol of the Twin City Coach Co., Kent, Ohio, said GM had boosted its share of the bus market from 20 to 80 percent by investing in bus companies and "using its great economic powers...to influence banks." He said competitors had been forced out of the field despite the successful antitrust action against GM's bus division.

WILSON ORDER CITED

Thomas P. Butler of the Flxible Co., Loudonville, Ohio, showed a 1952 memorandum from the firm's vice president which said: "I have just received a telephone call from the Detroit office (of the Great Lakes Diesel Co., a dealer in GM engines), stating that orders had come down directly from Mr. Wilson...that we were not to deliver any engines to the Flxible Company because they were competitors of ours." O'Mahoney said Mr. Wilson was Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, then president of GM.

Nov. 17 -- Raymond Q. Armington said that after GM, in 1953, bought the Euclid Road Machinery Co. of Cleveland, which he headed, Euclid cut its purchases of diesel engines from an independent manufacturer and designed its new model around GM engines. Armington, currently head of the GM Euclid division, said the merger had enabled his company to survive by furnishing required capital and research.

O'Mahoney said the transaction fit "a pattern" of buying out former customers and becoming the major producer in the field.

Nov. 18 -- The Federal Trade Commission said it was investigating whether GM violated a 1941 FTC order forbidding the corporation to dictate policy to its parts suppliers.

Donald P. MacDonald, FTC attorney, said "scattered complaints" indicated GM was forcing its dealers to deal exclusively in GM parts. He said it would be "some time" before the FTC report was ready.

Nov. 21 -- Harold T. Halfpenny of Chicago, counsel for National Standard Parts Association, said GM had raised prices on parts not subject to substantial competition. Other parts dealers' representatives said GM charged its car dealers and independent jobbers the same price for parts, thereby robbing the jobbers of their new-car dealer market.

Halfpenny said the nation must decide whether to limit "GM and the other major vehicle manufacturers to the manufacture and sale of automotive vehicles and trucks, leaving the manufacture and distribution of replacement parts...to the independent service industry."

G. C. Morris, executive director of the Automotive Wholesalers of Texas, said GM was using "an economic gun-in-the-stomach" approach to turn its auto agencies into parts wholesalers.

Nov. 22 -- E. L. Schofield, president of an auto heater firm, said his sales declined drastically in 1955 because "GM zone and district managers were refusing to approve orders for 1955 Chevrolet cars without factory-installed heaters." He said GM dealers involved were afraid to talk.

Nov. 23 -- O'Mahoney said hearings to date had produced evidence that GM "took over the whole market" for railroad diesels after buying two small companies, bought control of transit companies so they could sell them GM buses, was currently "following the same pattern" in the earth moving equipment field, and was cutting heavily into the auto parts market of independent jobbers.

Nov. 28 -- Reginald J. Holzer of the Auto Repair Executives Associates, Chicago, said there was a "general feeling among our members that the giant manufacturers...are putting the squeeze on the independent shops." He said GM pressured its insurees to have repairs done by GM dealers.

O'Mahoney said auto companies could borrow money at interest rates only slightly above what the federal government paid for its borrowed funds. "It is clear that we are face to face with a concentration of economic power that is equal to the government itself," he said.

DEALERS' PROBLEMS AIRED

Holmes Baldridge, formerly with the Justice Department Antitrust Division, said GM and its financing arm, General Motors Acceptance Corp., should be divorced. He said there "always will be coercion" of dealers to finance through GMAC as long as the two units were affiliated.

Nov. 29 -- Executive Vice President Frederick J. Bell of the National Automobile Dealers Association said retail car dealers were far from independent businessmen. "Because of factory pressure, threat, and coercion, dealers engage in practices that are unwise and contrary to their business judgment," he said.

Nov. 30 -- J. Ed Travis, Jr., a Buick dealer in St. Charles, Mo., for 35 years, said he lost his franchise in 1955 because he refused to cut prices on new cars and make up the profit on repair jobs. GM "wanted us to pay all our expenses out of service and then give their autos away," he said.

Dec. 1 -- Lee C. Anderson of Lake Orion, Mich., said GM cancelled his three auto franchises after he made a speech condemning cut-rate sales of cars to factory employees and motor executives.

GM DEFENDS PRACTICES

Dec. 2 -- GM President Harlow H. Curtice said GM's growth was due to constant striving for improvement, not unfair practices. He said dealers' 1955 net profits before taxes were 476 percent more than in 1940.

GM Board Chairman Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., said GM had had "no policy of expansion just for the sake of expanding." Growth had been principally "within ourselves," he said, rather than through acquiring outside companies.

Dec. 6 -- Curtice said GM was extending its one-year dealer franchises to five years. He said the longer sales agreement had been adopted to counteract "possible damage to GM good will" because of "misleading statements" to the Subcommittee.

Dec. 7 -- Curtice said Justice Department antitrust rulings made it impossible for GM to deal with dealer problems of "bootlegging" (quick sales of new cars to other dealers at cut prices) and competition in the same geographical area.

Dec. 8 -- William F. Hufstader, GM vice president in charge of distribution, said "GM categorically denies that it coerces its dealers either directly or indirectly to purchase GM replacement parts from it."

Sen. Francis Case (R S.D.) suggested creating an impartial board of representatives of various factories and dealers to review dealer complaints.

Dec. 9 -- Curtice, declaring "size as such doesn't make the difference" between corporations, said separation of GM's divisions would result in "staggering" problems, and loss of efficiency.

Charles G. Stradella, president of General Motors Acceptance Corp., GM's financing arm, said its outstanding auto credit was not too large. He said losses in 1955 were under those of the previous two years.

Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) said a questionnaire sent to all auto dealers showed 6,047 of 8,276 GM dealers wanted federal legislation on automobile selling.

C. R. Osborn, GM vice president, said GM's success in railroad diesels was partly due to competitors' reluctance to abandon steam engines.

Bell, of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, said manufacturers and dealers should confer on how to develop better factory-dealer relationships.

House

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary, Antitrust Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 10-June 17 on major antitrust problems.

TESTIMONY -- May 10 -- Sen. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn.) said the report of the Attorney General's Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws was "a gigantic brief for the non-enforcement of the antitrust laws."

May 11 -- Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) said the government and executive agencies had fostered a trend toward monopoly in big business by giving defense contracts to big companies. Reuss said the report "fails to recognize" that the Atomic Energy Commission was "giving preference" to large electric utility companies. Sen. O'Mahoney said the Civil Aeronautics Board was "promoting monopoly" in the airline industry.

May 12 -- Assistant Attorney General Barnes urged Congress to "consider" repeal of retail price maintenance laws as a consumer protection step. Barnes also urged extension of antitrust laws to cover bank mergers, and enactment of legislation to compel businessmen to open their books to the government in civil antitrust suits.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- The Justice Department refused, on security grounds, to give the Committee terms of an advisory antitrust opinion covering an eight-company international oil agreement to produce and market Iranian oil.

TESTIMONY -- May 13 -- Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) urged the Subcommittee to "make a fresh study of our business world to:

"Determine the extent of competition and monopoly...

"See that existing antitrust laws are enforced with great vigor...

"Strengthen the antitrust laws where loopholes... have made them ineffective..."

Douglas said corporations planning a merger should be required to obtain the consent of the Justice Department and to prove the proposed "mergers would actively promote competition and not restrict it."

Earnes said the Justice Department was studying antitrust aspects of newspaper mergers which had left some cities with a single paper. Certain aspects of the automobile industry also were under investigation, he said.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S REPORT CRITICIZED

May 16 -- Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) attacked the report of the Attorney General's committee for what he said was its failure to consider monopoly problems affecting public utility regulation. He also said there was a need for greater "surveillance" of the Federal Power Commission and the Civil Aeronautics Board. The CAB, he said, had been helping keep small independent air carriers out of competition against the large trunk lines. Morse said "monopoly is the greatest drag on aviation since gravity."

A Chicago attorney, Thomas C. McConnell, charged that the report of the Attorney General's committee was cited against his client during an antitrust patent proceeding in June, 1954, nine months before the report was made public. (McConnell retracted his charges in a May 23 letter to the Subcommittee.)

May 17 -- Ray M. Gidney, U.S. comptroller of the currency, said recent bank mergers increased rather than reduced competition and revitalized the banking system. He said that since 1950, 494 banks with total resources of more than $13.4 billion had been absorbed by national banks. He added that the 494 banks represented "less than 3.5 percent of the total number of banks operating today" and that "credit facilities are more readily available to borrowers, large and small, than ever before."

Prof. Adolf A. Berle, Jr., of Columbia University said trends toward giant corporations in growing fields such as electronics and aviation might present new problems that existing antitrust laws would be unable to cope with.

May 18 -- Spokesmen for retail grocers, food brokers and independent business attacked the report of the Attorney General's committee. They said small businessmen would be "destroyed" under the committee's recommendation for the repeal of fair trade laws and the easing of prohibitions against discriminatory pricing and discount practices.

George J. Burger, National Federation of Independent Business, also called for a "thorough investigation" of the way in which the Federal Trade Commission enforces the antitrust laws. Others condemning sections of the report included spokesmen for the National Food Brokers Association and National Association of Retail Grocers.

GAS STATION OWNERS "COERCED"

May 23 -- William Snow, National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, Inc., said independent service station operators were subject to "coercion" through pricing practices of major oil companies. Snow said in the past two years the FTC had taken no action to alleviate the problem.

Benjamin Werne, United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, said proposals to end "fair trade" laws would hurt produce dealers and "be extremely damaging to our entire economy" if carried out.

May 25 -- Hoyt Steele, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., urged legislation to make "monopolistic abuses" of labor unions subject to federal antitrust laws. He said existing laws impose restrictions on business but "permit flagrant trade restraints and other power abuses by unions, and fail to distinguish them effectively from legitimate union activities."

June 6 -- Earl Bunting, National Association of Manufacturers, said government-imposed "arbitrary limits" on business growth "tend to suppress rather than stimulate competition." He said "each company should be free to act on its own judgment as to what size of enterprise is likely to be most suitable for serving customers' needs -- and to suffer the consequences if its judgment is wrong. Customers will always make sounder decisions than government bureaus."

Criticizing actions of industry-wide labor organizations, Bunting said the government should recognize that monopolistic practices, whether by employers or unions, "are contrary to the public interest and should be subject to statutory regulation." Exemption of labor unions from antitrust regulation "at least in part has resulted in a concentration of economic power unequaled in any other segment of our economy," he said.

June 7 -- Prof. S. Chesterfield Oppenheim of the University of Michigan, co-chairman of the Attorney General's committee, denied that the group had been "packed" with corporation lawyers and was bent on "emasculating" U.S. antitrust laws.

He said dissenting members of the committee were not denied the right to have their dissents printed in the report, but only to have them printed in full. However, he added, the "tenor" of their opinions was incorporated in the report, and in some places exact language was used.

June 8 -- George F. Mooney, N.Y. state bank superintendent, said he would "unhesitatingly withhold approval" of any proposed bank merger which might substantially lessen competition or tend to monopoly. "Competition in banking is keen," he said.

Robert R. Nathan of Americans for Democratic Action said an increasing trend toward huge industrial and business mergers could endanger the political freedom of Americans. One corporation, he said, had about the same annual income as the 48 states, and added: "A handful of corporate directors and managers can, purely on the basis of business judgment, exert as great or even greater influence than the government itself."

SUGGESTIONS BY FEDERAL RESERVE

June 13 -- Chairman William McChesney Martin, Jr., of the Federal Reserve Board recommended that all banking mergers and consolidations be brought under the jurisdiction of the Clayton Antitrust Act, all authority for enforcing antitrust laws over banking be lodged with the Attorney General, prior government approval be required for all mergers and consolidations, and mergers tending to foster monopoly be permitted when they were in the public interest.

Martin said that from 1950-54 there was a national decrease of 598 banks through mergers, consolidations, and absorptions. Of the banks absorbed, 153 had total assets of less than $10 million, 88 had assets of $10 million to $50 million, and 33 had assets of more than $50 million.

Chairman H. Earl Cook of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said he would not favor extending the Clayton Act to banks unless supervising agencies were allowed to sanction some mergers which might be in the public interest even though they tended to create a monopoly or to lessen competition.

Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO, opposed suggestions that labor unions be included under antitrust laws. He said "we do not condone collusive practices aimed at throttling the competitive labor market. We fear, however, that (the recommendations) will be used by anti-labor elements as a springboard to interfere with the basic rights of labor and to alter fundamentally our national labor policy."

June 14 -- Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corp. of Pittsburgh, said industrial concerns "are growing bigger and will continue to grow bigger."

June 15 -- FTC Chairman Edward F. Howrey said the FTC was investigating complaints of price discrimination and alleged misleading practices involving Chevrolet automobile parts manufactured by General Motors. He also said a study might be launched into the "seemingly wide disparities" in prices charged for antibiotic medicines.

June 17 -- The American Fair Trade Council "deplored and protested" suggestions that "fair trade" laws be repealed. John W. Anderson, council president said "fair trade involves resale price maintenance. If it involves price fixing, it is not illegal price fixing, because it does not occur between ostensible competitors."

A spokesman for the Air Transport Association of America said there was more competition among scheduled airlines than in any other form of scheduled carrier transportation. He said non-scheduled airlines wanted just enough "freedom of entry" to get their own coveted route awards. Once it had a route, he continued, the non-scheduled line wanted to "let the door close behind" it and restrict others from getting the route.

Assistant Attorney General Barnes said the government expected to complete within a year its preparations to bring to trial five major U.S. oil companies on charges they sought to control world oil production. Another case involving monopoly charges against oil companies in the Pacific states area also might be ready within a year, he added.

Robinson-Patman Act Hearings

COMMITTEE -- House Select Small Business.

HEARINGS -- Oct. 31-Nov. 17 on enforcement of antitrust laws, particularly the Robinson-Patman Act.

TESTIMONY -- Oct. 31 -- Thurman Arnold, former assistant Attorney General, said the Robinson-Patman Act was "absolutely essential" to prevent monopolization in the nation's distribution system. He said he got the impression from the report by the Attorney General's Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws that the Justice Department "might go easy on enforcement" of the Robinson-Patman Act.

Angus McDonald, National Farmers Union, said the Act had been administered by the Federal Trade Commission in recent years in such a way as to strengthen monopoly. He said the Act should be strengthened.

Nov. 1 -- William Simon, a member of the Attorney General's committee, said the Act should be interpreted to ban activities that lessen competition rather than to ban price cuts which injure a competitor.

Nov. 2 -- Prof. S. Chesterfield Oppenheim, co-chairman of the Attorney General's committee, defended the report as impartial. He said he resented accusations of bias.

Chairman Wright Patman (D Texas) termed "perfectly shocking" the Justice Department's action in sending copies of the report to federal judges prior to its general release. This, Patman said, amounted to "lobbying with our courts." He said the report "was gotten up and sent to the judges of the country with the implication that it represents the views of the Attorney General of the United States."

Nov. 3 -- Several independent bakers told of large chain bakeries offering grocers a two-week supply of bread free, or sometimes cash, to get their products on the shelf. "That is the type of competition which we as independent bakers, over a period of time, cannot match," R. Norman Johnson of Topeka, Kan., said.

Nov. 14 -- Walter Adams, Michigan State University economics professor, said the recommendations of the Attorney General's committee would leave the Robinson-Patman Act "completely emasculated."

Nov. 16 -- Assistant Attorney General Barnes said the Administration had approved six of the 12 recommendations made by the Attorney General's committee. Already approved by Congress were an extension of the Defense Production Act, an increase in antitrust penalties, a four year statute of limitations on private antitrust suits, and giving the government the right to sue for damages through antitrust violations. Awaiting action, he said, was legislation to permit the government to obtain corporate documents from antitrust defendants on demand, and to make treble damages discretionary with trial judges in private antitrust suits. Barnes said the Justice Department still was studying Committee recommendations for repeal of fair trade laws.

Nov. 17 -- Morton C. Mumma, president of the National Rifle Association, said he was "shocked" at the recent indictment of his group, its magazine, "The American Rifleman", and two other magazines for refusing advertising from cut-rate gunsight dealers. He called the action "an attempt to control our independent judgment," said the ads were refused because "they violated good sportsmanship and ethics."

36 Percent Closed

SECRET COMMITTEE MEETINGS DECLINE SLIGHTLY

Congressional committees barred the press and public from more than one-third of their meetings during 1955, according to a Congressional Quarterly study. But secrecy declined slightly from the 1954 level.

Committees and subcommittees met officially 2,941 times. They closed their doors 36 percent of the time. In 1954, 41 percent of the hearings and other meetings were held in secret. Nine of the active committees -- those that met more than 10 times -- closed more than half their 1955 sessions. No committee opened all its meetings.

Closed (executive) committee and subcommittee meetings, 1955: Senate, 34 percent; House, 35 percent; Joint, 72 percent; Average, 36 percent. Closed meetings, 1954: Senate, 39 percent; House, 43 percent; Joint, 58 percent; Average, 41 percent.

Figures for 1953 were not exactly comparable to figures for 1954 and 1955. Tabulations for the last two years had fewer gaps. Closed meetings, 1953: Senate, 39 percent; House, 28 percent; Joint 66 percent; Average, 34 percent. This tabulation indicates that fewer meetings were closed in 1953 than in either 1954 or 1955, but closed meetings were underestimated in 1953.

GROUND RULES

Periods covered -- Jan. 3-Aug. 3, 1953; Jan. 6-Aug. 20, 1954; Jan. 5-Aug. 2, 1955. Tabulations excluded:

- Meetings held when Congress was not in regular session.
- Meetings held outside Washington, D.C.
- Meetings of conference committees to reconcile conflicting Senate and House versions of bills.
- Informal meetings without official status.
- Meetings of the House Rules Committee to grant rules for floor consideration of legislation; Rules Committee meetings for other purposes were included.
- Meetings of the House Appropriations Committee.

Open meetings followed by closed meetings were counted twice -- once in each category. Joint meetings of two separate committees were counted twice -- once for each committee. Morning and afternoon meetings on the same day were counted only once if the committee covered the same subject in both sessions.

Secrecy figures are conservative. Conference committee meetings normally are closed. Meetings to grant rules are split about 50-50 between closed and open sessions. Nearly all House Appropriations Committee meetings are closed. Some committees decline to notify the Congressional Record -- which is supposed to list all committee meetings in the Daily Digest -- when they meet in executive session.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

Tabulations are based on reports of meetings in the Daily Digest, supplemented by unofficial sources. Unofficial reports of meetings were counted only if verified by the committees.

Pros and Cons

Defenders of secrecy contend that disclosure of military and foreign policy information may endanger national security. Even in other fields, they maintain, government efficiency may require privacy.

Opponents concede the necessity for some secrecy, but contend that the privilege is abused by those who want to cover up their mistakes. Effective democracy, they maintain, depends on informed public opinion.

The House Un-American Activities Committee was the only standing committee reporting no executive meetings during 1955. A Committee source confirmed unofficial reports that closed meetings were held. He declined to estimate the number. Since it would be unrealistic to count Un-American Activities Committee meetings as 100 percent open, CQ used question marks in its tabulation. (See table, p. 556.) Unreported executive sessions of other committees may have escaped CQ's attention.

House Appropriations Committee meetings are not reported in the Daily Digest. CQ learned from other sources that 325 meetings -- only two of them open -- were scheduled during 1955. The figures could not be verified, and some of the scheduled meetings probably were cancelled, so they were excluded from the tabulation. If House Appropriations Committee meetings were added to the verified figures, the percentage of closed meetings would rise:

House Committees -- 46 percent (instead of 35).
All Committees -- 42 percent (instead of 36).

Active committees -- those that met more than 10 times -- which closed more than half their 1955 meetings:

Senate -- Rules, 68 percent; Foreign Relations, 54 percent; Finance, 53 percent; Armed Services, 52 percent.

House -- House Administration, 86 percent; Foreign Affairs, 67 percent; Ways and Means, 56 percent.

Joint -- Atomic Energy, 77 percent; Economic Report, 52 percent.

Active committees which closed no more than one-fourth of their 1955 meetings:

Senate -- Small Business, 17 percent; Judiciary, 20 percent; Labor and Public Welfare, 24 percent.

House -- Interior and Insular Affairs, 16 percent; Small Business, 16 percent; Government Operations, 25 percent.

Section 133 (f) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 (PL 601, 79th Congress) governs closed and open hearings: "All hearings conducted by standing committees or their subcommittees shall be open to the public except executive sessions for marking up bills or for voting or where the committee by a majority vote orders an executive session." A House rule (H Res 151) adopted in 1955 requires investigative committees to receive in closed session any evidence or testimony they determine "may tend to defame, degrade, or incriminate any person...." (See p. 382.)
